THE COMING OF MAY.

The still sweet air breathes in prophetic tone,
In whisperings low, and many a gentle moan.
Young grasses leap with quick and joyous spring,
And o'er the earth their freshest odors fling;
The low-bowed crocuses, with murmurs say
To one another, "There's a sweeter day."
The golden sunshine, with its gladdening rays,
Calls down from mountain brooks with silver sprays.
The budding tree with joyous bird-song rings,
Like echoes from a thousand golden strings!
All nature smiles a welcome blythe and clear,
While May comes through the doorway of the year.

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22, 1891.

Men and brethren, aye and sisters too, you must prepare to fly. Not figuratively, but actually to float through the circumambient atmosphere, even as the proud American eagle, whose sharp scream has just curled the Italian monkey's tail with fear, does. This is not the dictum of a wild-eyed cross between a crank and a charlatan, but the calm statement of Professor S. P. Langley, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, to the National Academy of Sciences, now in session in this city, which may be spoken of as the censor of scientific thought in this country inasmuch as it is the only body of scientists officially recognized by the United States government. Prof. Langley's statement was made as the result of certain experiments in which he has for quite a while been engaged. He said that would pass out of the sphere of charlatanism and into the hands of engineers in a short time, and that he understood that Mr. Maxim, the inventor of the celebrated machine gun, was now making experiments in this line. "All aboard for the World's Fair by the aerial line," may be heard in '93.

Queer recollections were stirred up among some of our old inhabitants by the arrival yesterday afternoon of the remnants of the Sixth Massachusetts regiment which became famous on an April day in 1861 by reason of its being in the streets of Baltimore. They had just come from Baltimore, where they were awarded very different treatment from that meted out to them thirty years ago, and they are being right royally entertained here by one of our crack military organizations. Considerable regret is expressed because Lieut. Gov. Jones of New York, of "he pays the freight" notoriety, who was in '61 colonel of the regiment did not accompany them.

Mrs. Annie Besant, who lectured here this week on "Theosophy," narrowly escaped being a handsome woman. She has a most attractive face, and when she becomes interested, her eyes radiate intelligence that illumines it. Her hair is just sufficiently tinged with gray to give her a dignified appearance, and her voice is clear and pleasant to a marked degree. Those who expected, from her long association with the English atheist, Bradlaugh, to hear extremely radical views, were disappointed. She spoke without notes and without gesture, depending entirely upon the inflection of her voice to impress her strong points.

Well, well! some curious things happen here, and one of them was Justice L. Q. C. Lamar, of the United States supreme court making a semi-religious address to the Y. M. C. A. of Washington. Whoever extended that invitation certainly made a "bad break." When Mr. Lamar was in the United States Senate he enjoyed the in that body and the same reputation has followed him upon the bench. As example is always the strongest teacher, this reputation alone should have been sufficient to prevent the invitation being extended, to say nothing of weightier reasons connected with the private life of Justice Lamar not so many years ago in this city, which are well-known to hundreds of people.

The society ladies of Washington propose following the lead of their sisters in the other large cities in organizing a Woman's Club, which is to be to them what the already in existence are to their fathers, brothers and husbands. The new club is to be formally opened on the first of May, and although it is to be in rented quarters its appointments, including a cafe, are to be first-class in every particular.

Mrs. Walter Damrosch, nee Margaret Blaine, is to spend the summer with her parents here while her husband goes to Europe for an extended tour. This announcement at first caused much surprise and speculation, but there is a later whispered rumor which explains her not accompanying her young husband abroad. Still there are lots of girls who think, and say that he ought to have given up his trip and remained with his wife.

The coroner this week stumbled upon a scene which may be called without any idea or intention of parodying the miseries depicted in Salvation Army Booth's "In Darkest London." The coroner was notified that a child had died in a section of the city known as "the Island," without medical attendance, and upon going there he found in a room 12 by 14 feet eleven colored people and the dead child. The eleven people, including several females, were all sick, some of them very ill, and there was neither food, bed, furniture nor medicine in the room. The dead child was buried and the sick people were sent to a hospital. Verily one half of the world is ignorant of how the other half lives, and, according to a modern newspaper philosopher, "the other half" doesn't want it known.

WASHINGTON, April 28, 1891.

Col. L. L. Polk, president of the National Farmers' Alliance, who is in New York on an educational mission, has greatly pleased those interested in the growth of that organization. His success has been far beyond his anticipation, and one Alliance man with whom I had a talk was certain that the organization would soon in New York state and be in a position where it could dictate terms to the two political parties.

Senator Reagan's resignation was not a surprise here as it had been considered a probability for some time, but the appointment of Mr. Horace Chilton as his successor was not only a surprise but a decided disappointment to the Democrats, who had hoped to see the honor go to Mr. Mills. It must be admitted that these hopes were not altogether disinterested. Mr. Mills' removal from the Speakership contest would have been a relief to his friends as well as to his rivals.

SECRETARY BLAINE REFUSES TO TALK

for publication, but from several of his friends I learn that he was very much displeased that he should have been used by certain parties at the recent Republican League convention to belittle Mr. Harrison, his chief, and it adds to his displeasure to know that he can say nothing that will not be misconstrued. If he should say that he isn't a candidate and that he would not accept the nomination, he knows that he would be accused of declining something that had not been offered to him, therefore he contents himself with telling those who have a right to ask him that he is for the renomination of Mr. Harrison. It isn't for me to criticise Mr. Blaine's sincerity, but I will say that if Mr. Blaine really wishes Mr. Harrison to get the nomination, he will certainly get it.

The secret service officials of the treasury department have had their ingenuity severely taxed by the dangerous counterfeit and it is still as great a mystery as ever. The latest theory is that in some manner an impression in some soft metal, or wax, was taken from the genuine plate in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and that from that impression the plate was made from which the counterfeits are printed.

Secretary Foster has decided to give the holders of the $43,000,000 of 4 1-2 per cent. bonds now outstanding, nearly three-fourths of which are held by the treasury as security for national bank circulation, the option of having these redeemed between this and the date of maturity—September 1, next—or of having them run at the pleasure of the government with interest at 2 per cent. per annum. It will be remembered that in 1881 Secretary Windom did a similar thing with the 6 per cent. bonds maturing in that year, continuing them at 3 1-2 per cent. This action is regarded by many as a bit of favoritism toward the national banks, but it is claimed that it is to be done because the money will be needed and that it is not known yet whether the banks will care to keep their bonds at a reduced rate of interest. That is stuff. Not a bank will surrender their bonds until they are obliged to.

San Domingo has an agent here who is extremely anxious to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with us. He is authorized to give the United States a coaling station in the Samoan bay, and if the telegraphed news of our failure to secure a coaling station from Hayti be true, that may help wonderfully in his negotiations.

The count of the cash in the treasury consequent upon the induction of a new United States treasurer began this morning and will take all the time of about seventy-five employees for ten days or thereabouts.

WILLARD.

Trinity Parish Concert.

The concert given in aid of Trinity Parish last Friday evening in the lecture room of Union church was both artistically and financially successful, every seat being filled by the delighted audience. The following programme was admirably rendered by Miss Mabelle Monclair (Mrs. L. M. Squires) soprano; Mrs. L. J. Child, contralto; Miss Agnes Hyde, reader; Mr. James T. Hunt, violinist; Miss Frederika T. Hunt, pianist; Mr. J. H. Gutterson, accompanist:

Violin and piano, "Legend," Mr. J. T. Hunt and Miss F. T. Hunt; soprano solo, "Sognai," Miss Mabelle Monclair; reading, "She Would be an Actress," Miss Agnes Hyde: contralto solo, "Knowest Thou the Land," Mrs. L. J. Child; reading, Miss Hyde; solo, "Answer," Mrs. Child; violin and piano, Melodie, Mr. and Miss Hunt; solo, "Could I," Miss Monclair; reading, "How Dot Heard the Messiah," Miss Hyde, with arias by Mrs. Child.

All of these artists have been heard here recently with the exception of Miss Mabelle Monclair, whose sweet and well-trained voice was a pleasant surprise to the audience, which contained many old friends, glad to applaud her success.

Just before the last number was given Hon. Edward Avery stepped upon the platform and announced that the managers had given him a part which had been omitted from the programme. Then he proceeded to tell the story of Sir Walter Scott who when a boy at school could never get the first place in the class because the boy above him always answered every question correctly. Sir Walter noticed that he seemed to get inspiration from a button on his coat which he kept fingering when answering questions. Sir Walter secretly removed the button. The next day when a question was asked and the boy felt for his friend, it had disappeared. He hesitated and could not reply. Sir Walter answered correctly and took his place at the head of the class.

"Now," said Mr. Avery, "I am like Sir Walter's rival. I have here something to help me, and am so used to addressing somebody, a judge, jury or chairman, that I cannot do my duty without one. Will the Rev. Mr. Hyde step upon the platform and act as chairman?"

Those of the audience who were in the secret knew this was the preliminary to a very gratifying act, for after Mr. Hyde was seated Mr. Avery, in a few well chosen remarks, presented the reverend gentleman with a beautiful gold watch and guard which he took from a plush case that had been lying all the evening in a lovely basket of flowers, one of the decorations of the platform.

This gift was a surprise to Mr. Hyde, planned by one of the ladies of his parish, and was presented as an expression of affection and respect by his friends and parishioners in the village—including the pastors of the other churches—as well as former parishioners now living in other places. Mr. Hyde could only express his thanks briefly, as the affair having been kept a secret from him he had no opportunity for preparation, but his pleasure was shared by the whole audience who expressed their delight by loud and continued applause.

In addition to the watch Mr. Hyde was given a very pretty, decorated case, made by Miss Nellie Sulis, also a lovely plush cover made by Miss Belle Storer, which contained a book decorated by Miss Sulis, in which Mr. Frank White had skilfully copied the names of the donors of the watch, as well as a short letter and two poems written for the occasion. This collection of names cannot fail to be very pleasing to the recipient as showing that his work and worth are appreciated beyond the narrow limits of his parish.

Besides the great pleasure afforded by this unique affair, a handsome sum will be netted for the treasury of the parish, and many thanks are due to the successful lady manager.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with so much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly, L. L. GORSUCH, M. D., Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally. F. J. Cheney & Co., props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75 cents.

MARGUERY'S LETTER.

BOSTON, April 30, 1891.

What is Theosophy? Do you give it up? Well, so did I when asked the question by a pretty little woman, editor of a bright household paper. And as I knew no one who did know I consulted my Worcester Unabridged for some information on this occult science or theology, whichever it may be, but for once the venerable lexicographer failed in his duty, for theosophy he defines as the belief of theosophists, while a theosophist himself (or herself) is one who believes in direct inspiration from God. So you see I didn't get very far.

But why this sudden diving into the unknown? Because we had just met a famous English woman, this Annie Besant, who had been sent as a delegate from the English Theosophical Societies to attend the convention which has been held in Boston this week.

Mrs. Besant has, alas! a history. I say alas! from like natures, blessed are the women who have none.

Married at an early age to a clergyman of the Church of England, she found as she grew older, and the rather remarkable powers of her mind developed, that she could not accept the religious tenets he believed, and so she became what is called a Free-Thinker. Her husband, who seems to have lacked the tender spirit of christianity that gives life to the letter of a theology which otherwise killeth, undertook to assert his mortal rights—and the laws of England give to men greater liberties in this respect than here—and compel her to his own way of belief and thought. The end of it all was a legal separation—divorces are not easily obtained there—and a very disgraceful suit for the custody of a young child.

Imagine such a case here, where the father claims a child on account of a difference in theological opinions, and a jury sustains him!

I think such a jury would be forever covered with obloquy, and such a clergyman speedily unfrocked. Yet this was Mrs. Besant's case, and she was forced to plead her own cause before a judge who happened to be of Hebrew faith; and even he was moved to pity for the mother thus deprived of her child. And in all the length and breadth of England who do you suppose was the only woman to take Mrs. Besant by the hand and sympathize with her as she came forth from that court-room her direct right wrested from her by the hands of an unjust and prejudiced jury? An American woman! But though Mrs. Besant has given up wife and motherhood, she has done and is doing a great work for humanity. Especially are her efforts directed to the elevating and material benefit of working-women. I doubt if we have in our largest cities anything approaching the degradation or oppression of the lower working classes in London.

Down into these slums this woman went, seeking to save what would otherwise be lost. Bringing their wrongs before the public through a little paper she edited—for the great journals forced prosecution for libel if they uncovered their evils—and presenting petition after petition to Parliament for better laws regulating the responsibilities and the powers of employers. Seeing sights and hearing sounds from which a woman of her refinement must have shrunk with horror, but all the time working for the elevation and benefit of her sex. More recently she has looked into this old Eastern belief in theosophy and is now an ardent disciple thereof.

I heard her give an informal talk to a group of interested journalists the other day, and could not help thinking the severest critic must be impressed with her earnestness and charmed with her manner. Especially grateful to her sex were the words she spoke in regard to woman's work on the newspapers of the day. Reminding women that the past experiences of private life had taught patience, self-abnegation and responsibility, all virtues to be fully exercised in journalistic work. Also what a power were written words; going into the homes of hundreds of people, and never lost as is the spoken phrase.

She alluded only slightly to her belief in theosophy, but she did say as they believed the misery of the present was the outcome of the sin and selfishness of the past, so all should strive to improve the present that the future state of society might be glorious.

By the way, a word in passing as to the pronunciation of Mrs. Besant's name. I, like many others, had thought it was spoken as spelled, with the accent on the last syllable, and like the novelist Walter Besant's. But Mrs. Besant says her name rhymes with the word pleasant, and so differs from her distinguished brother-in-law. I have heard this gentleman repudiates the connection and that Mrs. Besant's name is anathema in his ears. Now from reading his books one would take him for a social reformer and free-thinker also, and one cannot help wondering he should ignore so valuable an allie in philanthropic work as this lady I here described. I cannot help thinking that with all his ability Mr. Besant must possess a slight touch of jealousy, and perhaps feels that one reformer in the family is enough, and that not even in charitable work can he be aided by a woman!

Since my friend asked me the conundrum with which I have commenced my letter, I have learned that one of the doctrines of theosophy is the re-incarnation of souls. That after leaving the present state the soul returns in some other body to work out the unsolved problems of life. Yet while this new-old philosophy believes so strongly in the brotherhood of all mankind that in this respect it outranks the modern system of Christianity, this doctrine of soul-returning seems almost abhorrent to those who have the hope of an immortality which will right the wrongs of earth in an atmosphere from which the grossness of flesh and sense are eliminated.

But, bless me! I am writing a sermon; and I am sure you have in Weymouth clergymen enough for that without being bored by a lay discourse.

I had a short chat the other day with Miss Emma Sheridan (or Mrs. Frye) of the Museum company. I had heard that this charming woman was to leave the Museum and next season would be in New York or elsewhere, and so I asked her as to the truth of the report.

I was not surprised to hear that although she has several fine offers for next year—they all include traveling and absence from Boston, and so she has declined to sign with any manager. But though Miss Sheridan gives up the stage for a time for the sweets of home life and the pleasures of society in which she is a general favorite, she does not relinquish the work entirely. She has another art in which she also excels. I mean that of writer; and it is an open secret among her friends that a well-known publisher has the manuscript of a story written by her nearly ready for publication.

So though we shall no longer see her charming impersonations upon the stage, I am sure we shall have no less pleasing pictures from her ready pen. MARGUERY.

Trustees' Entertainment at the Porter M. E. Church.

—The entertainment under the auspices of the trustees of the Porter M. E. church last week Monday evening was an excellent one, but there was only a small audience present. Accordingly another entertainment, which was more extensively advertised, was provided for this week Monday evening.

An orchestra consisting of Miss Fannie E. Young, cornetist; Miss Mary L. Cushing, violinist; and Agnes E. Cushing, pianist, played several selections. Miss Susie J. Tirrell and Miss Maud Townsend sang solos, and Mrs. E. R. Downs read "Widow Bedott's Poem," "The Lost Heir," and "Aunty Doleful's Visit." About 80 or 90 persons were present. The proceeds go towards the current expenses of the society.

After the exercises in the vestry, the performers from South Weymouth, with some local talent, were invited to the residence of Chas. Hawes, Esq. where they partook of refreshments and spent an hour in social converse.

One more Weymouth Invention.

Weymouth certainly contains its share of inventive genious. It has been our pleasure in the recent past to chronicle numerous inventions and we gladly add to the list an invention of Dr. A. G. Nye. This is called Plastic Gold and is gold prepared in such a way as to be very soft and malleable. We were shown some of the preparation in bottles and it looked like minature sponges.

The advantages claimed for this preparation of gold are, 1st. With it teeth can be filled in one-quarter of the time formerly required and with far less beating or pounding; 2d. Because of the ease of filling, much less pain and discomfort to the patient

Dr. Nye says he has worked at this invention for over forty years and has only lately got it perfected. He claims that no further improvements are now possible as it is perfect. It is beginning to be used in large quantities by the profession, and the sales of it through the Philadelphia house who are his sole agents, are rapidly increasing.

J. T. of H. Elect Officers.

The Junior Temple of Honor have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Walter E. Tirrell, governor; David P. Lincoln, William F. Tucker, William F. Winsor, assistant governors; William N. Rice, worthy archon; Walter E. Gardner, worthy vice-archon; Myron P. Ford, recorder; Herbert N. Sylvester, assistant recorder; L. Winthrop Bates, financial recorder; George A. Lincoln, assistant financial recorder; Minot D. Tirrell, usher; Arthur F. Garey, assistant usher; Irving P. Loud, inside watchman; Nathaniel Sweeting, outside protector; Myron P. Ford, organist; Charles Harrington, Stephen Pratt, Warner Orcutt, standard bearers.

Dust.

In every village in town we hear the inquiry, "Why don't some one start a street sprinkler?" A very large stretch of road has been covered with new gravel within the past few weeks, and there has been an unusually small amount of rain-fall, consequently it is dust to eat, drink and wear. The sprinkling of here and there a little place with lawn hose speaks well for the kind individuals who do the sprinkling, but it is wholly inadequate to the needs of the situation. There are a great many people who are ready to subscribe for a system of sprinkling when the paper comes along. Who will start it?

Always Celebrated.

The flag on the post-office at East Weymouth was displayed on Tuesday in honor of the day that Postmaster Hayward always celebrates, it being the twenty-eighth anniversary of his liberation from the Andersonville prison pen. In the engagement at Cold Harbor Capt. Hayward was captured by the enemy and taken to Andersonville. When taken prisoner he was a hale and hearty man in the vigor of youth, weighing 155 pounds. Eleven months of suffering and privations reduced him to a mere shadow of what he once was, and at the close of the war he found his way into the Union lines at Jacksonville weighing less than 90 pounds. The anniversary of his release is, therefore, worthy of celebration.

Beyond Town Limits.

—The citizens of Wollaston have petitioned that no billiard or pool licenses be granted in that part of Quincy.

—West Quincy says we will not get evening police or anything else if we don't ask for it. That is about the size of it the world over.

—One hundred and twenty-five car loads of granite were shipped from Quincy Adams last week.

—When Brockton makes a final payment of $4000 in July next, on a loan made in 1872, it will have paid $39,600 interest on a loan of $40,000.

—The last session of the New Jersey Legislature enacted a Parole law as an economic measure to avoid the expense of a new State prison. In addition to robbers, and minor criminals now out on parole, are two murderers.

—Waltham observed Arbor Day by a general cessation of business and public and private planting of trees.

—Randolph's new Board of Selectmen are curtailing expenses and getting things down to hard pan, and her citizens are looking forward to a year of prosperity.

—The one hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of the town of Randolph occurs in March 1893, and steps are now being taken for an extensive celebration of that event.

—A preliminary meeting has been held in Dorchester for the purpose of organizing a Republican club. It is proposed to establish permanent headquarters and educate the people in all the political movements of the day.

—Lynn is disturbed by a class of young men who stand in doorways on Sundays, insult passing ladies and cover the side walk with tobacco juice.

—A party of 200 visited Marshfield last week and took away five bushels of Mayflowers.

—Dr. Talmage's $410,000 church was dedicated last Sunday with a mechanic's lien of $50,000 on it.

—Hingham is to try an experiment in road building with crushed stone, and appropriated $3000 last Saturday evening for the purpose of covering a half mile of road with crushed stone to the depth of six inches.

—Hyde Park lost a valued citizen Monday morning. J. Ellery Piper while attempting to board a train was struck by a passing freight and instantly killed.

—Canton is in a muddle on the license question. At a recent town meeting the vote was announced as No, but subsequent events proved that it should have been Yes. Now on applications for licenses one of the selectmen votes Yes, another No, and the third will not vote either way.

Temple of Honor Election.

Mechanics' Temple of Honor No. 25 O. of T., elected the following officers last Friday evening: Worthy Chief Templar, W. T. Dizer; worthy vice templar, W. H. Sayward; worthy recorder, Walter Tirrell; worthy assistant recorder, W. Frank Tucker; worthy financial recorder, George H. Bearce; worthy treasurer, L. W. Cain; worthy usher, B. B. Sylvester; worthy deputy usher, George Kilburn; worthy guardian, Benj. Writhington; worthy sentinel, Harry Bates; worthy chaplain, Waldo Turner.

Death of an Aged Lady.

Mrs. Harriet, widow of the late Cyrus Raymond, and one of the most respected ladies of East Weymouth, died at her residence on Myrtle street, Monday morning, aged 90 years and 11 days. Mrs. Raymond was born in Middleboro and her maiden name was Raymond. She has been a resident of East Weymouth for many years. Four sons survive her; Charles W., Edwin C., Hiram E., and Benj. O. One son Henry W. died a few years ago leaving a widow and two children.

Hard on the Expressmen.

The superior court judge at Lowell ruled that an expressman was liable for taking intoxicating liquors into a town which had voted no license, even though said expressman did not know what the package contained. Will expressmen be obliged to open and examine all packages for Weymouth before leaving Boston?

Appointments.

The Selectmen have appointed the following chiefs in the fire department: Ward 1, W. O. Collyer; Ward 2, F. D. Thayer; Ward 3, C. E. Bicknell; Ward 4, M. R. Sprague; Ward 5, Otis Cushing. In addition to these Henry A. Nash was appointed Superintendent of Streets.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth; E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists.

A Husband's Mistake.

Husbands too often permit wives, and parents their children, to suffer from headache, dizziness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, fits, nervousness, when by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine such serious results could easily be prevented. Druggists everywhere say it gives universal satisfaction, and has an immense sale. Woodworth & Co., of Fort Wayne Ind.; Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; J. C. Wolf, Hillsdale, Mich.; and hundreds of others say "It is the greatest seller they ever knew." It contains no opiates. Trial bottles and fine book on Nervous Diseases, free at A. M. Bachelder & Co.

FRIDAY, MAY 1, 1891.

Look out for those financial organizations that offer $100 in three months on an investment of $30. The smash will come to all alike.

Mr. Harrison did not seem to be so great a man in the Republican League Convention as Mr. James G. Blaine, in whose shadow he became almost lost.

It is reported that a certain Massachusetts man—with more money than brains,—proposes to erect a $7,000 doghouse, and still people wonder at the discontent of the poor.

When Senator Plumb said that it would not make the slightest difference to this country if Italy severed all diplomatic relations with the United States and never renewed them, he very nearly struck "plumb" in the bull's eye of truth.

Cleveland appears to be trying to hedge on the "Free Coinage" issue. He has declined to say whether, if elected President, he would veto a free coinage bill, on the ground that the time may then have come when free coinage will have become a necessity. He don't believe in crossing a bridge until he reaches it.

But whatever may be the popular opinion of President Harrison as a statesman, it must be conceded by all who have read his speeches while on his present tour, that he is the possessor of a happy faculty of saying just the right thing at the right time and place, and has undoubtedly made himself many friends.

A curious case was that of General Butler in being ejected from the court by Judge Carpenter. However offensive Butler might have been to the judge, we think that he probably had some rights in court and that his client had rights also, and that it must have been wrong to shut off the case so abruptly. Butler threatens to fight it out, and if unsettled when he dies, to leave provisions in his will whereby his rights shall be proved. We fancy that the judge's life will not be very happy and peaceful in the future and that Butler will prove a "thorn in his side," as he has the reputation of being an enthusiastic enemy.

One High School.

With the probable near advent of the electric road, a question which we have broached before, that of consolidating our High schools, again comes up in feasible shape.

There is no one thing that argues so strongly in favor of town division as the present necessity of maintaining two High schools. It is expensive and not satisfactory. It tends to a diversion of interests and to a lack of proper acquaintance between the people of the two parts of the town.

With good communication over an electric road, we can locate our high school in the central part of the town and transport all the scholars there. This would result in a saving of money and at the same time give greater efficiency in all departments of the school.

The two buildings now occupied for high school purposes will be available for other grades of schools in the future and will make it unnecessary to build any new schoolhouses in those localities for a long time.

It would seem that the proper place for the new building for the High school would be at or near Shaw's Corner.

Stone Roads.

Some years ago Weymouth voted to purchase a stone crusher. Notwithstanding this vote the machine has never been procured, it is presumed because no money was appropriated for this purpose.

While many other towns are building modern roads of stone, as fast as they can afford it, Weymouth is still wasting her substance year after year in repairing her roads with destructible gravel.

Is this wise? A road built of stone is good for many years with only a very light coat of gravel occasionally spread over the top of it.

Some towns so appreciate the value of good roads and the attractions they offer to new comers that they bond their towns for large sums that they may have the full benefits of these improvements as soon as possible. These bonds are issued for a term of years, as our water bonds are, and it is expected that the saving in the expense of maintaining the roads thereafter will pay off the debt. Other towns appropriate yearly a certain sum, three or four thousands of dollars, for stone roads, building their streets little by little.

Either of these plans is good, according to the circumstances. Weymouth does not need stone beds for all her roads, but the main streets that are most subject to the wear and tear of heavy teams ought to be so constructed, and in time, if we but make a beginning, we shall have secured permanently good thoroughfares.

Is it Apathy?

The second year of the late war was dark and ominous with defeat rapidly following defeat. In the midst of the gloom, Lincoln was asked who was the general in command. The reply came in his quaint way, "General Apathy," and the people of Weymouth think that the same general has taken hold of the enforcement of any liquor laws or law against drunkenness which may be on the statute books.

Nearly two months have rolled by since the town voted no-license, and made an appropriation to enforce the liquor laws. We understand that the selectmen have taken a decided stand against granting licenses even to druggists. This may be all well, but where is the enforcement of the law? Where is the remedy for the disgraceful scene of last Sunday, the drunken fight on Pleasant street and the sickening and disgusting scene of a man besmeared with blood, followed by another, filling the air with oaths and vile epithets? Thanks are due to "Pero," who came along and interfered in the melee. Where is the remedy for a street full of drunkards, as was the case Thursday evening?

There is evidently a hitch somewhere. Some say it is the officers; some say the selectmen, but more say that it is indifference on the part of citizens who fail to take a personal interest in the matter.

Obituary.

"Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a swift, fleeting meteor, a fast flying cloud;
Like a flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
Man passeth from life to his home in the grave."

Miss Adeline A. Coleran one year ago graduated from our High school with high honors and a bright prospect before her. She had just entered upon her chosen work, that of teacher in our public school, when after a few days illness she was summoned to the world beyond. The last sad rites of the church were performed over her remains at the Church of the Sacred Heart this morning. Rev. D. S. Healy, assisted by William Logue officiated, and the church choir rendered the music. Floral tributes of relatives and friends were quite profuse. John Curran, William Callahan, William Kenney and John Whelan acted as bearers in conducting the remains to their final resting place.

Pythian Sisterhood Assembly Instituted.

The second meeting in the interest of a Pythian Sisterhood Assembly, was held at Pythian Hall, last Wednesday afternoon and evening, when Arbutus Assembly, No. 18, was formally instituted by the Grand Board, consisting of G. C., Mrs. H. C. Allen of Boston; G. V. C., Mrs. O. Cushman of Brockton, acting as G. P.; G. K. R. S., Mrs. F. M. Chase of Boston, and G. M. at A., Mrs. Adams of Haverhill. The officers elected are P. C., Mrs. F. A. Newell; C. C., Mrs. Wilmot Cleverly; V. C., Mrs. G. W. Leavitt; P., Mrs. E. T. Jordan; K. of R. & S., Mrs. Joseph Taylor, Jr.; M. of F., Mrs. J. W. Phillips; M. of E., Mrs. Howard Poole; M. at A., Miss Emily Litchfield; M. O., Mrs. F. Hall; I. G., Mrs. B. F. Johnson; O. G., Mrs. G. P. Niles; organist, Miss Stella M. Clark; trustees, Mrs. J. S. Bacon, Mrs. G. D. Bullock, and Mrs. Emily Thayer. A collation was served about 8 o'clock, which was partaken of by about 50 ladies and their gentlemen knights. After supper, a social time was enjoyed, which consisted of remarks by G. C., Mrs. H. C. Allen and G. V. C., Mrs. O. Cushman of the instituting officers, and Brothers F. A. Newell, G. D. Bullock, and Wilmot Cleverly of Delphi Lodge, singing by Miss Emily Litchfield, and a reading by Mrs. G. W. Leavitt. The assembly started out with a charter list of about fifty, and there is every sense to believe that its membership will go much higher, as an unusual amount of interest is manifested.

Death of Mrs. Palmer.

Lucy White, wife of Rev. F. H. Palmer, died at the Old North parsonage last Saturday afternoon after a sickness of about six weeks. Mrs. Palmer was born in Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, March 25, 1861. Her father was professor of Latin and Greek in Oahu College at Honolulu. Her mother was daughter of Mr. E. O. Whall, one of the early missionaries to the island. When she was about two years of age her mother died and she was taken by her missionary grandparents and brought up as their child. In 1878 she entered Smith College, Northampton, Mass., where she remained until 1880, when she was married July 6 to Rev. Mr. Palmer, who had previously been to the islands to fill the same professorship in Oahu College that her father had previously filled.

She was an earnest church worker and had a class in the Sunday-school. She was president of the Wide-Awake Workers and Ladies Benevolent Society, and took a great interest in mission work, both foreign and home societies having the benefit of her presence in their conventions. She was a poetess of some note, having written for "Babyland" and several other papers.

The funeral services took place in the Old North church Tuesday at 2.30 p. m., the Rev. W. H. Bolster of South Weymouth and Rev. R. B. Howard of Boston officiating. Rev. R. B. Howard, an intimate friend of the family, delivered a very touching address. The interment took place in the Old North cemetery. Many beautiful floral tributes were given by the different societies and by private individuals.

The Wednesday Night Club around the Festive Board. They discuss "Poor Richard's" sayings, Political Modesty, and Real Estate.

Although the Wednesday Night Club is in the tenth year of its existence it shows no signs of feebleness at supper meetings. The forty-sixth affair of this kind occurred Wednesday evening at the W. C. T. U. rooms. Forty were present, including invited guests. Dr. C. C. Tower presided. He had prepared a fine programme based upon the sayings of the famous "Poor Richard."

The speakers, however, interpolated certain other subjects, prominent among which were allusions to the extreme modesty of members of the club in public affairs, and their sagacity in real estate ventures. The discussion brought out the fact that certain members were interested in speculation in "wild cat" Western land in addition to a more legitimate interest in South Weymouth real estate. The speakers were Nathan D. Canterbury, W. H. Bolster, Edgar R. Downs, John G. Hutchins, E. N. Mayberry, G. B. Rogers, Henry C. Alvord, Howard N. Joy, and Louis A. Cook.

The Schuberts.

The Ladies Schubert Quartette has been singing in and around New York city for the last two weeks. Mrs. Jennie Worster, who did not accompany them on their western trip of six weeks, resumed her position with them on the New York trip. They will go south for a week or ten days the middle of May, visiting Richmond, Baltimore, Fredericksburg and other places. The quartette has had a solid winter's work and the outlook for next season promises to be equally as good.

Is Your Dog Legally a Dog?

Is your dog licensed? Is your dog worth licensing? The first of these questions every one who keeps a dog must answer soon in the affirmative or be liable to a penalty. The second question is also quite an important one, as it costs no more to license and feed a good dog than it does a brindle cur.

The Library Committee.

The Building Committee met last Tuesday and organized by the choice of Z. L. Bicknell, chairman; F. H. Mason secretary.

A sub-committee of seven, Z. L. Bicknell, A. J. Richards, J. W. Hart, James Humphrey, S. S. Spear, G. C. Howe, and F. H. Mason, were appointed to procure plans.

Norfolk County Sunday-school Association.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Norfolk County Sunday-school Association will be held in the Congregational Church, West Medway, Mass., Saturday, May 9, 1891. Theme of the day, "Soul Winning."

Obituary.

George W. Tirrell, the well-known photographer of East Weymouth and Nantasket Beach, after a long and painful illness, passed away on the morning of April 28. Mr. Tirrell was born in Weymouth, and was the son of John Tirrell, who survives him at the advanced age of 83 years. He was buried from the home of his father on Madison street, Thursday afternoon, Rev. A. A. Kidder officiating. A quartette composed of W. H. Pratt, L. W. Cain, Mrs. Edward Orr and Miss Josie Cunningham, furnished music for the occasion, rendering in a very impressive manner, "Refuge," and "Abide with Me." The remains were interred in the East Weymouth Cemetery.

To Be on May 6 and 7.

Every one awaits the month of May with eager anticipations of its beautiful fair and warm days, a foretaste of a welcome summer. But there is another attraction that makes this month looked forward to with sweet expectations, and it comes as regularly as the "merrie monthe" itself, and that is the Universalist Annual May Fair. This will be held on May 6 and 7 this year, and on the following night, the 8th, will be given their annual May ball, for which invitations are out. For full particulars of all the pleasures to be offered by the Ladies Social Circle at this Fair, we refer you to their extensive notice in our advertising columns, and we assure you that if you read about it you will want to go.

72d Anniversary.

The Seventy-second anniversary of Odd Fellowship was celebrated by Crescent Lodge in Odd Fellows Opera House Wednesday evening, the 29th, and was the most successful affair ever held by that organization.

After a supper at which Harvey Blunt and Tirrell's orchestra vied with each other in absorbing the attention of the assembled company, there was a concert by the Boylston Quartette, Julia Thompson King, reader, and Chester Tirrell, violinist. The quartette sang unusually well, the solos by D. M. Babcock and J. C. Bartlett being finely rendered and heartily encored. Miss King again completely captured the audience by her clever impersonations and rendering of difficult selections. The violin solo by Mr. Tirrell was well given and appreciated. After the concert, dancing was the order until a late hour.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

The column under this title will be given to the people for a free discussion of any and all subjects. The management of the paper distinctly disclaim any responsibility for the opinions here expressed.

We have an interesting communication in regard to bicycle riding on our sidewalks. It is anonymous and therefore we do not print it. If the writer cares enough about the abuse to sign his own name or initials to the article, in accordance with our rules, we will print it, otherwise the waste basket will receive it as it has hosts of other unsigned letters. Our rules are simple and are these: All communications for this column must be signed by the writer. If requested we will only print the initials but any and all who inquire at our office for the name of the writer will be given the desired information.—[ED]

New Comers.

EDITORS GAZETTE:

A writer in a recent issue of the Gazette tries to convey the impression that it is only new comers to town who advocate division, and that all the old Weymouth families are opposed thereto. Is he aware that there are very few of the descendants of the old families who are prominent in business, social or public affairs? Of all the doctors practicing in Weymouth today there is not one native of Weymouth, not a single clergyman occupying a pulpit in the town who was born in Weymouth. Of the lawyers who have offices here all, with a single exception, are new comers—that exception is Judge Humphrey, who bears an old and honored Weymouth name. Of the eleven largest shoe firms in town, Torrey, Hart, Dizer, Haskell, Canterbury, Clapp, Carroll, Sheehy, Stetson & Heald, Fogg and Reed, I fail to find the name of but two (Torrey and Reed), in Gilbert Nash's excellent sketch of Weymouth, as land owners in Weymouth in 1663. Whether the names given above are those of new comers, I leave for those who know them better than I to decide. I do know that Messrs. Hart, Haskell, Carroll, Sheehy, and Fogg are not natives of this town. The Republican candidates for representatives last fall, Messrs. Cushing and Flint, were new comers, as was also Mr. Cook who represented the town in 1889 and '90. Not being familiar with the genealogy of the families of the various town officers I am unable to state how many of them are new comers. It would be interesting to know how many can trace their ancestry back two generations as Weymouth families. Of the board of registrars, however, I do know that Messrs. Smith and Murray are not natives of Weymouth, and if I am not mistaken the grandfather of the popular clerk of the board was a new comer in town.

Take the last meeting of the Weymouth Club in Old Spain two weeks ago. Every speaker, with one exception, opposed a division of the town, and this gentleman appeared to lean toward a division; yet of all who addressed that meeting the name of Bicknell alone appears among the early settlers in Weymouth. The president of the club, E. R. Downs, is a new comer, so is Dr. C. C. Tower. B. F. Smith is another also L. A. Cook and Rev. W. H. Bolster. Why, even our old friend "Pero," who wrote so wittily a short time ago about long knives carving the town into small pieces, even as he himself would carve an ox, must go out of town to find the birthplace of his honored and revered father. I wonder if the writer of that letter signed "Not to be Humbugged" is not a new comer himself; perhaps his grandfather was. There is one thing I wish every reader of the Gazette would do and that is sit down and look up the ancestry of the people living in his own immediate vicinity. Jot down the names of those who have moved into town, then make another list of those whose fathers were not natives of Weymouth, and supplement this with the names of those whose grandfathers were new comers, and I think he will find that the old families have gone to be new comers in other localities. Of the names of shoe manufacturers and speakers of the Weymouth Club supper given above, only five, those of Beals, Bicknell, Canterbury, Reed and Torrey appear in Nash's "Sketch of Weymouth" as soldiers in the Revolutionary war. NOBLE MORSE.

MR. EDITOR:

Your remarks last week about "Self-nomination of unfit men" have given the impression, and have led to the public statement, that some members of that nominating committee actually presented their own individual names for membership on the Building Committee. It was not quite as bad as that. The committee simply resolved itself spontaneously into a mutual admiration society. That was all. Members might, of course, have declined to accept nominations thus mutually extended, but they did not. Such action while, perhaps, open to criticism, is not without precedent. EDGAR R. DOWNS.

A Challenge.

MR. EDITOR:

I see that the town did not see fit to pay John Healey the sum of $54.58 as called for in the warrant for the special town meeting. Now, that Mr. Healey may not lose what was claimed to be due him, the undersigned agrees to furnish two horses and two carts, and challenges any one of the sixteen signers of the article in the warrant, John Daley or Charles Hawes preferred, to work one week, or six days, for the town at the same pay that he receives from the town, nine hours to constitute a day's work. At the end of the week the one who gets beat is to pay John Healey in full. JAMES MOORE.

Norfolk Club Ladies Night.

The one hundred and seven people who attended the "Ladies Night" of the Norfolk Club at the Tremont House Tuesday night, came away feeling that the "Ladies Night" of 1891 was one long to be remembered. At a little after six o'clock the party, which had been spending a half hour in a renewal of old acquaintances and forming new, were seated at the table where they spent an hour or more in discussing the menu, which all enjoyed from Bluepoints to coffee.

The banquet was followed by brief remarks by the president, who introduced as the first speaker of the evening Hon. Frederic T. Greenhalge of Lowell, who spoke of the three great questions of the day, currency, tariff and suffrage, and who was listened to with deep interest from beginning to end of his very able and logical address.

Hon. Albert E. Pillsbury and Col. W. M. Olin followed with brief remarks. A recitation by Miss Lilla E. Kelley quite captivated the company, and the music of the Germania orchestra and the Temple Quartette was much enjoyed.

The president, in his opening remarks, disclaimed any credit for the excellently arranged and well executed affair, saying it was due to the secretary of the club. Weymouth has the honor of being the home of that secretary, and the guests of the occasion are specially grateful to H. A. Thomas for his kind attention.

Died.

Thomas J. Gordon, in Springfield, Mass., April 17, only son of Dr. Timothy Gordon, who was a physician in Weymouth between the years 1824 and 1838 or 40, when he removed to Plymouth. He built and occupied the house now owned by Mr. Henry Nash. His son was born in Weymouth in 1826, was graduated at Harvard in 1849, practiced law in Boston a few years. Afterwards removing to New York city he secured a large practice, and was engaged in many important patent suits.

Charles Henry, in Portland, Me., April 19, infant son of Charles H. and Margaret M. Payson, and great grandson of Rev. Edward and Louise S. Payson of Portland, deceased, and on the mother's side of Christopher and Susan White Webb, late of Weymouth, deceased.

Gleanings from Current Literature.—To be Found in the Tufts Library.

God and His World, by H. M. Alden, has been the most successful work of religious thought of the season, over 7,000 copies having been sold.

Jacob A. Ries, the author of How the Other Half Lives, came to this country from Rebe, Denmark, at the age of twenty. His coming to America was due in part to his appreciative reading of Cooper's tale. He is now about forty and has been a police reporter of New York city for a number of years.

Frank D. Stockton was invited to dinner in Washington recently by an artful hostess who had the ices served in the form of a lady and a tiger. "Now, which?" she coolly asked when they came on. "Both, if you please," he replied; and the problem is still unsolved.

It is estimated that a full half million copies of Edward Everett Hale's The Man Without a Country have now been sold.

General Booth's book, In Darkest England, is to be translated into the French, German, Dutch and Swedish language.

Bellamy's Looking Backward has reached its 350th thousand.

The Nantasket Beach trains begin running today.

My Family Doctor

For the last two years has been Sulphur Bitters, and until I began using them in my family, we had more or less sickness, and our doctor's bill has been very large. Since we began their use, we have had no doctor to pay, and three dollars invested in Sulphur Bitters has kept health in our family.—E. Knott, postmaster, Waverly, Iowa.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and takes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Railroad at Canajoharie, N. Y.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils, Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood. Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers. For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters. Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Price 50 cts. and $1 per bottle, at A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills

Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure billiousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequalled for men, women, children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 50 doses, 25 cents. Samples free, at A. M. Bachelder & Co.'s.

—Attention is called to the posters put out today advertising the following real estate for sale: The estate of the late Isaac Williams, No. 4 Norfolk street, comprising one house of 8 rooms, painted and blinded, about 1-4 acre of land, good well also town water, near schools, churches and depot. Will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder on Thursday, May 7th, at 4 o'clock p. m. Terms, $100 cash at sale, balance when deed is delivered.

—A fine monument was erected this week in our village cemetery in the family lot of C. S. and C. H. Williams, of the celebrated Riversdale and Dark Quincy granite. It was manufactured and erected by Thomas & Miller of Quincy. It needs no words of commendation from us, for it has only to be seen to be admired for its beauty of design, proportion and workmanship. It is surmounted by one of the most delicate urns that can be produced in granite, as it was cut and finished with the pneumatic tools. This firm has a stock of finished monuments and headstones in granite and marble from the quarries of Sweden, Scotland, Canada, Maine (Riversdale), Rhode Island (Westerly), New Hampshire and Vermont to the value of over ($30,000) thirty thousand dollars worth. So any of our subscribers who desire work to beautify their cemetery lots, cannot help being pleased by calling at their works near Quincy Adams station. Their prices are the lowest for the best quality.

—We desire to inform the business men and residents of Weymouth, that the work of compiling the new Directory has been resumed. The Quincy book, for the delivery of which the work in this town was suspended, was a gratifying success and was liberally patronized by the merchants of the place and the publishers trust that the same liberal patronage will be accorded them here. A. B. SPARROW.

—Mr. W. L. Douglas, the famous shoe manufacturer, of Brockton, Mass., has taken a policy in the Mutual Life Insurance Company for the limit, $100,000. The annual premium is $7,380. Mr. Douglas is one of the most enterprising business men in this country. He has selected the Mutual policy as the best and most profitable form of investment. Mr. Geo. C. Torrey, of South Weymouth is the agent. See his Ad. in this paper.

$500 FOR A NEEDLE.—Our Homes, a thirty-two page monthly magazine, devoted to house building, home furnishing, house decoration, fashions, general literature, etc., is the best publication of its class in America. The publishers, in order to increase the circulation of their magazine, offer large cash rewards to those of their subscribers, or intending subscribers, who correctly answer the following question: Where in the New Testament are the words "a needle," first found? Cash daily and weekly rewards given while the competition lasts. The publishers will give away thousands of dollars among those correctly answering the question—the leading reward being $500 in gold. Send ten cents in stamps or silver for a sample copy of OUR HOMES and complete rules governing the competition. Address OUR HOMES PUBLISHING CO., Brockville, Canada.

THE HOUSEHOLD, devoted to the interest of the American Housewife, is one of the oldest domestic journals, having been established in 1868. It employs some of the best writers in the country, and is full of interesting as well as useful matter. We note especially the Menues prepared for it by Mrs. D. A. Lincoln, and copy the one for Sunday which our readers are advised to try, as particularly adapted to the season: Sunday—Breakfast. Grits, oranges, coffee, breakfast bacon, boiled eggs, Graham gems. Dinner. Macaroni soup, roast leg of mutton, mashed potatoes, currant jelly, canned corn, lettuce salad, French dressing, crackers, cheese, sponge drops, snow pudding, fruit, nuts, coffee. Supper. Egg Toast, crab-apple jelly, sponge cake, cocoa. Mr. J. L. Hesbour also contributes a touching little sketch called "Three Pairs of Shoes," which cannot fail to appeal to every heart. Published monthly by The Household Company, 50 Bromfield street, $1.10 per year.

Many years practice have given C. A. Shaw & Co. success in obtaining patents for all classes of invention. They make a specialty of rejected cases, and have secured allowance on many patents that had been previously rejected. Their advertisement in another column, will be of interest to inventors, patentees, manufacturers, and all who have to do with patents. 39 tf

North Weymouth Gleanings.

—The "Shoemakers retreat" off Lovell street is having town water placed in it.

—Capt. J. Spencer has sold his Sea Foam to a Quincy gentleman.

—The White Fawn has been launched and she is a gem with her new sails.

—Bradley's Fertilizer Company have procured some Italian help.

—Wm. O. Collyer is beautifying the aspect of his residence with the addition of a verandah.

—J. W. Pratt has sold his new residence to S. Ozro Estes. Mr. Pratt has moved to Pearl street.

—The familiar face of Benj. E. Corlew has been seen about town. He is to open the Bayside soon.

—Torrey's shop shut down Wednesday and many of the shopmates of the late E. F. Pratt attended the funeral services.

—Miss Georgia Robbins is having her cottage at Fort Point thoroughly renovated and painted by H. L. Kenerson.

—About thirty "Old Spainers" attended the Odd Fellows anniversary at East Weymouth Wednesday night.

—W. W. Burke has leased a cottage a Nantasket near the Catholic church and moved his family there.

—Francis Cushing has a Bramah hen that laid an egg last week which measured nine inches around lengthwise, and six inches the other way.

—The Independent Club appears before the public tonight at the Engine Hall for the first time, when they will hold their first dance. A good time is to be expected.

—Where is the Lockup that Ward 1 was to have built this season? The town voted at the annual town meeting in March that $500 be appropriated for that purpose. We also want a night police.

—Do the selectmen have any authority to issue an order to owners of dogs to keep them from running at large and doing their neighbors harm by killing fowl, running over farmer's hot beds, breaking in windows over young plants and other mischief? One party has had the windows broken over his hot beds last year and again this spring. Such dogs should not be allowed to run at large.

—The pupils of the Athens grammar school gave a concert at the Pilgrim church Friday evening. Songs, declamations and readings, interspersed with piano solos, constituted the programme. The pupils taking part did credit to themselves and Justice to their principal and music teacher. Mr. A. J. Sidelinger rendered a selected song. A goodly sum of money was realized.

—Mr. E. F. Pratt expired at the Boston City Hospital Monday, April 27. He was at the hospital one week, and three days previous to his death he underwent an operation at the hands of Dr. Abner Post. Mr. Pratt was one of our best known and most respected citizens. upright in his dealings with men and a friend of those in need. and was honored and reverenced by all who knew him. He leaves a wife and one son to mourn his loss; but grief for the death of a man so far above reproach cannot be confined to his family hearth, but sorrow and regret is felt throughout the entire community in which he was born and lived for fifty-seven years and five months. Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Universalist church of which he was a long and honored member. Rev. B. F. Eaton officiated and paid a most glowing tribute to one who was looked up to and revered by all. Interment took place at the Old North cemetery. Mr. Pratt's reputation and character were far above reproach, and his character and general bearing can be put before the public mind by these few words, He was a man.

—The Ladies North Weymouth Cemetery Circle will meet Tuesday evening, with Mrs. John Holbrook.

—Capt. A. E. Jackson participated in the Odd Fellows celebration at Brockton, Monday.

Weymouth and East Braintree Locals.

—Wm. F. Morrill, who has lately purchased the Nash estate of Louis W. Nash and sisters will make that place his home. He is to make, we are informed, quite extensive improvements and will put the place in first class order. Mr. Morrill is a general agent of the New York Life Insurance Co., which position he has held for 27 years, and is quite well known throughout New England. He will occupy the house the last of June.

—About forty members of Delphi Lodge No. 15, K. of P., enjoyed an excellent supper on invitation of Edward Anderson proprietor of the Anderson House, Fort Point, last Saturday evening. A general good time was enjoyed.

—Governor Hose Co. No. 3 elected the following officers Monday evening; foreman, Francis M. Drown; 1st assistant, W. F. Hancock; 2nd assistant, Gustavus Leach; clerk and treasurer, Daniel A. Donovan; steward, W. R. Burton.

—A large delegation of local sports attended the Weir-Griffin prize fight at Nantasket Beach last week.

—The body of the late Wm. E. Cushing who was killed at Medford last Saturday, being run over by a heavy team, was brought here for burial Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Cushing was formerly a resident of this place.

—Dr. J. F. Gearan starts today on a short visit to his home at Gardner, Mass.

—Rev. F. W. Sanford of Great Falls N. H. is here on a two week's visit to his sister Mrs. Horace Smith.

—Geo. Tracy returned home last Saturday from a three month's business trip through the west.

—Judge James H. Flint who has been ill is able to be out again.

—Edward B. Whelan a former well known resident of this town has been appointed park police at Boston.

—Joshua Wilkins has received another car load of horses from Kentucky.

—There is great inquiry for the watering cart this dry weather. "No money" is the cause of its non appearance.

—Two boys aged 6 years made things quite lively on Mt. Pleasant Tuesday evening. They were seated on an old mattress which had been placed in the yard at the rear of Loud's block, each smoking a cigar. The mattress caught fire and for a few moments it looked as though the families in the block would be obliged to move. After some "tall hustling" the flames were subdued.

—Thaddeus Hyland is to build a house on King's avenue.

—Rev. Wm, Hyde has been attending the Episcopal Convention in Boston this week and has been the guest of Hon. Edward Avery of Newbury street.

—For the convenience of members of the South Shore Co-operative Bank, A. M. Bachelder has consented to receive dues at his drug store. The secretary will be at the same place on the Saturday evening previous to the monthly meeting.

—The Union Literary Circle meets next Tuesday evening, May 5th, at Rev. Mr. Eaton's. Subject—"The City of Washington." Quotations from one's favorite author.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Baptist church hold their semi-annual meeting for the election of officers this evening at 7.30 at the vestry. All members are urged to attend.

—Read Business Notices for mention of an auction sale of real estate in this place. In fact, always read our business notices for you may miss great opportunities.

—The Nilson Quartette sang for Boston Post 200, G. A. R., April 6, and Mrs. Eva Baker, the soprano, has received a very pretty letter from them thanking her for the pleasure afforded. This quartette is making many friends.

—On Arbor Day, 100 trees were planted in Webb Park. We are told by one who resides near there, that unless the trees are watered, he thinks they will all die. The Improvement Association might well look into this matter.

—Eugene Corridan fell off J. B. Rhines lumber wagon Wednesday noon. The team run over him fracturing his ankle and cutting his head.

—Hon. Stephen Barry of Ill. was in town this week.

—The State Fish Commissioners took a large number of smelts out of the river to stock ponds in the vicinity.

—A large party went from here to Plymouth today.

—John Gooley is to move into the M. Griffin house on Washington street.

—L. R. Eldridge, station agent at East Braintree, has been appointed agent at North Abington.

—Ernest Phillips, at the risk of his life, stopped a runaway team with two people in it yesterday afternoon.

—Geo. H. Bicknell has put an Imperial counter skiver in his factory and it does excellent work.

—A special meeting of Hose 3 Company will be held next Monday evening.

—Mr John F. Renn, an old and highly respected resident of East Braintree, died Tuesday, aged 73 years and 3 months. The funeral took place from his late residence this afternoon, Rev. Oliver Huckel saying the words of consolation. The remains were interred in the village cemetery.

—Joseph Longbottom, an old resident of East Braintree, and for many years foreman at the Boston Flax mills, died yesterday, aged 65 years, 8 months, 7 days. The funeral will occur Saturday.

—The Trinity Parish concert last Friday night netted $63.00.

—The Women's Christian Temperance Union will meet in small room of vestry of the Baptist church at 3.45 p. m. Monday.

I Was a Fool.

Yes, they said I was a fool not to try Sulphur Bitters for rheumatism, from which I had suffered over two years; but I had tried so many doctors and medicines without getting relief that I was discouraged. I am now on my fourth bottle and almost cured. I was a fool that I didn't try that wonderful remedy before.—C. G. Pratt, Manchester, N. H.

The Secret of Success.

A. M. Bachelder & Co., druggists, believe that the secret of success is perseverance. Therefore they persist in keeping the finest lot of perfumeries, toilet articles, cosmetics, drugs and chemicals on the market. They especially invite all persons who have palpitation, short breath, weak or hungry spells, pain in side or shoulder, oppression, night mare, dry cough, smothering, dropsy or heart disease to try Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure before it is too late. It has the largest sale of any similar remedy. Fine book of testimonials free. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is unsurpassed for sleeplessness, headache, fits, etc., and it contains no opiates.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumpton and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

South Weymouth Pickings.

—Through the persistent effort of Selectman Leonard V. Tirrell Main street has been widened from Park avenue to Nash's Corner. All the owners of property on the easterly side have given to the town a quit-claim deed of a strip averaging two feet in width. The town is at no expense except to take down the fences and to remove the loam to whatever place the owner of the adjacent land may designate. Last Friday a stump extractor pulled 25 or 30 stone posts to aid in carrying out this plan of improvement. The sidewalk will thus be rendered more passable, as some trees had increased in size so as to render locomotion difficult. No fences will then remain from J. H. Stetson's corner to Nash's Corner. This improvement has flooded the market with second-hand fences, some in a good state of preservation and valuable for any who may desire to purchase. The next step in the march of improvement may be looked for in the straightening of lines and removing of fences on the other side of the street. A better looking mile of road cannot be found in Weymouth than that from Nash's Corner southward.

—The dramatic troupe advertised to appear in Fogg's Opera House Saturday evening failed to materialise.

—Fast driving of over loaded teams on the Sabbath has already begun on Pleasant street. Where are the officers?

—Another violation of law and order occurred on Mosquito Plain last Sunday afternoon. Seventy-five or eighty persons attended a cock-fight in the fastnesses where the policeman's presence is unknown.

—Mrs. A. V. Holbrook lost a $20 bill on Pleasant street last week Thursday evening. It was found by Wendell Hocking and returned to its owner.

—Hamilton Tirrell entertained his Sunday-school class at his home on Main street last Friday afternoon.

—Fletcher W. Howe is the chairman of the committee of arrangements for the 42d annual May party of the Universalist society at Fogg's Opera house this evening.

—H. A. Thomas is to change the appearance of the Cobb place by putting a 100 foot piazza around it. Ezekiel W. Morton will do the work. He has just built a piazza for E. R. Downs, and has the contract to erect G. B. Roger's house on Bates avenue.

—Louis A. Cook will have a valuable collection of autographs of the leading citizens of Weymouth who are registering for that free house-lot. Interest in the scheme is on the increase, and names are being added to the list rapidly.

—Real estate investments are being offered in this village which will yield better returns than "wild cat" Western schemes, and yet men with money are slow to realize that these opportunities lie so near to them. "'Tis" ever "distance lends enchantment to the view."

—Ex-president of the Improvement Association, C. C. Tower has removed the fence in front of his residence on Pleasant street and graded the lawn.

—Tuesday evening at the vestry of the Second church the Y.P.S.C.E. held a "chatter sociable." Numbers were given to members of the feminine gender, and similar ones to those of the other sex. At a given signal corresponding numbers were to find one another and converse for a given time on a subject announced by the presiding officer. Various topics for conversation were given from "Athletic sports" to "A fish story." Other games were also played.

—The Hatherly Street Railway Co. has leased land in Rockland for the site of a power station, and it looks as though the electric cars might soon be rolling down Union street.

—About 1.30 p. m. Tuesday an alarm of fire was given. It was caused by a slight blaze in the house of Frank Monehan at Curtis avenue. The origin of the fire was due to a defective chimney. A comic feature of this affair was afforded by a fireman sitting calmly on the roof of the burning building, smoking a cigar.

—"Misfortunes come not as single spies, but in battalions." About 1.30 a. m. Thursday another alarm was given. This fire was a more serious one. It completely destroyed the building on White street occupied by John T. Madden & Co., as a saloon. The closing of this was premature, as the license had about twenty-four hours more to run. The cause of the fire is unknown, but was ascribed, by one of the neighbors, to the usual combination of rats and matches.

—Rev. Theodore L. Dean of Malden will speak in the Universalist church next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock, as a candidate.

—The Executive Committee of the Improvement association will meet at the W. C. T. U rooms next Tuesday evening. A full attendance is desired as important business will come before the meeting.

—Over 200 persons have registered their estimates of the highest auction price of one of the Cook house lots. The auction sale will take place in the early part of June, and will probably be the largest affair of the kind ever held in South Weymouth. The highest estimate now is $240, and the lowest, $55.

—There will be an entertainment and sale in the Pond street school house, Friday evening, May 8th, for the benefit of the S. B. Cemetery.

—Thomas Kelley got both his hands caught in a rolling machine at his factory yesterday morning, and was badly injured.

Weymouth Centre.

—The East Weymouth branch of the No. Weymouth Cemetery Circle, will meet, with Mrs. Stephen T. Tirrell, Middle street, Friday, May 8. A full attendance is desired.

—Noah T. Joy proposes to have his yard "blossom as the rose," judging by the work being done on it.

—Tuesday was "visitor's day" at the school with no name on Middle street. The yard of the schoolhouse is being put in fine condition by J. H. and W. F. Cushing, and soon this school will be a complete whole, outside and in, in barring a name. We understand that Mr. Easton offers, if the committee will name it the Jefferson school, to put the name in large, gilt letters on the building. But why not call it the Humphrey school, a town name which has been identified with town affairs from its earliest history, and a branch of which family has always taken an active interest in the affairs of that locality.

North Weymouth Depot Items.

—Mr. John Humphrey is suffering from gangrene.

—Mr. McKenny has moved into Mrs. David Elm's house on Church street.

—The houses belonging to the Jones estate are being supplied with town water.

—Rev. Mr. Chapin, now at West Milton, and a former pastor of this church, was in town last Tuesday.

—Rev. Mr. Richards of Boston, occupied the pulpit of the Old North church last Sunday.

—Mrs. Mary Livermore will deliver a lecture May 22. Subject—"A Dream of Tomorrow.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Braintree.

—Miss Mary Lane entertained the Whist Club at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Lane, on Friday evening. As has been the rule with this club since its organization, the meeting was largely attended and interesting throughout. One of the new features was the strings of wampum, or Indian money, used in keeping tally, each point adding a wampum to one's string. It will be readily seen that an expert player may obtain a valuable souvenir in an evening. With this and other innovations the evening was one of the jolliest of the season.

—The Junior Tennis Club through some of its energetic members, has had its court in front of the Hollis block rolled and marked out. They find great pleasure in out of door practice these pleasant afternoons.

—A new, wide, stone crossing was laid across Elm street in front of the church Monday. The effort will no doubt be appreciated during wet and stormy weather.

—Chas. Hill has added a comfortable new carryall to his hack line which with the new coat of paint and varnish on his other one makes a very attractive outfit.

—E. Watson Arnold is having a spacious piazza added to the north side of his residence on Washington street.

—An interesting concert, a fine supper and a jolly good time, are some of the terms used by the large party of dancers to describe the Thirty Associates, grand reunion at the Town hall Wednesday evening. Brigham's orchestra of Marlboro rendered a very fine concert programme from 8 to 9. At 9 o'clock some 70 couples formed for the grand march and were led by Edwin F. Porter through some very pretty figures. The hall was profusely decorated with streamers and bunting, while large pictures decorated the walls. In the dance music as in the concert the orchestra met with great approval so that it scarce seemed 12 o'clock when the company sought the banquet hall and the fine supper served by Hicks of Boston.

The party broke up in the early hours of Thursday morning and the first streaks of dawn were beginning to peep before they said good night.

—L. W. Morrison is ill and confined to his bed. Dr. Dearing is in attendance. About a week ago Mr. Morrison slipped and injured his leg. Nothing was thought the matter but a slight bruise, but a sore developed which has been very painful. We are informed that he is improving.

—Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Morse celebrated their Golden Wedding on Tuesday evening. Mr. Morse, a carpenter by trade, is an "old settler" and much esteemed citizen of Braintree. Mrs. Morse was Miss Rachel French. A large number of friends both from Braintree and out of town expressed their congratulations and partook of the refreshments. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Morse were presented with a handsome mantle clock.

—Miss Fannie Hill was married to Francis Kain on Wednesday. The couple started on their wedding tour to New York immediately after the ceremony.

—A new house is being built on Ash street, Monatiquot Heights, by Ellsworth Arnold who has been successful in the past in building houses that meet with ready sale.

—Frank Roberts has bought a handsome new horse to take the place of the pretty little pony he lost last fall.

—Geo. Holbrook has moved into his new house on Middle street.

—Miss Hannah Spear, daughter of James Spear, died at her home on School street Thursday of heart disease. Miss Spear has long been an invalid and patient sufferer and the death is very sad.

—Calvin Thayer is sick with pneumonia.

—Charles Lothrop has been appointed a passenger brakeman on the Old Colony Railroad.

—Dr. Charles H. Daggett of Lynn, formerly of Braintree, has sold out his drug business at Lynn.

—The South Congregational church held their annual parish meeting Monday evening. The same officers were elected for the ensuing year. Rev. E. O. Dyer offered his resignation, to take effect September 1st, completing his eight years pastorate in that parish —The ladies belonging to the White Mountain party met as a surprise party with Mrs. T. B. Vinton Wednesday evening and spent a very pleasant time.

—Paul Jackson, conductor on the O. C. R. R. has purchased the lot on the corner of Ash street and Monatiquot avenue.

—J. D. Ellsworth of the Boston Herald has gone to New York on a short business trip.

—The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs held their anniversary at the lodge room Tuesday evening. Talent from Boston furnished a very pleasant entertainment. Supper and a general social time followed.

—Mr. Carter and Mr. Will Hayden each own a very fast horse which each will drive at the South Weymouth race track Saturday afternoon for a purse of $100. The time will be 2.40 or better.

—The ladies of the Universalist Society held a fair at the Town Hall Thursday evening, the proceeds to go towards a church. Entertainment, ice cream, candy and fancy articles for sale were generously patronized and realized to the society a very successful fair. This evening they give a May-pole party and dance and Mr. M. S. Brooks of Tufts College will give some readings.

East Weymouth Briefs.

—Mr. and Mrs. John A. Raymond and Mrs. Wm. T. Rice were present at the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Philander Thompson of Middleboro, last Friday night.

—Elder Asa Fogg of Lynn occupied the pulpit of the Zion Hill Chapel very acceptably last Sunday.

—Henry B. Raymond has been suffering with the grippe the past week.

W. J. Dunbar who was confined to the house with the grippe last week has recovered.

—Bela P. French has been in the clutches of the grippe the past week.

—The work on the residence of Dr. Joseph Chase, Jr., is being pushed to completion by Contractor Turner. When finished it will be one of the handsomest places in town.

—Samuel Orcutt caught 70,000 alewives last week. There is no recollection of so large a number being taken so early in the season.

—Capt. A. J. Garey has broken ground for the cellar for his new house on Mount Randall.

—A large number of Weymouth Odd Fellows enjoyed the celebration at Brockton Monday.

—Owing to a little lull in business at some of the factories the sidewalk committee has been increased the past few days.

—Mr. Andrews, formerly employed as a night baker by S. B. Totman, has resumed charge of that position.

—Dr. C. H. Pfefferkorn has purchased the property at the corner of School and Myrtle streets of Clarence Bates.

—The Loyal Temperance Legion will meet Monday afternoon. All children intending to become members must do so before June 1 as no new member will be admitted during June.

—A disgraceful scene was enacted upon Pleasant street, near the entrance to the cemetery, Sunday afternoon. Two men, evidently intoxicated, became involved in a fistic argument and pounded one another in a brutal manner. The fight attracted a large crowd of men, women and children to the spot.

—Mrs. Job Young has been seriously ill with pneumonia the past week.

—Luther Turner has taken a position at the Fore River Engine Works.

—Charles H. Stetson and Miss Mary Perry were married Saturday night by Rev. A. A. Kidder at the Methodist parsonage. A reception was held at the residence of Chas. C. Stetson on Grant St.

—Z. L. Bicknell Hose Co., No. 2 will give a reception and banquet to W. O. Collyer Hose Co., No. 1 in Masonic hall this evening.

—D. M. Easton and W. J. Beveredge were at the Tariff Reform meeting Tuesday night at the American House.

—The home of Mrs. Leavitt Bates shines with new paint and other improvements.

—The Congregational parsonage is being remodeled outside and in.

—Geo. W. Baker and family are at their country home once more.

—C. D. Canterbury is home from a business trip to Pittsburg.

—Mrs. Caleb Benson a former resident of East Weymouth is visiting Mrs. L. W. Cain.

—H. K. Cushing has just had town water put into his house.

—The officers of Delphi Council No. 12, and Plymouth Co. Council will be installed next Thursday evening. A banquet will follow.

—The Ladies' Social Circle connected with the M. E. church closed a very successful social and financial year last Wednesday and immediately entered upon a new year by the choice of Mrs. Leavitt Bates, president; Mrs. Wm. Thayer, vice-president; Mrs. R. B. Smith, secretary; Mrs. J. A. Cushing, treasurer. A fine tea was served and a pleasant evening was enjoyed.

—Town Clerk Raymond is now in telephone communication with the outside world having removed the instrument from his former office to his present office in the bank.

—The Pansy Circle of King's Daughters are making arrangements for an entertainment in the vestry of the M. E. church next Wednesday evening. Particulars will be given soon.

—Mrs. J. M. Dunbar who has been under the doctor's care for a few days is able to be out again.

—A. B. Powers of Taunton made a flying visit to his old home on Tuesday.

—The Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters are arranging for a pound party and entertainment in the Congregational church on Wednesday evening May 13.

—Emma P. Stetson oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Stetson died Tuesday of consumption, aged 19 years.

—Mrs. Etta W. Bass has taken a position with Z. L. Bicknell & Co. as clerk.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Marden have the sympathy of the public in their sad and sudden bereavement.

—Band hall was packed with a very enthusiastic audience of boot and shoe workers last night who listened with interest to addresses from H. H. Pray of the Nat. Ex. Board, General Secretary H. J. Skeffington and Charles J. McMorrow. The line of argument was for organized labor, but backed by the good sense of the best element of the working classes, and extreme caution exercised against getting into the difficulties experienced by labor organizations in the past by getting into bad hands.

—The Cadets Picnic which won such applause at the Unitarian Fair, was repeated last night in Odd Fellows Opera House, for a charitable purpose, to a large and enthuiastic audience. Master Stevie Pratt and Miss Elsie Litchfield, sustained their former reputation in the solos, while Frank Dee, a cadet, and Davis Clapp, Joe Sherman and Charlie Whelan as policemen, lost none of the laurels they won the first night.

—The fourth night of the Unitarian Fair was a grand climax to the whole enterprise, the entertainment being a promenade concert, followed by a dance. The net receipts of the fair were upwards of $600.

—F. H. Hall will occupy the residence of the late J. P. Baker.

—East Weymouth's much needed hotel will come at last. Mrs. J. M. Madan has leased the property lately occupied by Dr. Chase, and will open a first-class hotel and dining-rooms, on or about the first of June.

—Mr. C. B. Cushing has been ill with la grippe.

CHAPTER XV.

"How was it possible?"

Ten o'clock had come; so had the court; so had the public, in numbers largely increased. In Central City it was generally understood that on this day the proceedings would be brought to a close. The case for the government would be concluded by the evidence of Mr. Abrams—when he arrived—and by the exhibition of the books of the late concern of Braine & Co. The defence really had not a leg to stand on. Everybody in the enterprising community had been assured of this fact by the repeated assertions of Mr. Schonberg and the oracular announcements of the press; and it was the popular belief that all the unfortunate officer could do would be to assail the integrity of the witnesses, which attempt would be utterly overthrown by the vigilant prosecutor, who would then conclude by a scathing review of the evidence, after which the court would promptly adjudge him guilty and sentence him to be stripped of his uniform and drummed out forthwith.

Probably half the populace that thronged the court room that bright June morning fully expected before returning to their homes to see an army lieutenant degraded of his rank and thrust forth from the reservation at the points of the bayonets of the garrison. Dozens there were who knew better; but a community reared on the pap of sensationalism, as supplied by the modern press, could not accept the mild and moderate views of the minority as a possibility.

"Ten-fifteen," said old Grace, thrusting his watch back into the breast of his hot uniform coat, and looking about in some impatience. "What keeps Lawler?"

"Waiting for that Jew with his books. I believe he's somewhere in that crowd on the piazza. They say his newspaper man hasn't turned up yet; but I wish you would call the court to order, and give him a rap for delaying matters."

"Ah! another 'bus load from town," said the president, as there entered at the moment a party of ladies, escorted by the sandy haired judge advocate himself. All around the room the benches were occupied, but behind this party came two or three soldiers carrying chairs, and, much to the disgust of Mrs. Brodie and Mrs. Graves, who had obtained with a party of their friends the front row nearest the table of the accused, these chairs were planted before them and their view was cut off by the households of some of the prominent business men of Central City. So closely did they surround Mr. Hearn that he drew his seat a trifle nearer to that of the judge advocate.

There was a little more space on the other side of the table, where the correspondents were, but they seemed to prefer not to crowd these gentlemen, and nobody, of course, would think of intruding between them and the court. It was almost half after 10 when a soldier made his way through the throng, and, saluting Lawler, said something in a low tone, at which the judge advocate went over and whispered to Grace. A moment later the burly form of Maj. Kenyon was seen shouldering a way through the court room, while Dr. Ingersoll's spectacled face appeared just behind him.

Escorted by these gentlemen came Mrs. Lane, fresh, smiling, nodding cheerily to acquaintances in the court and around the room, looking cool and radiant in a spring costume which attracted the instant attention of the ladies and diverted their eyes from Miss Marshall, whose simple but inexpensive toilet was hardly worthy their glance, while to the grosser masculine understanding it was every whit as lovely as that of her friend and hostess. Behind them all came Sam with four folding chairs, and there being no other place available the major promptly plumped them down in front of Lawler's friends and motioned his party to seats. Georgia Marshall's color deepened, as any one who looked might see, for the chair to which she was assigned was so close to that of Hearn that by simply putting forth her hand she could have touched his sleeve.

His back was to the door and he had not seen them enter, yet at the perceptible hush that fell upon the chatter of the feminine spectators he knew who must be coming, and his pale face brightened with a sudden smile as, turning, he saw her almost at his elbow. Mrs. Lane nodded thrice, looking brightly and affectionately in his eyes, before she took her seat, just as though her efforts were to show all the throng that the women of the army held him guiltless. But Georgia Marshall's eyes were hidden for a moment behind their drooping lids. It was not until after she was seated and a glance around had told her that the gaze of all women was still on the lovely toilet that Mabel wore, that she stole a sudden look at him and met the brave light in his wan face.

"Good morning," he whispered. "I had not looked for anything half as good as this—to have you here so near me."

"It was my fault we were late; they were waiting for me. I—I had been to the hospital with Dr. Ingersoll— There's so much to tell you."

"Has any further news come?"

"Not that. Something else—something better. Don't you see how excited the major is?"

And indeed old Kenyon seemed fairly aglow. His eyes were snapping; his face was twitching and redder than ever. He was standing at that moment, searching all the windows with keen glance and looking along the faces of the soldiers who had gathered on all sides of the piazza without. Suddenly he seemed to see the features for which he was so eagerly looking, and with a quick gesture he called an orderly to his side and hastily scribbled these words on a piece of paper: "That third window on the west. Get around there, and don't let him out of your sight this day."

"Give that to the provost sergeant," he said. And the orderly disappeared.

Then came the voice of Col. Grace impatiently demanding of the judge advocate that he proceed, and Lawler, who had been fidgeting uneasily, arose:

"May it please the court, the witness Abrams has still failed to respond; but the evidence of the other witnesses has been so conclusive that I feel that I need not detain the court. All that now remains is to examine the books of the late post trader, which, as you have demanded, are here in my possession."

"The court will come to order," said Grace loudly.

A hush fell on the assembled throng, and all eyes were on the judge advocate, who was busily unwrapping the package which he produced from the folds of the linen duster which he had with apparent carelessness thrown upon his chair. Two ordinary looking, leather bound volumes presently appeared, which he proceeded to lay before Col. Grace:

"I now have the honor to submit for the examination of the court such books of the former post trader as bear upon this case. In them will appear the entries of the various amounts advanced by him to the accused, with their dates, etc., and just as stated by the witness Schonberg it will be seen that no payments beyond a few trifling sums have been recorded. The amount of the indebtedness as claimed in the specifications will be found to agree with the figures."

As he spoke Lawler had opened the volumes at points indicated by slips of paper and spread them upon the table. Grace adjusted his eyeglasses and conned over one of the books, while Maitland took the second. The other members of the court silently awaited their turn.

"I do not profess to be an expert at bookkeeping," said Maitland presently, "but do I understand the judge advocate to say that the witness Schonberg swears that these entries are correct?"

Lawler briskly turned over the leaves of the record before him.

"Here are his very words," he said. "'I myself made entries for the years '83 and '84, both in the day book and in the ledger. I kept all Mr. Braine's books. He gave me the items just as they occurred, and these entries were made by me at the different dates in those years just as they were directed by him.'"

"Oh, yes, yes; I remember," said the colonel. "I suppose it is all correct. Possibly other members of the court can tell more about this business than I can." And he passed the book down the table.

"Nothing could be more confirmatory of Schonberg's statements," said the judge advocate loudly. "One has only to look at these pages. You can see that different ink, different pens have been used here—prima facie evidence of their having been entered at totally different times, instead of being jotted down at once, as might be claimed by the defense but for this significant fact." And Lawler looked triumphantly about the room, ending with a glance at the little group that was near Hearn's table.

Miss Marshall was leaning forward, her dark eyes eagerly scanning the faces of the members of the court, and watching the books as they passed from hand to hand. Hearn, pale and patient, seemed waiting for the court to finish before asking that he, too, be permitted to examine the books.

"Do you suppose you could get them one moment?" whispered Miss Marshall to the major, who was sitting at her left. "I had to study books and bookkeeping once."

"I'll try," whispered Kenyon. "Hearn will, anyhow."

It was some time before they reached the foot of the table. Capt. Thorp and his next neighbor spent several minutes in studying the dates and figures, and at last handed them successively to the junior member. As soon as this gentleman had finished his scrutiny of the first, Lieut. Hearn held forth his hand:

"I presume I may be permitted to examine these exhibits?"

"I submit to the court that the accused has had frequent opportunity any time these last three months to examine these books, that he has been importuned, even, to do so, time and again, and has contemptuously refused. In view of these facts, his anxiety to see them now strikes me as an assumption." Lawler's manner was loud and truculent. He knew he was making a point.

"Assumption or not," said the president coolly, as Hearn's face flushed hotly under the sting, "it is the undoubted right of the accused to see any exhibit produced in court."

"I feel bound, then, to prevent their being improperly dealt with while in his hands," said Lawler, hanging on to his volumes and bent on making the scene as effective as possible.

"I will take all responsibility, sir. You may be sure the accused will not injure them," was Grace's prompt and indignant rejoinder.

And so, having interfered as long as possible, the lawyer grudgingly handed the book to Mr. Hearn, ostentatiously holding it open so that all near at hand could see the array of items and figures charged against him. In doing so he even raised the volume to the level of his own shoulder, and the leaf flapped lazily open until it stood in bold relief.

Never moving from her seat Miss Marshall, with glowing eyes and compressed lips, had silently noted every word and motion. She was bending forward eagerly, as though striving at a distance of six or seven feet to decipher the writing on the page thus glaringly exhibited. When finally Lawler laid it on the table, and Mr. Hearn began slowly studying the page, she still retained her position. Forgetful apparently of everything around her, the young girl was now so near that she could have touched the table at which sat the accused soldier.

Studying with pained, troubled face, Mr. Hearn at last began slowly turning over the pages and looking at the headings of the other accounts. There was something which he evidently desired to satisfy himself about, yet everything looked straight and plausible. Again bent on taking every opportunity to score a point against the accused Lawler suddenly arose:

"I submit again, if the court will but hear me, that while the accused has been accorded the privilege of examining his long neglected account he has no right whatever to pry into the affairs of other officers. I maintain that he should be compelled to confine his attention to his own page; there is quite enough there."

Kenyon suddenly felt a slim white hand gripping his wrist like a vise. Hearn was just turning down a page after briefly scanning the dates, but a rustle at his side attracted his attention? To his amazement Miss Marshall had bent forward out of her chair and was motioning and whispering to him:

"Again! Let me see through that page again."

The court was discussing at this instant the question raised by Lawler. Maitland and Thorp protested that Hearn had a right to compare other accounts with his own if he suspected fraud of any kind. Hearn himself, with throbbing heart, could only see and hear her. Obedient to her signal, he again raised the leaf, and would have turned the book so that she could read it right side up, but with imperious gesture she forbade.

"Hold it as it is," she signaled, as still bending low she seemed studying every line of the paper thus vertically placed between her and the sunshine flooding in at the open barrack window.

"Quick, now! More! more!" she motioned. And wondering he turned several pages, holding each a moment or two. But she shook her head impatiently and signaled, "Go on!" until in succession half a dozen leaves were turned; then with eager light in her eyes, again she held up a warning hand, and the page was stopped.

"Very well, then," Lawler was saying at this moment, with sarcastic emphasis. "On the principle that misery loves company, I suppose we must accord him the privilege of viewing the accounts of his fellow debtors." And with this fresh piece of civil legal practice on his lips, the judge advocate turned to the group on his left and stopped short in amaze.

Hearn, utterly lost to what was going on, was gazing with all his eyes at Miss Marshall, who, flushed, eager, almost radiant, once more was leaning back in her chair, but signaling to close the book. It was Kenyon now who was half rising and whispering sudden impetuous words to Hearn.

For a moment Lawler knew not what to think or say. Something told him that the cause he represented was in peril. A sense of disaster flashed upon him.

"At least the accused will have the decency to refrain from exhibiting officers' private accounts to the public," he said, with sudden return to his old manner, "and if he be through with the examination return these exhibits to me, that I may close the case, unless, perhaps, he desires to offer something further upon this subject."

Miss Marshall's fingers were twisting a tiny slip on which she had hurriedly penciled a word or two. One instant more and it was with Hearn. She had bent forward to pick up a fluttering scrap of paper; her deft fingers had but for the instant touched his drooping hand. Opening it he read, "Recall Schonberg instantly." Surprised, he glanced at her, but purposely she had averted her eyes. Kenyon was vehemently nodding.

"I must ask that Mr. Schonberg be recalled," said Hearn. "There is new matter here upon which I need to question him."

"The accused has already had opportunity to cross examine the witness, and has no further right," said Lawler.

"I repeat that there is new matter before the court in the introduction of these exhibits, on which I have a perfect right to question," replied Hearn.

"It is simply delaying matters," persisted Lawler. "When the accused said he had no further questions to ask, yesterday, I excused the witness, and he is now miles away, and cannot be had until morning, if he can then."

"The man is not fifty feet away at this moment," said Kenyon with sharp emphasis and a voice that rang through the room.

"When did the gentleman become counsel in this case, I beg to know?" sneered the judge advocate. "I protest against this disorder and interference with the court."

"Maj. Kenyon gives us important information, Col. Lawler," said Grace, "and if the man is here the court desires that he be recalled at once."

Lawler reddened with wrath. "If you know where he is, call him in," said he to Kenyon. And all eyes were turned to the door, where presently, escorted by the orderly of the court, Mr. Schonberg appeared, hat in hand, bowing profusely and politely to the court, yet looking, as Mr. Martin expressed it, "rather pasty about the gills." He was scuttling down the back stairs when headed off by the provost sergeant. He had doubtless heard the summons for his recall and had hoped to get out of the way. All eyes but Hearn's and Kenyon's, Mabel Lane's and Georgia's were upon him.

With lightning speed the latter was writing a little note, and this, too, a moment later was in the young lieutenant's hand. He read it. A wild light of wonderment and incredulity leaped into his face. He hastily raised the volume between him and the opposite window, held a leaf between him and the sunshine, gazed quickly and earnestly, and then laying the book once more on the table turned with swimming eyes and looked full upon her, his lips quivering, his face aglow with joy, hope, gratitude and a fervor of admiration and worship no woman on earth could fail to see; but Georgia's downcast face was hidden; she had drawn her fanlike Spartan shield between her glowing cheek and the kindling eyes she dared not meet.

It was Lawler's rasping voice that recalled the young soldier to his senses:

"Well, sir, the witness is here."

There was a silence as of solitude in the great heated room. Obedient to the clumsy formality of a military court, Mr. Hearn slowly wrote his question on a slip of paper and handed it to the judge advocate; the latter read it, threw it down, and pettishly exclaimed:

"This is mere waste of valuable time, I say. The witness has practically answered this all before."

"What is the question?" asked the president.

"The accused asks the witness to state to the court what reason he has for being so positive about the time these entries were made. So long as my witness is positive I conceive it to be no affair of the defense why or how he is."

"Oh, I see no special object in the question," said Grace, "yet there is no impropriety in asking it. At all events, I am entirely willing to bear the responsibility. The witness will answer."

Could he but have seen the flash of gratitude in Miss Marshall's eyes! It was only a flash. Almost instantly again they were fixed on the pudgy features of the witness.

"Why, certainly, gentlemen, I can answer. Mr. Braine died in the spring of '85, and couldn't have told me to make those entries after he was dead, could he? No. They were made, just as I said, in the winter of '83 and during the year of '84, just when he told me to make them."

"Are you satisfied?" asked the judge advocate, turning sharply to Hearn.

"One moment," answered that young gentleman placidly, as his pencil rapidly copied another question on the slip before him. Finishing this he arose. "I beg to ask the especial attention of the court to this question," he said.

There fell a hush as of death upon the throng. With parted lips Georgia Marshall again bent eagerly forward until she could see the Jew's twitching face. Schonberg turned a shade paler and glanced half appealingly up at the lawyer, who, with a sneer of assumed contempt, held forth his hand for the slip. But Hearn looked straight into Lawler's eyes. The judge advocate took the paper, turned it carelessly over, elevated his nose with apparent indifference, leaned back in his chair, glanced at it, started.

"Let me see that book!" he exclaimed, as he sprang to his feet, holding forth an eager hand.

"Presently, sir," answered Hearn, holding the volume behind him. "Kindly put the question first."

"Don't let that book go!" whispered Miss Marshall hastily, her words addressed to Kenyon, yet meant for and heard by Hearn. Mabel Lane's face was flushing with excitement. Every eye in the room was intent on the scene.

"What is the question, Mr. Judge Advocate?" sharply inquired Col. Grace. "Why do you seek to suppress it?"

"I protest against the insinuation, sir. I simply seek to protect an honest man from insult. I ask the accused for a book that I may satisfy myself he has reason for a question otherwise unjustifiable."

"Mr. President, I demand the question as a right!" exclaimed Hearn in tones thrilling with excitement and ringing through the court. "The witness has sworn he made these entries in '83 and '84. Look gentlemen, look at this page, one and all, and compel the answer."

He sprang forward and laid the book in Grace's hand.

"Hold it to the light, sir. Look at the water mark. I demand an answer to my question."

Trembling with emotion, his blue eyes ablaze, his fingers working nervously, the young soldier towered above the heads of the court. Every breath in all the great room seemed hushed, though hearts beat and hammered like mad. All eyes were on Grace now as he adjusted his glasses, held the page aloft and scrutinized the paper. Then, with a quick gleam in his sharp old eyes, he beckoned excitedly to Maitland, pointed with his forefinger to the wavy lines of the water marks, and dropped the book upon the table, his finger between the leaves, a threatening frown on his brow.

"Put the question, Mr. Judge Advocate," his stern voice was heard through the room. "And you, sir, answer."

Lawler hesitated one minute, glanced dubiously round. Then, as though seeing the hopelessness of resistance, he read in accents that trembled despite his efforts these words:

"How was it possible for you to write in '83 and '84 on paper that was not manufactured until two years afterward?"

HOW THEY MADE READY.

THE TRIALS OF PREPARING FOR HOUSEKEEPING.

Experiences of One Couple in Selecting a House, Buying Furniture and Providing for the Kitchen by One Who Knows All About It.

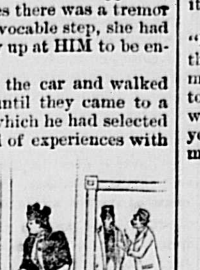

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

SHE was going to be married. So was he. They were going to be married to each other, and he wondered if everybody in the car knew it. No young man ever became engaged with a more profound conviction that he had won the most superlatively superior young woman in the world, and no man's pride in the event, therefore, could have been loftier; and he was counting the days to the joyful ceremony with all possible anticipations of happiness, yet there was a sneaking sense of discomfort in these preliminary arrangements that shamed him, and which he could not throw off. He was sure that if he had been taking his best girl to a matinee no one would have cast more than a passing glance at him and his companion; now every man in the car was devouring them with his eyes and smirking behind his beard.

As for her, it was a delightful excursion. The world might have stood aside to giggle as she passed, and she wouldn't have known the difference. Her head was in a whirl and bubble of happiness, and though at times there was a tremor at the coming irrevocable step, she had only to glance shyly up at HIM to be entirely reassured.

At last they left the car and walked along a side street until they came to a neat little house, which he had selected after a weary round of experiences with agents and delusive advertisements. The agent of this house was waiting for them at the door, keys in hand. He gave them one glance and smothered a smile of recognition. He knew them for going-to-be-married persons, and the uncomfortably happy young man knew that he knew it. There was no betrayal on either side, however, and the three began an inspection of the house. She had said so many times that she would go anywhere in the world with HIM that he was not a little startled to see how critically she examined the minutest details.

AT THE SINK.

While he was expatiating upon the excellent outlook from the front room she was raising and lowering the windows; when he called attention to the tasteful decorations she was cross-questioning the agent as to the drawing qualities of the flues. And when he pointed with pride to the cozy dining room, with the slide connection with the kitchen, she darted away, and they found her turning the water on at the sink and watching it escape down the drain pipe. Then there were rattling of the stove lids, pulling at the dampers, peering into the washtubs and a running fire of new questions about the capacity of the chimney and other features of a range. Would it draw steadily in an east wind or on a rainy day? How much coal would it consume? She hoped it would be possible to bake a pie in the oven through to the bottom crust without burning the top, until at last the young man was nearly bowled over by a great impression that perhaps SHE had her own notions and might upset all his fine arrangements. Meantime the agent, wise and experienced man, stood by, answering all questions with the most overwhelming gravity and respect, and waited.

When she at last saw the marks of terror on HIS face, and learned in a few broken sentences the cause of the phenomenon, she—well, the agent found something to look after up stairs, and when he came down the young man signed the lease and paid the deposit required to secure it. And after they had separated he walked at a tremendous pace to his office, mentally practicing saying "My wife" all the way.

The house had to be furnished, and she of course was to select the furniture. He would have been wholly glad of this if it had not been for the necessity of going with her to assist in the final choice. She developed an unmistakable timidity about shopping of this nature, and before they set out on their next excursion he endeavored to impress upon her the desirability of conducting the affair just as if they had been married a long time.

"WE'LL TAKE THAT."

"I don't suppose we can make it appear that we are old stagers," he said, "but it ought to be easy to give the impression that we have been boarding a year or so and are now going to housekeeping."

To this she sweetly assented, and they set out to impress all manner of salesmen with that idea. When they got to the furniture store, which she had courageously visited alone on a previous day, the first thing she did was to lead him to a remote department to look at a big easy chair which she thought would be just the thing for him.

"Yes, we'll take that," he assented nervously.

"Oh, but you mustn't think, dear," she exclaimed, "that you must take it just because I like it! That's for you, you know and we mustn't be hasty in buying things that must last us so long. Don't you see?"

He saw. So did the clerk, and he knew that the clerk saw too. He tried desperately to frame his lips to some such expression as "Very well, wifey," but no word of the desired character would come at command; so he pinched her arm, and she, comprehending, whispered that she wouldn't do it again. There was an awkward pause, the clerk standing by, note pad in hand. Would the lady take the chair? She looked up at him; he was engrossed in studying a bronze statue that he couldn't have bought had he wanted it. So she fluttered an inaudible yes, and they passed on. She had been divided in favor between two sets of dining room appointments, and he wanted to take the first he came to.

She could see, and worse yet, feel the tumult of embarrassment that was surging within him, but she knew what was wise, bless her sagacious noddle! and she insisted upon careful examination and comparison of prices. She hated to trouble him, but—and she pressed her rosy lips hard together and then entered upon a disquisition as to the relative merits of the two sets—how one was substantial, but not quite in harmony with the decorations, and the other, though cheaper, was pretty and harmonious, and might do until the time should come when they might need a larger house, and then they would have to change anyway—and they decided upon the cheaper outfit.

Other chairs, carpets, tables and the like were passed in review, and both he and she came to a pause, each waiting for the other to suggest necessities unaccounted for. The clerk helped them out. They would find chamber furniture on the third floor, back. So up they went, and when the whole list of furnishing was complete the clerk made out a statement. He paid the bill, and conscious of a great load off his mind stepped out with her upon the street. There she reminded him that all manner of kitchen and table ware was yet to be purchased. With a gesture of despair he begged to be let off.

"That's your department," he pleaded. "You get what you want. You know all about it, and I can't do any good."

Whereupon, almost tearfully, she besought him to remember that they were going to live together, and that she could never do anything at all without him. And of course he went along, contenting himself with a protest that he should simply stand around and let her do the buying. He kept his word for a while after they had entered a kitchen furnishing store. She couldn't select an iron basting spoon or a meat chopper, much less a kettle, without bringing it over to show to him, and get his opinion or assent. Not even ungenerous scowls on his part could check her in this madness, and at last in self defense he went to buying on his own account. His attention was attracted by a mechanical device for facilitating the mashing of potatoes, and he brought it to her triumphantly.

"What's that good for?" she exclaimed. "I never saw such a thing before! I use the old style," and so on, and when with marital dignity he ordered the salesman to include it in the bill she added: "Very well, but that's the last. Why, dear, if you go to buying everything that's got a machine to it you'll ruin us in a year!"

"WHAT'S THAT GOOD FOR?"

He desisted, and after some further agony the outfit was completed, and the salesman, as was proper, turned to her and asked where the articles should be sent. She gave the address of the little house in the suburbs, and then the salesman asked:

"What name, please?"

"Miss J——; no—that is—I mean—" and her blushes got in the way of any further utterance.

He groaned and the salesman smiled.

"See here," said he, taking the salesman aside, "you do all those things up and I'll pay the bill. I'll give you my name and address, and some time next week I'll give you the tip when to send the stuff up. See?"

It must not be thought for an instant that this harrowing experience preluded any discomfort after that day "next week" when the kitchen goods were delivered at the little house. Not at all. Like all veracious romances, this statement of fact ends with, "And so they were married and lived happily together ever afterward."

The Woman About Town.

"The Woman About Town" of The New York Evening Sun is Miss Helen Watterson, a young woman from "the west." Besides the witty and thoughtful utterances of "The Woman About Town," she prepares much other matter for the paper, writes specials, reads MSS. and does general office work. As a conversationalist Miss Watterson is delightful. She possesses a keen sense of humor and has always something bright and fresh to say on every topic.

Miss Watterson is a quiet dresser and has a preference for sober browns and soft grays. She lives with Mrs. Abby Sage Richardson.

It is much easier nowadays for a woman who can write well to get into journalism than for a man who can write equally well.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

Polite Conversation and the Art of Leaving—The Amiable Visitor.

There are hostesses who show disinclination to allow a visitor to depart, and hang on to the skirts of conversation with unwearied persistence, says Harper's Bazar.

But the visitor is in better case. Very pardonably she may resume her seat, for that has a complimentary aspect, while for a hostess to sit down after her visitor has risen would signify hopelessness to the point of reckless expression, and be properly resented. No, one must stand until the last gasp, and even though that be the penalty.

There is a pre-eminence as guest that ought to inspire to the best efforts, and it is one that by virtue of the position equally belongs to the humblest of us all. The amiable visitor is not only at ease, but puts others at ease, and the simplest method is to indulge those who must conform to her slightest inclination in the enjoyment of comfortable seats while she brings to them the freshest, choicest news from the outside world.

There are many women who, when in visiting attire, feel the obligations of what they believe to be polite conversation. What one discourses about, however, is not of so much moment, provided it be tempered with good feeling. Even servants and the weather may be made enjoyable by novel and original treatment. The importance of a subject has little to do with the charms of conversation, nor is it wise to express from any subject all that it will bear.

In the light touch and go that give to conversation its chief charm every one has experienced supreme moments of buoyancy and enjoyment. Decline from this, which is but a return to a former level, has the effect of hinting at flagging senses, of the necessity of putting forth effort to recover lost ground, of possible strain. This is nature's happy signal of the moment to terminate a visit. The indications of departure when the pleasure of a visit is at its height cause a flattering shock of surprise. "What, so soon?" "You must really go?"

But the moment of rising should only precede the moment of going. When one is reconciled to departure its anticipation is begun. A few gracious words, a brief pressure of the hand, and the door is closed, leaving a welcome presence missed, a regretful sense of vacancy, but one soon filled with pleasant memories and a hope of speedy return.

Premature Burial.

From time to time the subject of premature burial is revived by sensational tales which prove to be the result of a too vivid imagination on somebody's part. The London Lancet comforts its readers with this assuring paragraph: "So far as this country is concerned, there has not been a single authenticated case recorded of premature burial."

ROSES.

I may not speak in words, dear, but let my words be flowers,
To tell their crimson secret in leaves of fragrant fire;
They plead for smiles and kisses as summer fields for showers,
And every purple veinlet thrills with exquisite desire.

O, let me see the glance, dear, the gleam of soft confession
You gave my amorous roses for the tender hope they prove;
And press their heart-leaves back, love, to drink their deepest passion,
For their sweetest, wildest perfume is the whisper of my love!

My roses, tell her, pleading, all the fondness and the sighing,
All the longing of a heart that reaches thirsting for its bliss;
And tell her, tell her, roses, that my lips and eyes are dying
For the melting of her love-look and the rapture of her kiss.

—John Boyle O'Reilly.

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 3, 1891.

One day during the famous Guiteau trial after several insanity sharps had given voluminous testimony both for and against the sanity of the murderous wretch, a physician of national reputation said to me: "I do not believe that there is a living physician who has for five years been in charge of an insane asylum, or employed in one, who is not himself insane, according to the commonly established methods of determining sanity." These curious remarks were recalled to my mind today while listening to the members of the Association of Medical Superintendents of American Institutions for the Insane, now holding its annual session in this city read learned papers on such subjects as "The increase and prevention of insanity," "Brain degeneration," "Abuse of hypnotics" and "Cranial measurements of the insane." There are nearly a hundred of the most eminent physicians in their line in attendance and if my friend was right in his opinion there isn't a sane man among them, for they have all been connected with asylums public or private for more than five years—many of them for nearly half a century.

The new treasurer of the United States, who entered upon his duties this week, is a quiet, rather clerical looking elderly man, smoothly shaven with kindly gray eyes, and a full head of iron-gray hair. That he is a man well posted in the ways of the world was fully proven by his reception of the first newspaper man who called on him. He told the scribe that he was always glad to see newspaper men, as his experience with them had been that they never wittingly bored a busy man. Could anything have been more Talleyrandishly diplomatic. Mr. Nebeker proposes bringing his family to Washington just as soon as he can find a house that suits him, but he says that they will not enter the social swim, as he has seen enough of the ways of the world to be perfectly satisfied with watching the social struggle from the outside, and that he does not believe that the women in his family will be radically different from the rest of their sex if they do not, within a year from the date of their coming to Washington, make him change his mind, at least as far as they are concerned, about society.

If you are not a horsey man you are not "in it" this week here, the spring running meeting of the Washington Jockey Club having filled our hotels with men whose most conspicuous marks are striped shirts, loud clothes, louder voices and big diamond rings and pins, and who talk of nothing but the chances of this horse to win and the odds offered on that horse.

A member of the joint House and Senate committee now engaged in trying to devise a method of stopping the which everybody knows to exist, recalled the fact that Representative Flower, an open candidate for the governorship of New York and a prospective candidate for the Presidency once, under a "Leave to print" inserted the entire Constitution of the United States preceded by a few words of his own in the Congressional Record. He was asked by one of his colleagues what his constituents would think of such a proceeding. "Think of it," replied Mr. Flower, the smile widening on his broad face, "why my dear fellow the most of them will think that I wrote it."

THE WASHINGTON CLUB FOR LADIES

has elected the following board of governors: Mrs. Admiral Lee, president; Mrs. Sweet, first vice-president; Mrs. D. P. Morgan, second vice-president; Mrs. Senator Hawley, Mrs. Senator McPherson, Mrs. Gen. Sheridan, Mrs. Winthrop, Mrs. S. O. Richey, Mrs. N. S. Lincoln, Mrs. Dr. Hammond, Madame de Sibour, Miss Olive Risley Seward and Mrs. Isham Hornsby. The club starts out with more than a hundred members. It is proposed to make the wives of all the foreign ministers honorary members, and the same courtesy will be extended to distinguished American women residing outside of Washington.

Grace Greenwood (Mrs. Lippincott), who has always had a fondness for Washington has decided to leave New York and make this city her city home. She will be received with open arms by her many friends here.

Talk about pluck in the face of obstacles. It is personified in Miss Marion Foster, an Ohio girl now in this city. She some years ago lost the use of her lower limbs entirely her only method of locomotion being a wheeled chair, but that did not prevent her becoming an artist of repute, and travelling all over this country and a considerable portion of Europe, where she is known as the

"LITTLE INVALID ARTIST."

She is here looking up subjects for her great historical paintings for the World's Fair, which are to include portraits of all the prominent public men of the time, both National and State. Miss Foster has painted portraits of Presidents Garfield, Arthur and Cleveland from sittings. Madame Adelina Patti, who is an ardent admirer of Miss Foster, calls her "my good genius." The yound lady is a brilliant conversationalist and a ready writer as well as an artist, and she deserves to obtain the fame she has struggled so hard for, and if she lives she will get it. Such courage as hers never fails.

WASHINGTON, May. 4, 1891.

Much speculation has been indulged in as to which of the speakership candidates would be the recipient of the votes of the representatives who belong to the Farmer's Alliance, and whether they would all vote together. The Alliance representatives have as a rule fought shy of expressing their preferences, if they had any, contenting themselves with saying that they proposed supporting the candidate who was willing to make the most concessions to to their principles; but Representative Edmunds, of Virginia, who is here for a day or two looking after the interests of some of his constituents,

IS MORE OUTSPOKEN THAN ANY

Alliance man with whom I have talked. He said: "I am for Crisp. He is one of the ablest men in the House, and he has pre-eminently all the qualifications that should be looked for in the Speaker of the next House." Mr. Edmunds is a democrat, as well as an alliance man, and he will attend the democratic caucus, and will of course be bound by its decision.

If it be true, as I have been informed, that the liquor dealers of the country propose making an organized fight upon the candidacy of Representative Crisp because of his being a prohibitionist, it is probable that the Alliance men may all be inclined to support him, as nearly all of them are advocates of temperance and natural opponents of the dealers in intoxicating liquors. Still it is a serious question whether any man can be elected who is opposed by the whiskey men, so great an influence do they command in our politics.

The American Medical Association will meet in annual convention here tomorrow. There will be more than a thousand regularly credited delegates, and it is expected that there will be about three times as many visiting physicians. The convention will last four days.

Behring Sea has been for several days the subject of many rumors, probably because of the fact that the sealing season will be open in a few days. First it was said that Secretary Foster had instructed the commanders of the Revenue cutters caught illegally taking seals; then that England proposed sending half a dozen war ships there for the purpose of forcibly rescuing any vessel sailing under the British flag that might be seized. But little is known positively of the present status of the matter, hence the rumors. The special agents of the Treasury department have recommended that all sealing be stopped for one or more seasons, to prevent extinction of the seals, and Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister, has intimated that his government would agree to that if the United States would see that its citizens caught no seals. But this proposition is violently opposed by the North American Fur Company, the present lessees of the sealing privilege, which denies that there is a scarcity of seals. Secretary Foster has sent J. Stanley Brown, once the private Secretary of President Garfield, to examine and report to him the condition of the seals. Secretaries Blaine and Foster have had several conferences on this matter, and it is said that they are not in entire accord thereon.

The following payments have been made under the act providing for that paid the direct tax levied in 1861: To Arkansas, $156,272.65; California, $208,246.89; Colorado, $22,189.96; Delaware, $70,772.02; Illinois, $167,760.69; Indiana, $719,144.03; Kansas, $60,981.83; Maine, $357,702.10; Massachusetts, $696,107.88; Michigan, $420,865.66; Minnesota, $6,923.72; Missouri, $646,958.23; New Hampshire, $181,891.02; New Jersey, $382,614.83; New York, $2,213,330.86; North Carolina, $377,836.43; Ohio, $1,332,025,93, and Tennessee, $393,012.07.

The Treasury department is taking steps to have the new immigration law strictly enforced, and the special agents who spent last week in New York observing its workings, think that it will prove very beneficial by shutting out an undesirable class of immigrants.

The recently concluded agreement—not treaty, as so many newspapers have called it—with Spain,

GIVING US TRADE RECIPROCITY

with Cuba and Porto Rico, is in Mr. Blaine's possession, but it will not be made public until after Mr Harrison returns. But as it is based upon the reciprocity clause of the McKinley tariff act, it cannot differ materially from the one made with Brazil.

The Farmer's Alliance already has permanent headquarters here, and it is expected that both the republican and democratic parties will shortly follow suit, so that Washington will ere long be the seat of political bustle again.

Secretary Foster says there is no danger of a deficit in the Treasury, and that his decision to continue the four and a half per cent. bonds that will mature next Sept. at 2 per cent., was only because he thinks he can save money for the Treasury by so doing. Democrats still insist that there will be a deficit.

WILLARD.

Regular Monthly Meeting of the Executive Committee of the South Weymouth Improvement Association.

Twelve members of the Executive Committee of the S. W. I. A. attended the regular monthly meeting at the W. C. T. U. rooms Tuesday evening, president Edgar R. Downs in the chair.

The Sidewalk committee by James Moore, chairman, reported that the cost of a crossing of paving stones from Joseph Dyer's store to the Loud building in Independence square would be about $100. No action was taken on this report.

The chairman of the Tree committee, Dr. C. C. Tower, reported that about fifty trees had been set out this season, the presents of Henry B. Reed, Josiah Reed and others to the society, some elms and some maples. Two trees have been righted up and two stumps extracted. The cost of this work exceeded the appropriation of $50 made at the last meeting and accordingly an additional appropriation of $50 was made for the use of the committee.

Chairman of the Railroad committee Edward B. Nevin, reported that the O. C. R. R. authorities had promised to construct a suitable crossing in Railroad square from the Cook building to the depot. In regard to increased railroad facilities it was said that the people of Whitman and Abington were petitioning for another train into Boston in the morning and out in the afternoon. The Railroad committee will look out for the interests of South Weymouth in any contemplated changes of trains.

The Public Grounds committee, Elbridge Nash, chairman, will see that suitable durable drinking vessels are attached to the fountains in Columbian, Independence and Liberty squares. Also they will substitute a new sign-board on the fountain in Columbian square for the present guide-post

The chairman of the Business committee Louis A. Cook, called the attention of the meeting to the subject of electric roads, strongly advocating them. He indorsed both the Weymouth and Hingham Co. in which he is a stockholder and also the Hatherly Street Railway Co. of which he is a director. He announces that in a few days he should give citizens a chance to subscribe to stock of the latter company. It was voted that the president call a meeting of the citizens of South Weymouth in Engine hall to discuss the whole matter of electric railroad communication between this village and neighboring villages, and ask representatives of the interested companies to address the meeting.

The president, the secretary, and the treasurer were appointed a committee to arrange for the annual supper of the association in Fogg's Opera House about the middle of June.

Five dollars for each yard was appropriated for the Bates and South High school. The attention of the Public Grounds committee was called to the desirability of securing uniformity in the removal of fences.

FIRE.

Bourk's Stable Destroyed.

Last Saturday evening, at about 7.40 o'clock, the large stable owned and occupied by E. Bourk, on Tremont street, was discovered to be on fire. The fire was first discovered, it is said, by Leonardo Mundles, a man in the employ of Mr. Bourk, who was just returning from supper. He saw a light in the loft, and running up the stairs, saw the hay on fire. He gave the alarm, and immediately turned his attention to the horses below, which were all got safely out, as were also nearly all the carriages, buggies, express wagons, and harnesses. Mr. Burke, himself, was away in East Braintree, and only arrived in time to see the flames roaring from the roof of his stable.

The lack of a fire alarm was once more made manifest, and the need of one proven beyond a doubt, as was also the need of a supply of hose somewhere nearer to Washington square, than the engine house at Lincoln square, and also some quicker method of securing the application of the high pressure service.

After what seemed an interminable delay, though it was really only a few minutes, the Governor Hose Carriage appeared on the scene, and hose was quickly attached to the hydrant on Tremont street, near the burning stable. Here at the southerly corner of the barn, a brave fight was made as is shown by the Bailey house being still standing, as is also a large part of the wall of this side of the barn itself. William Burton held the pipe here, and stood his ground bravely in the face of a tremendous heat. Other assistance was soon at hand. The Thomas South Hose Carriage of East Braintree was quickly on the scene and rendered efficient aid, particularly upon the roof of the High school building. The Quincy steamer arrived in a remarkably short space of time, and, located at the hydrant in front of Harlow's drug store, played immense quantities of water through two lines of hose. Steamer No. 1 of Weymouth forced water through a very long line of hose from the hydrant in front of P. H. Blanchard's; Steamer No. 2 of East Weymouth played from the hydrant near King's, the undertaker's warerooms, and all the hydrants near the fire were brought into use as fast as hose could be procured for them. Wm. O. Collyer Hose No. 1 was present, as was also Z. L. Bicknell Hose No. 2, and Hardscrable Hook and Ladder Co. In all, thirteen streams of water were thrown upon the fire and the endangered surrounding buildings, in addition to which private lawn hose was effectually used by many.

In a little more than an hour after the fire broke out it was under control, and the danger of a general conflagration averted.

The fire department, under the direction of Engineer Bicknell, worked hard and faithfully, and in spite of the criticisms freely expressed by some, deserves praise as it is very evident to all who look at the ruins, and who knew of the large size and height of the burned building, that the saved without good work and a tremendous amount of water. It is easy to criticise and to see mistakes after it is all over, but in the midst of the excitement, it is not so easy to handle a large fire with a volunteer fire department, who have very little training and small pay. The thanks of the community are due to the local firemen, and also to those from East Weymouth, East Braintree, Quincy and North Weymouth, who so readily responded to the call for aid.

The losses may be summed up, as nearly as can be ascertained, as follows: E. Bourk's loss on stable, $6,000, on house $400, on sleighs, hay and other stock, $1,000; insured for $3,000 on stable and $1,000 on house. Mr. Bourk also sustained some damage to his furniture, carpets, etc. High school building, damage to roof $200. John Bailey damage to house $200, furniture $75.

Mr. Bourk and family have occupied temporarily, until his own house is repaired, the vacant house belonging to A. J. Richards. His express office and headquarters will be in the building known as the "Bakery," and lately used as a printing office, and his horses are accommodated, some in the barn of A. J. Richards & Sons, and others in the barns of various friends, who have been very ready to assist him in his time of trouble. He certainly has the sympathy of all, and the universal wish of the community, that he may soon recover from his loss.

NOTES.

—The firemen worked all night and nearly all day Sunday.

—There was three runaways in Washington square, but no one was seriously injured.

—There was "strong water," as well as Lake Wessagusett, used by some of the firemen. To fight fire outside, there must be a fire inside.

—The East Weymouth department put in an appearance in quick time.

—Chief Ripley of Quincy, drove into Washington square in just 12 minutes from the time the alarm sounded in Quincy.

—Clifford Thayer, a former resident of Weymouth, was engineer of the Quincy steamer.

—The Quincy steamer was here in 18 minutes from the time of getting the alarm.

—The house of John Garrity, lately bought by Mrs. Mannion, took fire twice on the roof, and the house occupied by Mr. Ames also caught from the sparks.

—The houses of A. W. Blanchard, James W. Rand, and Geo. H. Baker, were kept deluged with water by the use of lawn hose, and even so far away as Mr. S. W. Gutterson's, the sparks fell in showers, necessitating a close watch on the roofs.

—Mr. Bourk had 18 horses in the building when the fire broke out, and 4 more out; total 22.

—George Walsh injured his ankle jumping over a fence.

—"Nardo" had his foot quite seriously injured while getting out the horses. A horse became unmanageable and threw him down and stepped on his foot.

—The fire in the ruins was still burning on Wednesday, and every few hours since the fire, water had been played on it to deaden it. "It would not 'Out.'"

—"Nardo" says that if he had had some hose handy to take up into the hay loft when he first saw the fire, he could have put it out in five minutes.

Tim White was on hand and disconnected the electric wires leading to the burning building to guard against accident.

—Insurance has been awarded as follows: Bailey's house, $170, furniture not insured; Bourk's barn, $3000, contents not insured; Bourk's house, $365, furniture not insured; High school house not insured.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

The column under this title will be given to the people for a free discussion of any and all subjects. The management of the paper distinctly disclaim any responsibility for the opinions here expressed.

MESSRS EDITORS:

A kind friend has just sent me a copy of a magazine to which I would like to call the attention of your readers, as it contains so much useful information in such small space that it would be a valuable addition to the reading matter in any household. I refer to the "Review of Reviews," which condenses the world's doings in a hundred pages of clearly printed matter.

In the current number under the heading of "The Progress of the World" is given a succinct account of everything of political interest from the Behring Sea Question to the Australian Federation, with a forcible sketch of the Nicaragua Ship Canal Company and its work, and something of interest upon Russia in the Southeast, as well as the Parnell-Gladstone imbroglio.

This magazine is not confined to politics, but skims the cream from the newspapers of the world both religious and humorous, copying foreign caricatures of political and social personages, and emphasizing the power an artist's pencil has in great public contests.

New books are carefully criticized, good portraits of notable people are inserted, in short it is a "much in little" and cannot fail to be a benefit to all who read it.

I hope it may find a place in our public library even if some less worthy periodical is dropped, for it would be of infinite use to the young. We are too apt to forget in teaching past events to the rising generation, that we are making History ourselves and live in an important decade, if it is the last of the century. A volume of Review of Reviews would be more valuable as a reference book than any encyclopedia ever printed. Its American edition is published in Astor Place New York, and its price is only $2.00 a year. F. H.

A Weymouth Man.

EDITORS GAZETTE:

I was very much interested in the letter of our friend N. Morse in the Peoples Column, but with all his energy to make me out a new comer I think he failed to do it. I was born in Weymouth in 1829 and I have never lived in any other town and have always paid my taxes. I was fully aware that my father was not born in Weymouth without searching the records, and was also aware that our forefathers were not born in Weymouth. My father settled in Weymouth in 1818 and never lived in any other town and paid his first tax in Weymouth. He died June 15, 1882, making his home in the good old town 64 years. If he was not a native, he was no stranger.

Now about the only name N. M. claims to be native is that of Bicknell. The Bicknells are descended from Zachary Bicknell, and it is likely that even Zachary Bicknell was not born in Weymouth. To follow out N. M's. theory there are no natives in town.

It is immaterial to me whether the town is divided or not, but I believe it will not be divided in this century. I believe it to be as impossible as it would be for our friend Morse to prove that Adam was born in Weymouth. Dr. Tower came to Weymouth in 1860 and this is his home, and we up this way call him a Weymouth man. I think any man who lives here and makes it his home, pays taxes and votes in the town with the intention of staying here, is a Weymouth man, and the more the better. "PERO."—A. RAYMOND.

WEYMOUTH CENTRE, May 6, 1891.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Referring to the fire at Weymouth on Saturday evening last, I feel impelled to say a word in favor of the firemen, who heretofore have been the subjects of adverse criticism from two-and-sixpenny quill drivers who take the advantage of their position to vent their personal feelings in uncomplimentary reports. This seems at present to be the relationship of our very efficient fire department and the reporters.

Now Mr. Editors, I have been in my time over twenty years in active service both on hand and steam engines, and I must be a novice if I am not able to tell by the results, first knowing the conditions, whether or not our department or any individual of it was rattled at the last or even the late fire near the canal in East Weymouth.

In my opinion they were both admirably handled, and I venture the assertion that any expert fire underwriter would so decide; and it ill becomes any reporter, more especially when he has been the recipient of many kind attentions from the citizens of Weymouth, particularly the fire department, to willfully misrepresent them in the eyes of the public.

Our firemen are deserving of all and more, than usually falls to their lot, and I feel it my justice to tender them this word of commendation.

North Weymouth Improvement Association.

The North Weymouth Improvement Association held an adjourned meeting at the office of E. S. Beals, Tuesday evening. J. W. Bartlett, president, in the chair.

Much interest was taken in the continued improvement of the "Garden of Weymouth."

B. F. Thomas, A. W. Bartlett, Noble Morse, and J. L. Newton were appointed a committee to collect dues and solicit new membership.

The committee on trees reported that a number of trees had been set out on North street, the same having been donated by Mr. T A. Watson of East Braintree.

Much interest was taken in the discussion of the coming electric road and the following resolution passed.

Resolved that in the judgment of this association the electric railway ought to run to within thirty feet of the draw on the Quincy Point bridge.

Resolved that the government of the Weymouth and Hingham Electric Railway Co. be requested to make the necessary arrangements to produce that result.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with so much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally. F. J. Cheney & Co., props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75 cents.

WEYMOUTH BAY.
A REVERIE.

O! blessed shore, laved by the shifting silver of the bay,
And honored by the impress of the feet of ancient peers,
While mirrored are the isles by the translucent ray
In murmuring waves; the rifted clouds shower pearly tears
O'er glistening rocks, that rest in sturdy silence
At the feet of grassy slopes, arrayed in brighter presence
Of the fair golden-rod.

The boats at anchor lay at rest upon the billows' mobile crest;
From far, the mystic murmur meets my ear in welcome tone;
A sweet refrain, it seems, from friends now long at rest,
Borne on the gentle breeze, they whisper, "Not alone."
And kindly hands seem stretched a blessing to bestow.
And lo! lit from the rift, a bright rainbow doth glow
And bears me back to earth.

Beyond Town Limits.

—And now Falmouth is the victim. The state inspector of buildings has condemned the Grammar school house and ordered it closed.

—What Rockland will loose some one else will gain. Miss Nellie T. Nolan has resigned her position as musical director of the Church of the Holy Family to take effect May 17.

—Edward Leonard King the winner in the contest for appointment to West Point, will be 18 years old December 6, next, and is said to be a physical model standing six feet one inch and weighing 175 pounds.

—Prof. Felix Adler of New York proposes to open a summer school at Plymouth. He will follow the line of the Concord School of Philosophy.

—A milkman in Brockton chloroformed one of his customers and robbed the house of $300. A gentleman in another part of the house discovered the robbery in time to capture the thief and save the money.

—The W. C. T. U. of Quincy was the happy recipient of a check for $500 from H. H. Faxon last week.

—Abington and Bridgewater have united in employing a Superintendent of Schools.

—Andrew Bowker who was buried in Hanson last week had satisfactorily filled the office of postmaster at that place for twenty-eight years.

—Brockton's new water system will increase the pressure twenty pounds to the square inch, and the pump has a capacity of three million gallons a day.

—One of the puzzles we used to figure on was called the "travellers' puzzle" and the point was to get ten men in nine beds and have but one man in a bed. The puzzle is now to have thirteen members of Congress from this state and not alter the old districts.

—Postmaster Baker of Randolph has been reimbursed by the Government for a loss of $459 by the robbery of his office in January last.

—The treasurer of the Rockland Independent was acquitted of the crime alleged.

—The rate of taxation in North Abington this year will be between $23 and $24. To reduce this, it is suggested by some to raise the valuation, but the "Public" asks, "What is the difference?"

—The Rockland Standard tells the following for a fact:

A SAD SCENE. Of a recent Sabbath a gentleman in the vicinity of the old turnpike at South Weymouth, had his attention attracted to a funeral procession, which soon after passing him turned from the highway into a cart-path through the woods. The course taken excited his curiosity and he fell into line at the rear of the sepulchral cortege. Silently wending its way through the congenial shades of the sombre forest, the melancholy train emerged into an open space where about two hundred of the friends of the deceased had gathered to join in the last sad rites at the grave of the dear departed. The bearers reverently alighted and tenderly took from the hearse two caskets containing all that was mortal of the loved and lost, and the mourners solemnly gathered about the coffined remains so soon to be committed "dust to dust." The undertaker sympathizingly lifted the lids for the final tear-dimmed look of hallowed grief, when out jumped two game roosters and—well, Bellamy saw a great many ingenious contrivances while he was "looking backward," but somehow this felicitously mournful way of engineering a cock-fight escaped his notice.

There may have been something very bad up there but we can't believe the whole story at once. Will the Standard please tone it down a little.

People's Institute Pleasure Grounds.

Through the generosity of Mrs. Samuel Glover of Dorchester, the People's Institute is enabled to have a pleasure ground the coming summer for the use of its members. The vacant lot of land back of Ahlt's shop has been secured and the management intend to use the same for the above purpose. A base ball field has been laid out and a grand stand built for spectators. A tennis court will be built and lovers of that sport can here find an opportunity of playing their favorite game. A plot of ground will be set aside for those who enjoy croquet. A hundred-yard race track will be built and races of different kinds will be run on Saturdays and holidays, consisting of hundred-yard dashes, quarter mile, one mile, hurdles, putting shot, etc. The grounds will be in charge of Supt. Lyon and will be run on the same plan that has proven so successful in the Institute. A set of rules have been adopted and must be strictly adhered to. Ladies and children can visit the grounds at any time and feel assured that every thing will be done to add to the pleasure of their visit. The Institute base ball club will arrange to play the majority of their games on the grounds and much pleasure may be looked forward to by those who enjoy that sport. If possible, the superintendent will have some of the finest runners and jumpers of America come and give an exhibition of their powers later in the season. In closing this article, the writer hopes that all members of the Institute and friends of the same will visit the grounds and enjoy the privilege of the same.

RESOLUTIONS.

It will be seen by the following resolutions, passed at an informal meeting of Institute members, that Mrs. Glover's generosity is thoroughly appreciated:

WHEREAS, Mrs. Sarah W. Glover has granted to the People's Institute the free use of her valuable piece of ground near Ahlt's shop, we hereby resolve that the hearty thanks, not only of the Institute but of the whole community, are due to her for her generosity that enables our young people to enjoy this summer the benefits of out-door sports that this piece of land so centrally located and finely adapted for the purpose will afford. It is further

Resolved, That our thanks are due to Hon. Asa French for his kindness in arranging details of the matter, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Glover and to him.

FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1891.

The Weather.

Very chilly weather for the last few days, and rain is sadly needed both to lay the dust and for garden and lawn. Frosts have injured a few early garden vegetables and flowers. But if we have lost the beans that were planted too soon in the hope of continued warm weather, we can take comfort in the thought that it is still early in the season and they can be replanted with little work.

Explanation.

We are often asked why we do not run the Old Colony time-table. We do not wish our patrons to think that we are depriving them of any information or of any convenience without cause. We do not think it our duty to run the time-tables free, and some time since we made what we considered to be a very fair offer to the Old Colony authorities which they have declined to meet. We understand that time-tables can be procured free at the various depots.

New Orlean's Justice.

The world has been watching with interest the verdict of the grand jury, sitting at New Orleans, on the massacre of prisoners held in the gaol at that place.

The verdict has come; and is, that, with the full knowledge of the authorities of a place, a man may issue a call for a mass meeting, organize that meeting in open day, lead the organization armed with shot guns and cudgels, to a given point and there, in cold blood, shoot and beat unprotected citizens and be declared "not guilty."

Not Necessarily One Man.

The Boston papers for the past few days seem to have been very solicitous as to Weymouth's present and future, as regards the enforcement of the liquor laws. They express the belief that salvation can come only through one source.

We think there are some good and competent persons in all of our five wards to look after these matters and who can ferret out the vile dens and close them up.

If the Selectmen cannot make satisfactory arrangements with one party to do the whole, we are quite sure there are local officers in the several wards who are ready to take hold of the work and who can do it equally as well.

A Comparison.

When the town issues its book with a full list of the taxpayers and their estates both real and personal, it will be a very interesting document by the side of a similar one issued in 1853, and from which we make a few extracts.

There were then but ten corporations and individuals in town who paid taxes of $100 and upwards, viz.:

Weymouth Iron Co.,	$719.04
James Tirrell,	191.40
Albert Tirrell,	130.26
Mrs. Nancy White,	136.68
James Jones,	135.18
Noah Fifield,	134.58
Miss Susan Tufts,	128.64
Miss Mercy Tufts,	126.00
Joseph Loud,	113.34
Nathaniel Shaw,	103.86

The valuation of the North Parish was then $1,123,383; in 1890, $4,152,283; South Parish, $635,099; in 1890, $1,904,412, showing that on the basis of old parish lines there has been but little difference in the per cent. of growth in wealth as between the north and south parishes, or Wards 1, 2 and 3 as against Wards 4 and 5.

Brag and a Needless Aspersion.

"The Weymouth Landing department were evidently rattled, for they had done little or nothing when the Quincy department arrived, and had it not been for their efforts a more serious fire would have resulted.

"The Quincy steamer worked after 11 o'clock, when it started for home, the men not having been asked to have as much as a cup of coffee."—Quincy Ledger.

The above item clipped from the Quincy Ledger of May 4, is, in the first paragraph, a most needless attack upon the Weymouth fire department. Quincy has a city fire department and a city police force to assist. When they have a fire the police rope off the burning district as they do in other cities to give the trained firemen full freedom to do their best. It is not fair to expect such trained service from our volunteer department whose pay is $10 per year for each man. When an alarm is given it is about an even chance if half or more of our firemen are not far away beyond reach. They cannot be expected to sacrifice their pleasures or freedom for the miserable pittance they receive.

As to the fact of the Quincy steamer's saving a big conflagration we do not think it is the truth, although the Quincy men rendered efficient service and we do not wish to detract from the praise which is their due for responding so promptly to the call for aid, but why was it necessary for the Ledger, in order to praise the Quincy department, to cast the harsh aspersion upon the Weymouth department that "it was rattled," and that only the efforts of the Quincy department saved us from a large conflagration. What we lacked was hose and that of Quincy was undoubtedly a great aid, but by the time the Quincy hose arrived, hose was arriving from East Weymouth and North Weymouth, and the East Braintree hose had been in use some time. We do not think there can be too much help at a large fire, and believe that it was wise to send for help to Quincy at the start, as the dimensions the fire would assume could not be then foretold, but we do not now think that the fire would have spread any further had the Quincy steamer not been called upon.

The second paragraph, we are sorry to learn, is probably true, and denotes a sad remissness on somebody's part. It can now only be regretted that the Quincy men were neglected, but we wish most heartily that it had not occurred. It should have been some one's duty to see that the men were refreshed before they started for home.

We trust that in the future this matter will be attended to as it should have been on last Saturday night.

A Serious Talk.

The subject of the growth of the town, what to do to develop the industries we already have, and how to bring in new ones, is a never failing topic of discussion and one on which the future weal or woe of the town depends.

There is, however, one industry, and for the past two months the most rapidly developing one in town, on which the question is, not how can we have more of it, but how can we diminish it or drive it away?

The soldiers of the late war knew, that, let a mule drop by the way side and immediately from a clear sky, would come a cloud of vultures. So it is becoming proverbial that there can be no event or undue excitement like that of the Saturday night fire, but it is immediately manifested that the rum shop is thriving near by.

We are not speaking from actual statistics; but, from the best information at hand, these rum holes and kitchen bar rooms are largely on the increase; and, with the boldness with which parties are frequently seen pulling their flasks from their pockets and heard speaking of where they got their liquor, one would think it as legitimate a business as that of buying and selling tea and coffee, and that the fact that things are legitimate or illegitimate as they are done in accordance with, or in violation of, the laws of the land or of the community by which they are enacted, is utterly beyond their comprehension.

Two months ago Weymouth's voters in town meeting assembled, voted No-License and, also, an appropriation of $2500 for the suppression of the sale of liquor (we do not say illegal sale because with No-License all selling is illegal.)

These voters, to the number of 676 in the affirmative, voluntarily taxed themselves that the sale of liquor should be stopped as far as might be possible. The town, having greater confidence in its Board of Selectmen, than in any separate committee that might be appointed, voted to leave the expenditure of this money in their hands. This was well. But, as far as can be learned, absolutely nothing has been done by the Board in the taking of any practical steps in the matter. This is not well. Whatever may be the personal beliefs of the members of the Selectmen, they are merely an executive Board, chosen to carry out the will of the town. They have no business with private ideas on this matter at all. The town voted that they should spend $2500 in the endeavor to stop liquor selling. Now let them spend it and carry out the will of the town as expressed by that vote. If the town doesn't like it, next year let it vote differently but let the laws be carried out by the servants of the town chosen for that special purpose.

Fair.

The Annual Fair of the Social Circle connected with the Universalist Society was held in Lincoln hall on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, afternoon and evening. The hall was tastefully trimmed for the occasion. In the centre were festoons of bright colored material, and on the walls were sprays of evergreen which made a very pleasing contrast. In different portions of the hall were the usual accompaniments of a "fair." On the tables there was a fine display of useful and ornamental articles which found a ready sale.

Entertainments of a very high order were given each evening. On Wednesday evening the pleasing drama "The Feast of Roses" was given by a large company of the young people connected with the Universalist Society. The several parts of the piece were admirably sustained and its performance elicited hearty applause from audience. Fine music was rendered by an orchestra composed of M. Z. M. Allen and Misses Aria and Alida Allen.

On Thursday evening W. D. Howells amusing farce "The Albany Depot" was rendered with a well chosen cast of characters. This piece is well calculated to stir the "risibles" of an audience, and its performance on this occasion furnished any amount of amusement to the large number present.

Theodore P. Willey favored the audience with a fine solo, Master Charles E. Hunt with a violin solo, and Masters James Hunt and Charles Hunt and Miss Alida Allen with a violin trio. In every respect the fair was a great success. The attendance was very large, specially on Thursday evening, when the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity.

Business Notices.

[Notices under this heading, 3 lines or less, 25 cents.]
[Each additional line, 5 cents.]

—Twenty-three thousand tons of coal a day was the average output of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company for last year. Where does this enormous amount go to? Genial Charley Agard, Superintendent of the Company's distributing station at New Bedford, says a large proportion of it is consumed in New England, where the fine quality of the Company's choice coals gives them an unequalled popularity. Among these is the celebrated free-burning Brookside Coal of Lykens Valley, the deepest red ash mined, well-known as unexcelled for use in open grate or cooking stoves. The product of the Reading mines includes every variety from the Brookside to the hardest white ash, and under the business-like management of the new administration (President A. A. McLeod, General Manager Chas. E. Henderson, assisted by the veteran General Coal Agent, Thomas M. Richards, who has spent about all his life with the Reading Co.), the demand for these coals is rapidly and constantly increasing. Mr. Edward Sherwin, of Boston, has managed the Company's Eastern department for over eighteen years, and to his unremitting efforts the success of the New England business is largely due.

The Architect.

The Chatterer Dreaming.

I will write you, if you offer me the chance
Of a fairy who has led me quite a dance,
And perhaps its necessary
To inform you that my fairy
Isn't found in any mythical romance.

She is small, but not too small, about the height,
That an ordinary man considers right;
She is dainty, she is airy,
Like a medieval fairy,
So I'm justified in calling her a sprite.

Roman noses would disfigure any "mug"—
In the photographic market they're a drug!
(But she owns a nez retrousse)
So I think whatever you say,
That the nicest style in noses is the pug.

While she poses I will add a few addenda:
She's the owner of a heart that's warm and tender,
For I gave it an inspection
(Under medical direction
Since my style of diagnosis might offend her!)

But I shall not see the fairy maid again—
And her disappearance moves me to explain
That my fairy maid, elysian,
Was the nonexistent vision,
Of my dreadfully imaginative brain.

So I've bid a last adieu unto the elf;
And her memory is laid upon the shelf,
As a subject most unpleasant—
And my only love at present
Is a deep abiding passion for myself.

THE CHATTERER.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF CAPT. WM. TORREY.

Read Before the Weymouth Historical Society.

BY SAMUEL W. REED.

William Torrey, the subject of this sketch, came over from England in 1640 and settled at Weymouth, being then about 32 years of age. His former residence was Combe St. Nicholas, in the County of Somerset. He was doubtless an educated man as he is spoken of by Edward Johnson in his book called "The Wonder Working Providence," published in 1654, as being a good penman and skilled in the Latin tongue. He was chosen in 1641 a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company or as it was then called the Military Company of Massachusetts. He was made freeman May 18, 1642, and in September of that year his name appears as one of the deputies to the General Court from Weymouth. In 1643 he was again a deputy to the General Court and also a commissioner for hearing small causes under 20 shillings at Weymouth. In September of this year the stock of powder allowed by the General Court to the town of Weymouth was placed in his charge. In 1644 and 1645 he was both a deputy to the General Court and commissioner for hearing small causes at Weymouth. He was one of the Townsmen or Selectmen for the year 1643-4. In January, 1644, the town voted that a foot-path four feet wide should be laid out speedily from the lower plantation by William Torrey and Nicholas Phillips. In June, 1644, he was chosen by the General Court one of a committee to consider the bill presented to the house of deputies as to men's proprieties. In April, 1645, his name appears again as one of the Townsmen. In May, 1645, he is mentioned as being a lieutenant, and was appointed to take charge of the military company at Hingham, and was to train and exercise the train band there until further order of the General Court. He was relieved of this duty May 6, 1646, at his own request. In October, 1645, he was chosen one of a committee of the General Court to view the nearest way between Dorchester and Weymouth and report thereon at the next sitting of the Court.

In November, 1646, he was chosen "Clarke of the writs" for Weymouth and also one of the commissioners for hearing small causes. On May 26, 1647, in answer to the petition of the town of Weymouth, he was authorized by the General Court to marry in that town such as shall be legally published and fit, according to the order of the Court. His name appears again among the list of deputies in 1648 and 1649. On May 2, 1649, the Court, finding that Lieutenant Torrey was employed as clark at the last session of the General Court to frame for the house of deputies their bills and transcribe fairly the orders of that year in their books, allowed him £4 as satisfaction for his paines out of the next county levy from the Town of Weymouth. In 1650 he was chosen clark of the deputies and also clark of the writs at Weymouth. On October 16, 1650, upon his own petition, Slate Island in the bay was granted to him in consideration that he was to enter the orders of two or three courts not yet entered in the deputies' books. This grant was upon the condition that the island had not been expressly granted to another and that it was to be free for any man to use the slate. In November, 1659, this grant to him was confirmed upon the conditions above stated. In 1651 he was chosen clark of the deputies. His name also appears as having served in that position in 1652, 1653, 1654, 1655, 1656, 1657, 1658, 1660, 1661, 1662, 1666 and 1668. In 1654 he was chosen recorder for the purpose of recording sales and alienations of land in Weymouth. He was also a commissioner for hearing small causes. In May, 1655, he was chosen by the General Court a member of a commission, which was to act in conjunction with a similar board chosen by the Plymouth Colony, in laying out a marsh at Conahasset belonging to the Massachusetts Colony. In 1657 he was empowered to act in all criminal cases in the towns of Hingham, Weymouth and Nantasket, as any one magistrate may do, and was to keep a record of his doings.

In 1659 he was chosen one of the Selectmen. In October of this year he was empowered to joyne in marriage at Weymouth such persons as shall desire, the same being published according to law. In 1660 he was again one of the Selectmen. In May, 1661, he was given "magistratical" power in Weymouth for the examination and conviction of vagabond Quakers and in proceedings under the laws relating to them enacted by the General Court. In December of this year he is mentioned as Capt. Torrey, and as his services as clark of the deputies were more than usual this year, he was allowed £5 extra. The salary fixed a number of years before was £16 per annum. In 1662, 1664, 1665, 1668 and 1670, his name appears as a member of the board of selectmen. In October, 1666, he was allowed additional compensation for his services as clark of the deputies so as to make his salary for the year £20. In 1672, 1673, 1674, 1678 and 1679 he was one of the Selectmen. In 1670 he was a commissioner for hearing small causes. In 1672 he was again clark of the deputies.

In 1673 he was given authority to administer oaths in Weymouth. In 1675 he was chosen a member of a committee of the General Court for the ordering of the granting of lots at a place near Mendon, which grant had been made to Nathaniel Bosworth and others of Hull. At a special session of the General Court called Feb. 4, 1679-80, his name appears as a deputy. In June, 1680, he was appointed by the General Court a member of a committee to peruse a history of New England written by Rev. William Hubbard, and report at the next session of the Court, so that the Court may order an impression thereof. The report of this committee was undoubtedly favorable, since the treasurer of the Colony in October, 1682, was ordered to pay Rev. William Hubbard £50 in money, as a manifestation of their thankfulness for his paines, in compiling a history of the passages of God's Providence toward the people of this jurisdiction.

In Nov., 1682, he was chosen by the town a member of a committee to build a new meeting-house, the old one having become unfit for use. In March, 1683, he was chosen by the town a way warden. This year he was again a deputy to the General Court and was granted 500 acres of land for services rendered to the Colony. On Nov. 26, 1683, he was chosen moderator at a town meeting held on that date. He appears as one of the defendants in a writ of quo warranto issued against the Governor and Company of Massachusetts Bay by the Court of Queen Bench, Westminster, June 27, 1683, being then clark of the deputies. The result of these legal proceedings was that the charter of the colony was revoked.

In 1684 William Torrey was again clerk of the deputies. In 1686, the charter of the colony having been revoked, Sir Edmund Andros was appointed Governor. All meetings of the people except for the choice of town officers were prohibited. This state of affairs continued until the spring of 1689. When the rumor reached Boston in April, 1689, that there was a revolution in England and the Prince of Orange was about to be made king, the people seized and imprisoned Andros and re-established their charter government with Simon Bradstreet at its head. At the first meeting of the Council for the safety of the people and convention of the peace in May, 1689, to which deputies were chosen, Capt. William Torrey and Ephraim Treat appear as deputies from Weymouth. In 1687 Captain Torrey wrote a book entitled "A Discourse upon Futurity or Things to Come." The book shows that the author was well acquainted with the Holy Scriptures. The language is plain and simple and shows the humble and reverent spirit of the writer, Captain Torrey. He died June 10, 1690, leaving a widow and eight children of whom the most prominent was Rev. Samuel Torrey, a distinguished clergyman at that time. The house in which Captain Torrey lived was situated near what is now known as Sampson's Cove, about two hundred feet east of Neck street, and nearly opposite the estate of the late Gideon Sampson. The following affidavits taken from the Registry of Suffolk Deeds fix the time of his arrival in this country:

Obituary.

In the brief account of the death of Miss Adeline Coleran, hastily prepared within an hour of going to press last week, were some errors which we regret, and we gladly print the following:—

Death has of late made sad havoc amongst the teachers of Ward Three. The announcement last week of Miss Addie Coleran's sudden demise caused especial regret in this part of the town where she was born, and had long been recognized as one of our most promising young women.

Even in the solemn hour of mourning it seems hard to realize that we shall see her no more. We mourn the teacher, the maiden, the scholar; the strong, true, and lovable character. She was gentle and tender in all her ways, and the delight she took in the instruction of the young will ever be remembered by those who knew her best.

Her funeral took place from the Church of the Sacred Heart. Rev. D. S. Healy celebrated the Solemn Mass of Requiem, after which he delivered a brief but very touching address, taking his text from St. Luke vii, 11-16. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, indicative of the high esteem in which she was held.

The pall bearers were John Cronin, John Whelan, George Galvin, William Kenney, William Callahan and George Tracy.

The remains were interred in the Catholic Cemetery. Our sincerest condolences are extended to her bereaved parents, sister and brothers in losing the dearest God had given.

An Abortive Attempt.

A liquor spotter was employed and sent to East Weymouth several days ago to work up evidence against the liquor dealers. He visited several places and procured samples. At one place the proprietor suspected his business and with the assistance of a gang proceeded to get the spotter full. The fellow fetched up at the railroad station at about 8 o'clock in a bewildered condition, having lost his samples of tanglefoot. He went to sleep and missed the last train for Boston. His condition was such that the authorities procured a team and sent him to Boston a sadder and a wiser man.

The Weymouth and East Braintree Business Association.

The Weymouth and East Braintree Business Association held its meeting last evening in the People's Institute parlors, when matters were talked over informally. Several propositions have been received for factory buildings and for financial aid to new business, but not from firms that the Association has confidence enough in to grant the desired aid. "Watch and wait" is the motto, and not a "leap in the dark," to "repent at leisure."

Entertainment Notices.

[Notices inserted in this department for 5 cents per line.]

—From present indications the forthcoming concert of the Amphion Concert Co. of Boston, to be given in Fogg's Opera House Tuesday evening, May 12, will exceed all previous efforts of the company and prove itself very artistic and a musical treat for the lovers of music from that fraternity.

A New Profession.

The writing of advertisements is assuming the dignity of a profession. Much of the style of writing is charmingly seductive, and withal contains no little information of a scholarly nature, as many a reader has discovered after perusing a half column with quickening interest to find in the end how he may become a Hercules in strength or a beauty by the use of certain elixirs! There is more money in the writing of advertisements than in legitimate literature. Agencies solicit the writing of advertisements and guarantee appropriate illustrations, and the insertion of same in whatever newspaper or periodical the advertiser may desire. Most of the celebrated advertisers write their own notices. "It is only needful to repeat a thing often enough," says Goethe, "and everybody will end by believing it."—L. R. McCabe in Chicago Herald.

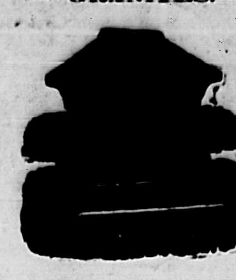

A Mystery Explained.

The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps, and coachmen. The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical, nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and a fine book containing many marvelous cures free at A. M. Bachelder & Co., who also sell Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart Cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures fluttering, short breath etc.

MATRIMONIAL.

Miss Edith Linton and Frank Ellsworth Hart Wedded to Each Other.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 6, 1891.

Miss Edith Linton, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Linton, of this city, and Mr. Frank Ellsworth Hart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Hart, also of this city, were wedded to each other, in the Church of the Pilgrims, on Remson street, by the Rev. Dr. Storrs, on Wednesday afternoon, April 29th.

The wedding was one of the social events of the season, and was attended by nearly five hundred invited guests. A rather romantic feature of the event was the fact, that the father of the officiating clergyman united in marriage the father and mother of the bride, at Braintree, Mass., where he had preached many years. It was the last wedding service at which Dr. Storrs, father officiated, as he retired shortly after from the ministry, having spent nearly the allotted life of man in active ministerial labors. It was thus a particularly pleasing fact that the son should officiate at this wedding, and weave about it pleasant memories of the past.

There was a simplicity about the ceremony that was very pleasing, and its utter lack of ostentatious display was in marked good taste. The floral decorations about the altar, consisting of ferns and plants, gave a cheerful aspect to the church, while the subdued light of the sun, as it shone through the stained glass windows, gave to the ceremony the appropriate tinge of solemnity.

The bridal party reached the church at five o'clock. As the doors leading into the centre aisle swung open, the grand wedding march from Lohengrin filled the church with sweetest melody, and to this music the wedding procession marched to the altar.

There were no bridesmaids, and therefore, the ushers, Mr. Joseph W. White, Mr. Frederick D. Hart, Jr., Mr. Charles Osflorn and Mr. J. E. Smith, preceded the couple to the foot of the altar, and then divided, two standing upon the right and two upon the left.

The pastor received the young couple, and then with the simple, solemn ceremony of the Congregational church, he wedded them to each other, after which he invoked the blessing of God upon them, and personally wished them happiness and prosperity.

Then as the organ gushed forth melody of rejoicing, the wedded couple marched down the aisle, followed by the ushers, to their coach which stood in waiting.

The arrangements were made for beginning the wedding tour at once. Therefore the bride wore a simple, but elegant traveling suit of gray, decorated with natural flowers, and the usual reception was omitted.

But in order that the young couple might formally bid their immediate relatives good by, by the invitation of Mrs. Cornell White, mother of one of the ushers, they were taken to Mrs. White's home, on Henry street, where the relatives and ushers followed. After receiving the congratulations of their relatives, and bidding them farewell, the young couple started amid a shower of slippers on their wedding tour. They went South, the chief points being Annapolis, Baltimore, Washington, the Valley of the Shenandoah, Luray Caverns, Richmond and Old Point Comfort. The trip will be of a month's duration. Then when the roses are in bloom, and all nature is sweetest, they will return and settle down in their new home, on Jamaica avenue, where a charming mansion has been prepared by the groom, and presented by him to the bride as an evidence of his affection for her.

The house is over a century old, and was the Stoothoff homestead. It is an old fashioned farmhouse, with long sweeping roof and shingled sides. It was erected in the days when men were imbued with the English idea that home was the ideal spot, and when it was erected, it should be built for permanence. And so this house, which has braved the storms and basked in the sunshine for over a century, is to-day as solid as the day it was created.

It has been remodeled interiorly at great expense, and with exquisite taste. Nowhere could a home be found that provides more fully for bodily comfort and cultured taste. Upon the first floor as one enters, is a great square hall. Upon one side is the music room and library. Upon the other, the dining-room, butler's pantry and kitchen. The rooms are decorated each in a most appropriate and effective manner. Above are sleeping rooms that of themselves are dreams. Surely in such a place, perfect happiness and peace must characterize the lives of such a well mated couple.

The friends of the wedded pair remembered them in a pleasant way and with their gifts sent that which is of more value—kind expressions of love and affection coupled with the desire that in their lives there should be only enough of cloudiness to make the sunshine appear more cheerful.

Among the many valuable presents we note the following: The bride's father gave her stock in the German-American Land and Improvement Company, of which he is President, valued at $5,000, which will provide her with a steady income and was therefore quite a wise and thoughtful present. Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Draper sent two beautiful floor cushions, the bride's grandfather sent silver table spoons; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Worster, siver tea spoons; Louise and Harry Worster, dessert spoons; Donald Worster, sugar spoon; Mrs. Murray Knight, a beautiful green silk scarf with hand worked fringe; Miss Nellie C. Davis, a silver berry spoon; Mr. and Mrs. Eliot C. Pierce, silver coffee spoons; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Trott, a wicker stool; Miss Kate Pierce, a water color (Holland scene); Miss Madge Pierce, a picture (St. Paul); Mason Bachelder and Miss Hattie Baker, Boston souvenir spoons; Miss Emma Clapp, celery dish; Miss Alice Linton, a bronze umbrella holder; Miss Enid Linton, bronze dinner gongs; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Sheppard, an oil painting; Mr. George H. Baker, an antique parlor chair; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Avery, a dessert sugar spoon; Mr. M. Knight, glassware; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bartlett, silver souvenir spoons; Miss Annie Pratt, an olive dish. The presents taken in their entirety constituted an exhibit of rare elegance, evincing refined taste in their selection.

Miss Charlotte Welles, organist of the Church of Incarnation, in New York, and an intimate friend of the bride, presided at the organ during the wedding service.

A California Night.

Mr. Charles Dudley Warner's new book on California, entitled "Our Italy," is a revelation and delight. The other recent Century Magazine articles on "The Days of '49," have stimulated anew the interest in everything California. The young people of Union church (Weymouth and Braintree) will celebrate next Wednesday evening by a social which they call "A California Night." A lecture on "Elysium Life in California" will be given by Mr. Francis Barton, a native-born citizen of Los Angeles, and one of the promising poets and scholars of the new El Dorado. A choice musical programme, participated in by Miss Thayer of East Weymouth, Miss Frederika Hunt, Miss Angie Gutterson, Miss Helen R. F. Allen, Mr. James Hunt and Mr. G. H. Baker, will supplement the lecture; and a social with refreshments will also be an enjoyable event of the evening. With Rev. Mr. Frary of Pomona, and so many of Weymouth people at Riverside and thereabouts, the evening will doubtless seem like a visit to new scenes, but among old friends.

U. L. C.

The Union Literary Circle met at the residence of Rev. B. F. Eaton, Tuesday evening, May 5, with a large attendance. The quotations were from each one's favorite author, with 20 questions on the progress of education in the Uniten States. A paper was read by Mrs. J. W. Armington, on the "History of the city of Washington," and talks were given by Mr. B. F. Smith on the "Public Buildings of Washington;" by Rev. Oliver Huckel on the "Churches of Washington," and by Mr. J. W. Armington on "The American Navy." Vocal and instrumental music was furnished by Mrs. Bowditch and Miss Susan Porter. The next meeting of the circle will be held in the Union church, Tuesday, May 12, at 7.45 p. m. This will be the last meeting of the year, and will consist of an entertainment and banquet.

Jolly Firemen.

A jollier party of fire fighters and their ladies than that which gathered at Masonic hall, East Weymouth, last Friday evening, it would be hard to find. In response to the invitations issued by Z. L. Bicknell Hose 2 to the members of W. O. Collyer Hose 1 of North Weymouth, the members of the latter company with their ladies and the engineers and their ladies met the members of the former and their ladies at Masonic hall. There were 71 covers laid for the banquet which was served by Blunt. The post-prandial exercises were presided over by Capt. Edward Fahey of Hose 2, and remarks were made by Chief Engineer Thayer, Engineers Collyer, Cushing and Sprague, Selectman Burrell, Capt. Poulin and others. The evening's pleasures closed with dancing, Kelley's orchestra furnishing music and the march being led by Capt. Fahey and Mrs. Charles E. Cushing.

Obituary.

Miss Ella Chandler, aged 23 years, a valued teacher of the Lincoln school, died Saturday after a lingering illness. The funeral was largely attended and took place from the First Baptist church Tuesday afternoon, Rev. W. L. Smith officiating. The former pupils of Miss Chandler were present in a body as were also a large number of teachers, the Superintendent of schools and members of the school committee. The floral offerings were very beautiful. Music was furnished by a quartette. The bearers were William Hollis, Albert Orcutt, Otis Hollis, Frank Bond, Newall A. Wood and William Aiken. The remains were interred in the Village Cemetery.

HEADQUARTERS REYNOLDS POST NO. 58, DEPARTMENT OF MASS., G. A. R. EAST WEYMOUTH, May 5, 1891.

General Order No. 2.

Comrades:—Again we are called upon to mourn the loss of one of our number, who, at his country's call, placed his name on the roll of honor, and offered his life that the nation might live. Comrade Samuel B. Pool died April 30, after a long illness; he has gone to join that grand army above.

Gone is our old comrade,
He has seen the light of day,
While we heard only "taps"
He he heard the "reveille."

Comrade Pool enlisted in Co. H, Forty-second Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, Sept. 3, 1862, and served faithfully until he was discharged, Aug. 20, 1863, by reason of expiration of term of service. In his death, the post sustains a loss of one of its oldest members, he having lived beyond the "three score years and ten." Owing to continued illness, he has not been able of late to attend the post meetings, but when in health, he was always ready to bear his share of the burden. We shall miss his pleasant smile and kindly greeting.

To his family as a post, we extend our kindest sympathy, and aid in this their time of sorrow.

The charter of the post will be draped for thirty days, in memory of our departed comrade.

C. W. L. HAYWARD, Post Commander.

THE ANNUAL STATEMENT

—OF—

The Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York,

For the Year Ending December 31, 1890,

Shows that the Company transacted a Larger volume of business than for any previous year since its organization in 1843.

Its assets are greatly in excess of those held by any other Company either in the United States or Europe.

Its funds are well invested and wisely distributed.

All contingencies are provided for by a surplus of $9,981,000 over policy and all other liabilities.

It offers its Distribution Policy as the most advantageous form of Life Insurance for the Policy-holder, combining as it does A Clear Contract, Absolute Security, and Reasonable Provisions for Withdrawal.

In every instance where a dividend period has expired in the Mutual, the actual results have exceeded the estimates given at the time the policy was issued.

—Mrs. Abner L. Stowell entertained the Sunday-school class of which she is a member, with a cobweb party, Tuesday evening Mrs. Chas. Seabury secured the booby prize, an automatic acrobat, and Miss Sarah Burrell the first prize. A collation was served, and at the close, souvenirs, hand made by the hostess, were distributed.

—Job Curtis has been appointed night watchman at Bradley's Phosphate Works.

—North Weymouth Cemetery Circle met Tuesday evening with Mrs. J. A. Holbrook.

—Last Friday evening, the Century Club held its meeting, and a discussion of "The Farmer's Alliance;" a general discussion of this movement; its importance as a political factor; its aims and demands, and its probable future. E. H. Benson and J. W. Bartlett were the leaders in the discussion. J. H. Pratt read a valuable paper on "Civilization." The next meeting will be held June 5. This will be Ladies' Night, and the board of government is requested to serve strawberries and cream. The subject for discussion is, "Resolved, That it is for the best interests of Weymouth, that an electric railway be established therein." W. D. Leland affirmative, and Joseph Poulin negative. Judge Humphrey is the chosen reader of the evening.

—The fire apparatus from this ward was eleven minutes in going to the Landing fire Saturday night.

—The fifteenth anniversary of Div. 9, A. O. H. of East Weymouth will be held in Odd Fellow's Opera House on Friday evening, May 13. The entertainment will consist of a concert, speaking and dancing. The state officers of the A. O. H. and the county delegate will be present. Supper will be furnished by Caterer Blunt. President William Tobin will act as master of ceremonies.

—The newly-painted wagons of the Drews make the express business look bright and cheerful.

—Charlie Kanzig is in the doctor's hands and missed from his shop in Peak's building.

—Mr. and Mrs. Jotham Salisbury, who have been spending the winter in Boston, have returned home.

—Tuesday night was extremely cold for the season. Ice of considerable thickness appeared in exposed places.

—The Junior Templars third annual reunion was a success. The supper by Caterer Temple of Boston was enjoyed by 140 people, Rev. A. A. Kidder invoking the blessing. The programme as arranged furnished a fine evening's entertainment. Remarks were made by John O. Godfrey of Phenix Section J. T. of H., East Boston; James Hicks of Unity Section, Cambridgeport; Waldo Turner of Mechanics Temple, and T. J. Leigh of Delphi Council. At a late hour the meeting broke up with three hearty cheers for the Junior Templars third.

—Miss Canterbury gave a matinee card party Friday, May 1. The first prize, a silver hat pin, was won by Mrs. G. A. Miles, and the booby prize by Mrs. E. G. Cutter. Ices and cakes were served.

The Ladies Social Circle connected with the M. E. church will meet next Wednesday afternoon and evening. Tea at 6 p. m. All are invited.

—Frederic O. Cushing, a former resident of North Weymouth, died in Auburn, N. Y., May 2, aged 59 years. Mr. Cushing was a former superintendent of the Sunday-school at North Weymouth and an active temperance worker. Funeral services were held in Calvary Presbyterian church at Auburn and the remains taken to North Weymouth, where they were interred with Temple of Honor ceremonies and other services conducted by Rev. F. H. Palmer. Mr. Cushing leaves a widow and one daughter, wife of Edward Fahey, East Weymouth.

—The "Pansy Circle" of K. D's entertainment in the vestry of the M. E. church Wednesday night was a most enjoyable affair. The piano solos of Marion Cain and Emma E. Bates were well rendered. Pleasing recitations were given by Florence Hobart and Georgia Cushing. Percy Shaw delighted the audience, as usual, with his violin solos, Miss Jennie Rice acting as accompanist quite acceptably. The duet by Berta and Ella May Raymond was sung very sweetly. Two dialogues by members of the Circle interested the audience, and all the parts were well taken —Miss Nella R. Hayden, the talented young reader, appears before an audience in the Warrenton Street Scotch Presbyterian church, Boston, tonight.

—Jotham Salisbury has been a sufferer from la grippe.

—Janitor E. B. Tirrell is cleaning out and renovating Temple of Honor hall.

—Joseph Sampson is spending his vacation at Rocky Hill, Plymouth.

—Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond, owing to his continued illness, are obliged to postpone their silver wedding anniversary until Thursday evening, May 28.

—Thomas B. Nichols returned from California Wednesday.

—Rev. Merrill Blanchard will supply the pulpit of the Old North church for six months while Rev. F. H. Palmer is away on a vacation.

—Mrs. Frank Drew is quite seriously ill.

—W. M. Burrell, who has for several years been station agent at North Abington, but is about to leave to try a western field, was presented with a fine gold watch by his friends of that place last Wednesday. The presentation speech was made by Dr. T. G. Wheatly.

—R. T. Bicknell and family have moved out for the summer; and the old home on the corner is open once more.

—The entertainment by the Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters in the Congregational church, Wednesday evening, will be enhanced by a very lively hammer and needle contest by ladies and gentlemen.

—Crescent Lodge I. O. O. F. was the subject of a very agreeable surprise last evening. James M. Dunbar, in a few well chosen remarks, presented the lodge in behalf of the sons of John P. Lovell with a very elegant life size picture of Brother Lovell who was one of the five charter members of the lodge. Of these five members, Brothers Lovell and Z. L. Bicknell are the only survivors.

Weymouth Centre.

—Dr. Willey has moved to the residence of the late Albert F. Clapp.

—It is worthy of note that the atmosphere of Weymouth Centre is so congenial that very many of our newly married people decide to build at once and establish themselves in homes of their own. One of the most tasteful of these new homes is that of Joseph Vinal recently married to Miss Mabel Cunningham. The home is a model of convenience and comfort. No doubt the happy couple are the subjects of a little envy on the part of some of our waiting twains.

—Master Carl Humphrey entertained his little friends with a Bubble party Saturday afternoon, May 6, it being his seventh birthday. The little people were given a fine treat and blew some large bubbles, all of which burst as bubbles will.

South Weymouth Pickings.

—Herbert A. Bass, South Weymouth's phenomenal young pitcher, is to play this season with the Whitman Base Ball club. They began the season last Saturday with a defeat at the hands of the Goodyears, a strong Boston nine, by the score of 6 to 4.

—The treasurer of the South Weymouth Lyceum, the organization which furnishes financial support to the Co-operative course, has paid all the bills and has a balance of $77.68. The total receipts for last season's course were $1,003. The managers will make arrangements during the summer for a first-class course for the coming winter.

—Mr. Joseph Harding, who recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his marriage, is seriously ill with pneumonia.

—The annual May-party of the Universalist society is quite a venerable institution, having come down in an unbroken line from the year 1850. Among those present Friday evening at the 42d occurrence of this festive affair was John Blanchard who has been a constant attendant, having been absent but once and then only because of service in the army. Mrs. Avery Howe has nearly as good a record. J. B. Howe, Esq., has also been punctual in attendance. For many years it was held in the Town House, then in Music Hall, Union Hall, Odd Fellows' Hall, and for the last three years in Fogg's Opera House.

—That company of our distinguished fellow-citizens who "run with the machine" —not the political one—but that known as the extinguisher, as it is sometimes styled, the "soda-fountain," has recently organized to fight the fire-fiend for the ensuing year at the usual salary of $10 and poll-tax, by the choice of Gordon Willis as foreman; Charles W. Hasting, 1st assistant; C. H. Humble, 2d assistant, and Ellis J. Pitcher, secretary and treasurer.

—Thomas F. Kelley, who had his hands so badly injured in a rolling-machine last week, has suffered intense pain in the injured members, but probably will not lose any of his fingers. He has just moved into the tenement on Pleasant street vacated by Edgar R. Downs.

—Superintendent of Mails Thomas, who has purchased the house formerly occupied by Mr. Kelley, is now devoting his attention to architecture and modern methods of heating and ventilation with reference to improving his recently acquired property.

—There is no dullness in the labor market. Try to hire some one to plow, to plant, to do carpenter or mason work for you.

—Why do not citizens on some other street in the village combine to remove all fences as the residents on one side of Main street from Park avenue to Nash's Corner have done? Uniformity of fence or of no fence is better than the present variety seen on some streets. Let the Public Grounds or the Sidewalk committee take hold of this.

—The residence of Josiah Reed, Esq., has had its complexion changed by a new coat of paint.

—The May-basket season is here. A certain young lady recently having received one, left it to pursue those who had hung it. On her return, she found it missing. This happened to be a valuable one on account of its contents. Some one had confiscated it in her absence. Moral: Take in your basket first.

—At the Union church vestry Sunday evening, Rev. W. H. Bolster gave a talk on Japan illustrated with 70 stereopticon views.

—About 75 couples participated in the grand march at the May-party in Fogg's Opera House, Friday evening. From 8 to 9 o'clock Porter's orchestra lavished its sweetest strains upon a constantly increasing audience until at 9.15 o'clock, the floor being cleared, the ball opened with the march and circle led by Chairman Fletcher W. Howe and Miss Sadie Stetson. From this time until 2 a. m., dancing continued with a short intermission for refreshments. About midnight fair forms clothed in elegant toilettes that defy description wove intricate figures in and out among the sombre black of the conventional dress-suits of the sterner sex. About 300 were present from South Weymouth and neighboring villages. All united in the assertion that it was the event of the season of its kind. The net proceeds of about $50 go to swell the fund which is being raised to carpet the Universalist church under whose auspices these annual May gatherings are held.

—Congressman Elijah A. Morse of this district will probably deliver his lecture on "Life in Washington," in Fogg's Opera house in two or three weeks. Admission will be free. This lecture is pronounced by those who have heard it to be very instructive and entertaining. It is not a political or partisan affair. Give him a full house.

—The canines have commenced their annual crusade against the human race. Two children are reported to have been bitten recently. Bring out the muzzles.

—Mrs. Alfred Tirrell and Mrs. Minot Tirrell leave tomorrow morning for the Pacific coast. There they will join a Raymond Excursion which leaves Boston two weeks later, May 23, and with it will visit Alaska. On the return trip the excursion will visit Yellowstone National Park, arriving in Boston July 11.

—Henry A. Thomas was the guest of the Lynn Republican Club at their meeting Wednesday evening.

—Joseph Harding died Tuesday morning after a brief illness from typhoid pneumonia. He was 72 years of age.

—Daniel Sullivan is improving the appearance of his property, formerly the residence of the late Deacon Jacob Loud, by grading the grounds and clapboarding the barn.

—No better examples for imitation can be found in this village than the adjacent buildings and grounds of Messrs Frank Thomas and J. B. Denbroeder.

—On Pond Plain E. Faxon Shaw has taken down his fence and thereby improved the appearance of his grounds, as has also Lowell Thomas.

—Henry B. Reed will take up the Fogg drain, lay the 12 inch pipe obtained from it from his pond as far as the present location of the Fogg drain, and relay that with 15 inch pipe on a lower grade so, that his pond will be drained nearly to the bottom. The drains from the Union church and parsonage cellars will then flow into this new outlet for the waters which have caused so much trouble.

A Former Resident Married.

We take pleasure in recording the marriage of two of Ontario's popular young people. Dr. W. P. Holyoke and Miss Lizzie Thayer were married on Thursday afternoon, March 12, at the residence of the bride's parents, Rev. A. E. Tracy officiating. The wedding was a quiet one, only a few friends being present. The happy couple took the 3 o'clock train for San Francisco, where they will spend two or three weeks.—"Ontario Record" of March 18, 1891.

Height of Cruelty.

Nervous women seldom receive the sympathy they deserve. While often the pictures of health, they are constantly ailing. To withhold sympathy from these unfortunates is the height of cruelty. They have a weak heart, causing shortness of breath, fluttering, pain in side, weak and hungry spells, and finally swelling of ankles, oppression, choking, smothering and dropsy. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is just the thing for them. For their nervousness, headache, weakness, etc., his Restorative Nervine is unequalled. Fine treatise on "Heart and Nervous Diseases" and marvelous testimonials free. Sold and guaranteed by A. M. Bachelder & Co.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the government lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones."—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at the drugstores of A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, and E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

Braintree.

—The Gazette is for sale by N. R. Proctor and Vinton & Son at North Braintree; C. M. Hobart and at the post-office at South Braintree; and at the post-office, East Braintree.

—The Gazette would be pleased to engage a correspondent at South Braintree, one who can furnish all the local items, etc. Write to our office.

—The job printing department of the Gazette is in first-class condition and is issuing good work.—Delivery free anywhere in Braintree.

—Miss Elsie Drinkwater entertained a number of her friends with a whist party Friday evening. Miss Bessie Pray and Master Percy Harrison secured the first prizes. The hostess received the guests in a charming manner and a delightful evening was enjoyed.

Albert Perry has returned from an extended hunting trip at his large preserve in Worcester county.

—The fire company tested some of their new hose Wednesday evening in the schoolhouse yard next to their Hook and Ladder house. A few strokes of the bell wer sounded to call the company together which was taken as an alarm of fire by quite a number who hastened to the place and remained to watch the test.

—Thomas Hollinshead is making preparations for building a new house at the head of Hollis avenue on Monatiquot Heights.

—In the set of doubles on the grounds of the Junior Braintree Tennis Club Wednesday afternoon, Miss Bessie Morrison and Philip A. Fowler of Randolph, won from Miss Miriam Lane and Harold Stevens 5 to 4.

—The Thayer Academy base ball club beat the Boston College nine 15 to 12 on French's common Friday afternoon. The features of the game were the fine "pick ups" by Loud of Weymouth.

—Jack Mahar's horse ran away on West street Wednesday afternoon. No damage was sustained, for although the gait was quite brisk the horse cleverly avoided all obstacles and went directly home.

—A forest fire of incendiary origin started near the New Braintree quarry in the hills just above the Quincy reservoir Tuesday, and before it had been stopped covered a large area of land burning valuable wood land, also 50 cords of wood recently sold at auction to Mr. Duffy of Quincy, There is a penalty for starting such fires, and certainly would not be misapplied on the culprit in this instance.

—An auction was held in the shop formerly used by Joseph Winters, next to the Hollis block Saturday by Charles A. Belcher. A large number of household goods and furniture were sold bringing fairly good prices.

—Hon. Amos Stetson is expected to move into his summer residence at Braintree next Wednesday.

—An iron fire escape is being added to the equipment of the new Long block opposite the depot. The building, which is now nearing completion, looms up, an imposing structure and an ornament to the town. The spacious armory hall which will be available for social purposes as well, contains more square feet than the town hall, being 10 feet larger one way and 4 feet smaller the other. The completion and dedication is looked forward to with great anticipation.

—Franklin Shaw is feeling much better and was able to be out on the street this week.

—Mrs. John Long is having her residence painted a very handsome and fashionable color.

—Richard H. Long is building a new house on Railroad street, which when it is done he expects to occupy as a residence.

—Messrs. Orton and Fedro Winkfield, two of Braintree's most enterprising and promising young men, having bought out Mr. John Page at Quincy will open a gent's furnishing store at that place on May 8. The firm are two most estimable young men, faithful and reliable, and naught but unalloyed success can be in store for them.

—The South Braintree Order of Odd Fellows and the Rebekah Lodge visited the South Weymouth lodge Wednesday evening.

—Elbridge Porter has a new house.

—There has been some talk of starting a Braintree base ball club this year. As there is so much good talent here it doesn't seem at all impossible for some interested energetic person to organize a very strong and successful nine.

—Owen McCarty, a passenger on the 11.10 p. m. train from Boston Saturday met with an accident just after the train had left the Braintree and had got as far as River street crossing, when it seems that he either fell or was pushed from the train and the wheels passed over his feet crushing all the bones in the right foot and severing three toes of the left foot. Dr. T. H Dearing cared for the sufferer until an extra car and engine from South Braintree conveyed the wounded man to Boston.

—A handsome dog owned by Mr. T. C. Faxon was seen on the street this week. The animal is a beautiful species of the Scotch Collie and valued at $350.

—The Village Improvement Society have had much to discourage them, but it would no doubt do them good to notice the fine and tidy appearance of the lawn and shrubbery about the residence of Mr. A. Hollis White on Hollis avenue. No one can estimate the influence of example.

—Rev. Mr. Duncan, secretary of the Congregational Sabbath-school and Publishing Society of Boston, occupied the pulpit of the First Parish, last Sunday. A most excellent discourse was delivered, teeming with interesting descriptions of the prosperity of the work with which he is connected throughout the country.

—The Ladies' Afternoon Whist Club met with Mrs. Chas. Mattherson, Monday afternoon. A large number of ladies met and enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon with whist and conversation, which rendered the party exceedingly satisfactory and interesting.

—Mr. Edward Bailey and family, returned Wednesday from Plymouth, Fla., where they have been passing the winter.

—The Methodist society held a very successful sociable in the Grand Army hall, Wednesday evening. The gathering being largely attended an enjoyable and interesting occasion was participated in by those who were present.

—A town meeting has been called for tonight, to see if Braintree will decide to dispense with the counsel services which we have employed conjointly with Holbrook and Randolph, as the suit with the mill owners, has been practically decided in favor of the mill owners, for $52,000; and to decide how the obligation will be met, together with any other matter properly coming before the meeting.

My Head was Fairly Rotten,

And how much I suffered it is hard to describe. That loathsome disease, catarrh, caused the above, and the doctors said they could not relieve me. I paid hundreds of dollars, for which I received no benefit. I got more good from two bottles of Sulphur Bitters than from all the money I paid to doctors. I shall continue the Sulphur Bitters, as I have great faith that they will cure me.—S. M. Day, 41 Hanover Street, Boston.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists.

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into nervous prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the liver and kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50c. at A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

CHAPTER XVI.

"And you are?"—"Malcolm Brent Rawlins, his son."

When, half an hour later, Col. Lawler announced that, in view of circumstances to which the court appeared to attach so much significance, he would rest the case for the prosecution, he had, despite every effort and the professional bravado assumed for such occasions, all the air of a whipped man. For half a minute after hearing that stunning question Mr. Schonberg had sat glaring at the judge advocate, his eyes protruding, his mouth wide open, his face ghastly white. Then he mopped his forehead, recalled to himself by Grace's sharp tones as the president again demanded answer, and faltered out:

"I ton't understand the question."

"You are called upon to explain to this court how it was possible for you to have made those entries in '83 and '84, as you have solemnly sworn you did, when the paper itself was not made until 1886," thundered Grace; "and the court is waiting for your answer."

"The paper vasn't made until 1886?" faltered Schonberg.

"No, sir!" fairly shouted the wrathful old soldier in the president's chair. "No, sir! You failed to study the water marks. Here it is repeated on a score of these leaves, 'Sconset Valley mills, 1886.' I say, explain this if you can."

"I ton't know anything about that," muttered the Jew at last, gulping down the big lump that arose in his throat. "I know when I made those entries, anyhow."

But the whole roomful could see that the wretch was only lying—desperately lying. The pencils of the correspondents were flying over their blocks with furious speed. One excited ambassador of the press had already made a lunge through the crowd for the doorway.

"Mr. Judge Advocate," said the president at last, "I fancy you can now excuse your witness from further attendance. Stop, though. Have you anything else you would wish to ask, Mr. Hearn?" And now his manner was all courtesy.

"Not a word, sir," was the smiling answer. "I shall beg to submit the list of my witnesses in a few moments."

People seemed to draw aside and make a wide lane for the wretched Hebrew and his crestfallen counselor, as the latter led his unscrupulous witness to the outer gallery, whither Lawler said he desired to retire for a moment's consultation. So entire had been the confidence of the mass of the people in the guilt of the officer that Schonberg's shady reputation had not sufficed to warn them of the possibilities in the case. But among educated and better informed people present there broke forth suddenly, after a moment's breathless silence, a ripple of applause that speedily swelled into a joyous burst of hand clapping which was taken up all over the room, and for a moment, mingled with angry hisses on the part of a few pronounced socialists in the throng, who were furious at the sudden turn in favor of the hated official class, the clamor was unchecked. Stern as he was, old Grace could not deny the audience the right of such a reaction. Then he rapped for order.

"You are not ready, I presume, to proceed with your defense?" said Lawler a moment after as he re-entered the room and glanced nervously around. All his airy, confident manner was gone. He looked almost dazed.

"Certainly," was the prompt reply. "Have the goodness to call in Private Welsh."

"May it please the court," said Lawler, "I submit that the accused should furnish the list of witnesses he desires to summon, in order that it may be determined for what purpose they are called, and whether the expense will be justified," said Lawler in response. "And as for Welsh, I maintain that that unfortunate trooper has already suffered too much at the hands of the accused to warrant his being subjected to further ignominy, as he would be if the court allowed such treatment as was accorded my last witness."

"If he is at all like your last witness, Col. Lawler, ignominy will not inaptly express the idea," was Grace's sarcastic response, whereat "an audible grin" spread over the room.

"Do you wish to summon witnesses from abroad, Mr. Hearn?"

"Not one, sir. Every man I need will be at the post by 1 o'clock this afternoon; and except Welsh, who is understood to be under the especial charge of the judge advocate and amenable to orders from nobody else, I will not trouble the court to call on anybody—the others will be glad to come."

Lawler shook his head and looked dissatisfied. If he could only know the men whom the defense was introducing, and could find out what they meant to testify, it might still be in his power to avert at least public catastrophe. Shrewd enough to see the evident antagonism he had created, and knowing that matters were going topsy-turvy at the moment, he bethought him of a ruse by which he could get rid of the crowd:

"I beg the indulgence of the court. I have allowed the case for the prosecution to rest rather than infringe longer on time that is so valuable, but I find myself unable to proceed at this moment, and I beg that you take a recess until 2 p. m."

The court demurred. It was utterly adverse to a recess. Hearn's witnesses were all ready to proceed—four or five at least.

"What is the need?" asked Thorp and Maitland, neither of whom felt like giving Lawler an inch of leeway. But courtesy to the staff officer of the division commander prevailed.

It was barely 11 o'clock when the throng came pouring forth from the court room, and Lawler hoped that, rather than wait three hours, the mass of people would depart. But his hopes were vain. If anything, the number seemed augmented. The noon train brought a couple of car loads from the eastward towns. It also brought a sergeant and private of infantry escorting a dilapidated looking party in shabby civilian dress whom old Kenyon, the adjutant, and a file of the post guard were at the station to meet. The stranger was bundled into an ambulance and trotted up to the guard house, into which he slouched with hanging head and an air of general dejection; and while the men were at their soldier dinner Kenyon was busily interviewing his tough looking prisoner, a squad of excited newspaper men meantime kicking their heels outside and raging at the military assumption which gave the post commander precedence over the press. The word had gone out all over the crowded garrison that the escaped prisoner Goss was re-captured, and the commanding officer's orderly had been rushed with a note to the provost sergeant.

"You bet he'll not get away," muttered this veteran of Brodie's company, as he glanced along the lively mess room, where the big bowls of bean soup were being emptied by rare soldier appetites. "You bet he don't, unless he can carry a cart load of lead in him."

Twenty minutes after Corp. Greene, of the guard, came to the doorway and sang out:

"Say, fellers, who do you think's captured and brought back? Trooper Goss, begad, the bosom friend of the patriotic Welsh."

And Welsh dropped his spoon and his eyes and turned a dirty yellow. He essayed presently to quit the table, but the old sergeant bent over him:

"Finish yer dinner, me buck. Don't let eagerness to see yer friend spoil yer appetite. You can't see him, anyway, till he has given his testimony before the court; and they'll want you, too, Welsh, me jewel, and I'm charged not to lose you—d'ye mind that, Welsh?—and I never lose anything but an occasional slice of me temper. Ate yer dinner, like the high spirited American ye are, now." But Welsh's appetite was gone.

The court room was crowded to suffocation that afternoon when, sharp at 2 o'clock, Col. Grace rapped for order.

"I suppose you are ready now, Col. Lawler? Call in the first witness."

Lawler looked resigned, even martyred. The court had come back from luncheon at the Lanes' in high spirits. The ladies again sat close to Hearn's table. Private Goss, with untrimmed beard and an air of general dilapidation, was sworn by the judge advocate, gave his name, rank, regiment, etc., and responded, in answer to Lawler's question, that he did know the accused very well.

"What do you want to ask the witness?" said Lawler in a tone as much as to say, What could you ask that would be of any earthly account?

"State where and how long you have known Private Welsh, C troop, Eleventh cavalry," were the words on the penciled slip, and Lawler read them grudgingly.

"I've known him six or eight years. Knew him when he enlisted in the Twenty-third, where he went by the name of Webster. Served with him at Fort Wayne until he got a 'bobtail' discharge, and when I got mine I went to his home in Ohio and hunted him up. He owed me money, but he was no good—couldn't pay it. His people wouldn't do anything more for him. He was Mrs. Blanvelt's nephew, but she had about got tired of trying to support him, so we came away and enlisted again, in the cavalry service this time, and then he got things fixed to go into Blauvelt's troop for both of us."

"What was your reason for deserting here while awaiting trial?" was the next question.

"Well, both Welsh and Schonberg told me I was bound to be convicted. Everything pointed to my being Corp. Brent's slugger, though I swear to God I never left the barracks that night. They said if I didn't get away before the court tried me I might get several years in state prison at hard labor, and worse still if he didn't recover. Welsh and Schonberg both said that there was no show for me, the evidence was so clear, even to the red pepper in the pockets. Some scoundrel put it there, and wore my things, too. Welsh got put into the guard room, purposely, opposite my cell, and threw a stone with a string through the grating, and I hauled on it and got a letter from him and Schonberg telling me how to escape. There were saws and tallow in the package I drew in, and Schonberg was down in the bottom with a buggy after I got out, and he drove me nearly all night around by way of Barclay to the other road, and sent me by rail to Omaha, where he promised that plenty of money would come to me; but no money came at all, and I was recognized and arrested by the police."

"Had you any idea that there were other reasons for getting you to desert than the one given?"

Lawler bounced up and objected to both question and answer; but both were ordered recorded.

"I hadn't—then," was the sullen reply; "I'm not so sure now. That Jew got me to go because I accused him of being a receiver of stolen property. It was to him Welsh gave the papers he took from the lieutenant's desk in Capt. Blauvelt's quarters. I went there with him one night after taps when the lieutenant was officer of the guard, and Schonberg gave Welsh ten dollars and me five to keep mum. After that Welsh began to run with Schonberg entirely and turn against me, and it was through him that I was always getting into trouble."

In vain Lawler propounded questions tending to show his witness, thus assailed, in a better light; but the more he examined the more damaging was Goss's testimony. At last the witness slouched out under escort of a sentinel.

But a greater sensation still was awaiting the patient listeners in the court room. The next man to enter, leaning heavily on the arm of the hospital steward, and accompanied by Dr. Ingersoll, was Corp. Brent, looking white and feeble, but very calm and self possessed.

"Give your full name, rank and regiment," said the judge advocate, without looking up.

"The name under which I enlisted is Malcolm Brent, corporal Company C, —th Infantry."

"The court will note, I trust, the singular character of the witnesses introduced by the accused," said Lawler promptly. "The last, by his own admission, is a thief and a deserter whom Welsh very properly essayed to cut loose from on discovering his real character; and now we have a second who plainly intimates that the name he gives is not his own."

"It is the one by which he is known to military law all the same, Col. Lawler. Please to proceed," said Col. Grace testily.

"You know the accused, I presume, or he would not have called upon you?" was Lawler's snapping query of the witness.

"Only as a soldier knows an officer whom he has every reason to respect. I have never exchanged a word with the gentleman, but I recognize him as Lieut. Hearn, of the Eleventh cavalry."

Again there was a ripple of applause in the crowded court, which brought Lawler, angry and protesting, to his feet. Silence restored, he presently read aloud the next question from a slip handed him by Mr. Hearn, which he slowly pasted on the sheet before him:

"What do you know with regard to the amounts charged against the accused on the books presented before this court and alleged to be unpaid?"

"I know that they were paid long ago. I heard the story of the whole transaction from the lips of Capt. Rawlins himself."

"Hearsay evidence," promptly interrupted the judge advocate, rapping on the table.

"But Schonberg's written acknowledgment and this letter of Capt. Rawlins will not be so considered," answered the witness respectfully, and bending forward he placed on the judge advocate's table a little package of papers. The court room was hushed. Even the pencils of the correspondents were arrested. Every eye in all the throng was on the pale face of the young corporal. Members of the court had whirled around in their chairs so as to look full upon the new witness. Old Kenyon, with lifted spectacles, brimming over with eagerness and excitement, was fidgeting on his chair. Pretty Mrs. Lane, all smiles, was keeping her fan in lively yet noiseless play. Georgia Marshall's heavily fringed lids were drooping over her downcast eyes; but the soft, summer fabric of her dress rose and fell upon her bosom like the billows of an unquiet sea. She was seated where every word of the witness could reach her ears, but no longer so near the little table where sat the calm young soldier whose trial had nearly reached an end. There was no longer need of counsel for the accused; yet his eyes time and again glanced yearningly at her.

Lawler was the first to speak. He dandled the papers contemptuously as he glanced them over:

"These are of no earthly account—mere forgeries possibly. One only purports to be a duplicate, anyhow."

"Duplicate of what, sir? The court will be glad to look at those papers when you are through with them," said Col. Grace.

"I object to their introduction as evidence, in any event, and protest against their admission here. What possible business can a corporal of infantry be having with the private papers of a deceased officer, anyway? Where did you know the late Capt. Rawlins—even supposing that he did write that letter?"

"Any question on that score the court may choose to ask I will answer," was the reply, with quiet self possession. "But I can swear to the genuineness of both papers."

Capt. Thorp had already possessed himself of the duplicate receipt, and after a brief glance tossed it over to the opposite member.

"Schonberg, without a doubt," he whispered.

Meantime, old Grace had received and was conning over the other, which he suddenly lowered and looked in amaze at the calm face of the witness, then handed it to Maitland, who read, started, and gazed too.

"I know this hand, sir. I know it as that of an old and valued friend," said Maitland, with lips that quivered perceptibly. "I could almost swear to its genuineness myself. It is probably one of the last letters the dear old fellow ever wrote, and it is to his boy at college. Here, Thorp, you read it aloud." And, though Lawler would have protested, protest was useless. Thorp arose, clicking his heels together as though on drill, and in a voice that was audible all over the big room, read:

FORT GRAHAM, N. M., June 14, 188–.

MY DEAR MALCOLM—It seems hardly possible that three weeks ago I was with you under the elms of the old campus listening to college glees and seeing the glad faces of your classmates—as manly a set of young fellows as it was ever my lot to meet—and now here I am again in harness under a blazing sun, with arid, sandy wastes on every side, and not a leaf that is not shriveled by the fierce rays. I find the old post much as I left it; but I go over to San Carlos in a day or two on court martial duty, and so am writing my letters to-night.

In the first place you will be glad to know that the gold leaves are in sight. If all goes well I shall become major of the Seventh and be ordered eastward within the next six months. Then I shall fit out my quarters in cozy style, and as soon as Mamie has finished her next year at madame's she shall come and keep house for me and turn the heads of the youngsters. Yet I do not want her to marry in the army, any more than I want you to enter it. Think of it, Malcolm, for twenty-five years now have I followed the standard, and if anything were to take me away what have I to leave you and May? Little or nothing. Even if you were to turn over your modest share to her, as you so gayly spoke of doing, and enlisting in hopes of winning a commission she would not have more than enough to keep her from want, though so long as your Aunt Eleanor lives she will never be in need of a home. Ah, well, God spare me a little longer! I so pray to live to see you both happily settled before I am called hence.

After our talk I cannot but hope that you will see how little there is to look forward to in the career of a soldier in our service—in peace times, of course. But if the longing prove too great I will not stand in your way. The life has its attractions. You will never have stancher or truer friends than those who wear the blue. But it has its trials and perils outside of those encountered in the field. I told you of the case of young Mr. Hearn, as fine a soldier as there is in the regiment today, yet he was well nigh ruined through falling into the hands of the Jews when young and inexperienced. Wasn't it luck that I should have known of the previous rascality of that clerk, and so was able to make him come to terms? Here is his duplicate receipt in full, filed carefully away among my papers. It was the means of saving a capital officer, too.

Your letters bring constant joy to me, my son. If it had but pleased God to spare your dear mother, I know well how proud and happy a woman she would have been in her great boy and bonny daughter; but his will be done. I may not write again before leaving for San Carlos, but my blessing goes with every line of this. There is such comfort in the frankness with which you told me of those college debts. Trust me fully; confide in me in any trouble, my son; no man can ever be more devotedly your friend than I—your father. The draft I sent will doubtless have removed all care and anxiety and left you a little sum to the fore. Spend it as you please, yet "do not dull thy palm with entertainment of each new hatched, unfledged comrade." What words of wisdom spoke that fond old fool! but he loved his boy as I love mine.

Good night, my lad.

"This above all, to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

Your father,
R. F. RAWLINS.

For a moment after Thorp's deep voice had ceased its task the silence in the heated room was broken only by some half stifled sigh. Corp. Brent had covered his pale face with his hands. Mrs. Lane was weeping silently. Hearn's eyes, swimming, were turned toward Georgia Marshall, who was bending over her friend, quietly fanning her. The effect of this letter was not unexpected; she had heard every word before.

It was Grace who spoke at last, after no little preparatory clearing of his throat:

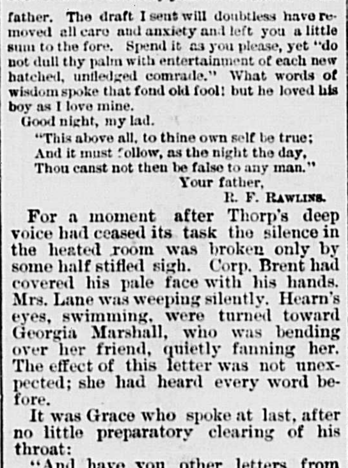

"And have you other letters from Capt. Rawlins?"

"Many, sir, but this was the last," was the almost tremulous answer; "he was killed within the week that followed."

"And you are?"——

"Malcolm Brent Rawlins, his son."

CHAPTER XVII.

Had him hauled off by two stalwart infantrymen.

The court had finished its labors and gone. The correspondents had gone, but presumably only to renewed labors. The various journals throughout the northwest that had so confidently predicted the summary dismissal of the offending lieutenant were now in a somewhat difficult position. They had started in to prove the officer a blackguard and the private a martyr; the result was exactly the opposite, and the problem was now how to get out of the pickle. To the average man, soldier or civilian, the consciousness of having publicly wronged a fellow being would have proved a source of distress so deep that nothing short of retraction as public and apology as far reaching as the affront would satisfy the offender. But, in its Jovelike attitude as censor of the morals and manners of the people, the press has no such qualms of conscience.

As one eminent journalist expressed it, "Of course we are sorry we are misled somewhat, but we can't take back what has been said; that injures the paper." And of course as between injuring the paper and injuring the man it is the man who must suffer. Another gifted editor, in whose eyes no benefit was quite to be compared with free advertising, expressed himself as considering that "That young fellow really ought to feel very much obliged to us; nine-tenths of the people might never have heard of him at all if it hadn't been for this." And he spoke in all seriousness.

Of course the correspondents themselves had long since seen the inevitable results, and had duly prepared their respective papers for the crash. Some of these journals promptly dropped the matter at once and for all as no longer worthy of attention; others transferred their assaults from the array of lieutenants to the array of courts martial. Others still, too deeply committed to extricate themselves, threw open their columns to any damaging story affecting the army which their correspondents could fabricate; and those papers which made any reference to the facts elicited before the court did so in the smallest type, but head lined the item in sarcastic or explosive big capitals.

The Palladium, or rather its editorial head, when explaining matters to a knot of men at the club, quietly justified the course of his paper by saying: "We did not send Mr. Abrams there at all. He had gone to Central City on some personal business of his own, to look into some property, and while there this Mr. Schonberg, a wealthy, prominent, and, as we suposed, reputable business man, told him about the offensive manners of the officers to the people, and offered to prove that they would be insulted and ostracised if they ventured to visit the garrison; and Abrams got warmed up and telegraphed to the managing editor that he was 'on to a good thing,' and so we wired him to go ahead." But a junior member of the editorial staff frankly admitted that he, in common with other journalists, had for sixteen years been "laying" for a chance, as he expressed it, to get in a good whack at the young West Pointer, and here they thought they had it.

Meantime the record had gone to department headquarters for the action of the general commanding, and Lawler went with it to fight the case to the last. There was not a soul at Ryan that did not know that, though the lips of the court were sealed, the finding had been "not guilty" on every possible specification. All Lawler could hope to do now was to persuade the general to pick the proceedings to pieces and rasp the court in his review of the case; but even this proved futile. The general, it seemed, would do nothing of the kind: it was even hinted that he rasped Lawler for the very one sided investigation that he made at the outset.

For two days following the adjournment of the court Fort Ryan was fairly in a ferment. Schonberg, terrified by the jeers of his townspeople into the belief that he was to be prosecuted for perjury, had slid away on a night train—"gone to purchase goods in St. Louis," said his unhappy spouse. Welsh, the martyr, had essayed to desert the same night, and, as a cat plays with a mouse, old Kenyon had let him go until the intent was made plain by his boarding the eastward bound train in civilian dress, and then had had him hauled off by two stalwart infantrymen and, incidentally, by the nape of his neck, and once more Welsh was remanded to his familiar haunt—the guard house at Ryan. This time a still more serious charge was hanging over his head—that of assaulting a non-commissioned officer in discharge of his duty, for Corp. Brent had recognized him as his assailant the instant he heard his voice. So had another witness. It was Georgia Marshall who turned to Kenyon the moment Welsh had finished his testimony and said, "I have heard that man speak before," and who unhesitatingly declared after Goss appeared that though by sight she could identify neither man, by voice she knew that the one who had assaulted the corporal of the guard that night was not Goss, but Welsh. Then Welsh himself broke down.

Such was the feeling against him among the men, such were the threats which he could not but hear as he lay in his barred cell, that he begged to be allowed to see the commanding officer. He was in fear for his life—poor devil! and indeed nothing but the discipline so derided of the newspapers saved him from the tarring and feathering and riding on a rail that the soldiers were wild to give him. In piteous accents he implored Kenyon to have him sent away, even to prison at Leavenworth. He would plead guilty to desertion, guilty to theft, guilty to assault, guilty to anything, if the major would only get him away from the terrible scowls and curses of his erstwhile companions. Only if the major would but believe him, he really had never struck the corporal at all; he had hurled the pepper in his eyes and run. Brent, blinded and raging, had rushed in pursuit, and had struck his head against the sharp edge of the brick pillar at the south end of the troop barracks. Very possibly this was true; for the gash was deep and jagged.

And Brent was convalescing rapidly, but between the ladies of the Lane, Brodie, Cross and Graves households stood in danger of being killed with kindness. There was just the least little spark of jealousy among the women of the infantry because it was to a comparative stranger that he should have revealed his identity, and by her be brought to the front at so supreme a moment. But it was Miss Marshall who had been greatly interested in his case from the very night of his mishap, and she and Mrs. Lane had been most kind and assiduous in their attentions to him during his days of suffering.

When he heard of the charges against Lieut. Hearn, and of the outrageous falsification of the Jew, Schonberg, his determination to conceal his name was at last overcome, and to Miss Marshall and to Dr. Ingersoll he told his story. His father's sudden and lamentable death at the hands of the Apaches had left him no alternative but to make over to his sister every cent that had been hoarded up and set aside for his education—every cent that was his by the old soldier's will—and then, leaving with her the little box that contained the captain's papers and letters, and quitting college he went to New York and enlisted, choosing the infantry service rather than the cavalry, because his father's old friends and associates were mainly in the latter, and though he had seen none of them since his boyhood days, he thought recognition not impossible, and he determined to make his own way and owe nothing to any man.

"I'm glad he came to us," said old Kenyon. "I'd do pretty much anything to see him in any other profession, but as he is bound to be a soldier I'll do all I can to place 'candidate' alongside his name on our muster roll, and then it would be just my luck to find him commissioned in the cavalry."

But if there was excitement at Ryan, just fancy the feelings of the officers and men in the Eleventh, now 200 miles away in the Indian Territory, when the letters came detailing the events of the last day of that court martial—Schonberg's exposure, Brent's unveiling, Welsh's disgrace, Hearn's undoubted acquittal, Lawler put to confusion and flight, and Georgia Marshall the heroine of the whole thing!

"'A Daniel come to judgment; ay, a Daniel,'" quoth Martin, as Lane read aloud Mabel's enthusiastic description of what she termed the "trial scene." "The whole regiment sends heartfelt congratulations to Hearn and love to Portia," was the telegram that came flashing back to Mrs. Lane. Morris lost no time in dictating a diplomatic message to his absent subaltern, expressive of his desire to welcome him back to duty after so complete a vindication. But Morris felt very ill at ease, and was not surprised that no answer was vouchsafed. He retired to his tent, and was not seen for some hours after learning of Brent's identity.

Meantime, just when one would suppose that all was plain sailing, balmy breezes, sun kissed wavelets, etc., just when nothing should have stood in the way of Mr. Hearn's rejoicing with all his heart, and just when the course of his true love ought to have been smooth and sweet, the very imp of perversity seemed to have suddenly developed in Georgia Marshall's breast, and she who had done so much to clear his name of "the clouds that lowered over" it, and had for two weeks been the young soldier's most valued friend and ally, now most unaccountably held aloof and fairly shunned his society. She met him only in a crowd. She simply would not meet him alone. On one pretext or another she avoided him, and poor Hearn, wounded, utterly unable to account for this sudden change, utterly incapable of fathoming a woman's whim, was now plunged in the depths of a distress exceeding that from which he had just emerged. She had rescued him from the toils only to plunge him into worse entanglement.

It was the fourth day after the adjournment of the court when Maj. Kenyon came to Mr. Hearn's rooms with a telegram just received from division headquarters, and found that young gentleman dejectedly reading a long letter in the handwriting of Judge Hearn, his father. Kenyon had grown to know it well. "Released from arrest, lad! That means you can go and join the regiment as soon as you like. What does the judge say now?"

"Read that page," was the answer, as Hearn placed the letter in the major's hand. And with knitted brows Kenyon read as follows:

"And now again I urge upon you, my son, the step I so earnestly counseled in my last. Maj. Kenyon's telegram just received says that your acquittal is assured and that your vindication is triumphant. This I felt would be the case. But what reparation have you for the wrongs and insults heaped upon you by the northern press? What proportion of the people who have had you portrayed to them as a low bully, a drunken brute, and a swindler will ever know the contrary? What paper that has vilified you will have the decency or the courage, now that it knows the truth, to make the faintest amends? Not one.

"The time has come for you now to quit at once and for all a profession which the people of the north so little appreciate and so persistently decry. I am aging fast, and shall be glad to have your strong arm to lean upon. A year or two in my office will fit you for the bar. Meantime you can have nearly double the income that the government pays you, and when I am gone all I have, practically, will be yours. Come back to us, my boy; come to the mother, the father, and the people who love you; come home to us who know and need you; you are not wanted where you are."

For some time Maj. Kenyon stood in silence. At last, seeing that he was expected to express his opinion, he slowly spoke:

"I feared that that first letter would come, and I might have known that this would follow. When will you answer?"

"Not just yet. I must think it over. Not—not until after to-night, anyway."

That evening Mrs. Morris insisted upon everybody's coming to her house "to celebrate." The news that Hearn had been released by telegraphic orders was all over the post in half an hour, and that he would start to rejoin the regiment in the field was of course a foregone conclusion. Only, said that all important personage referred to generally as "everybody"—only he will probably want to delay a little while on Miss Marshall's account, for if they are not already engaged it is solely her fault. Any one can see he is utterly in love with her.

Once in a while "everybody" makes a mistake. This time "everybody" was practically right. No one more thoroughly than Hearn himself knew how utterly he was in love with Georgia Marshall, and nobody but Kenyon knew that, yielding to the plea in his father's letter, Hearn might not return to the regiment at all.

It was a joyous gathering at the Morrises', and yet there had been a singular conversion at the Lanes' before Mabel could induce her friend to go at all.

"Mr. Hearn will certainly come and ask to be your escort," said Mabel the moment Mrs. Morris was gone. "How can you say no?"

"He will ask you, Mabel, as I shall not be visible, and you must accept. If you will walk over there and back with Mr. Hearn, I will go; otherwise I shall have a splitting headache and be confined to my room."

"How utterly absurd, Portia! Everybody expects him to escort you. No other man in this post will ask you so long as he is here. It is a foregone conclusion that Mr. Hearn will."

"That is why I want you to go with him. If I go it will be with Maj. Kenyon." And then Miss Marshall took the flushed, perplexed, but lovely face of her hostess between her slender hands and kissed it. "Mabel, I must not go with Mr. Hearn. Some day I'll tell you why." And then she ran to her room.

"Tell me, indeed! I know too well," was the almost tearful answer. "You are prouder, far prouder, than I ever was."

And so, though she gained her point for the time being, though Hearn had to offer his services to Mrs. Lane when he called and could not see Miss Marshall, though Mabel went on that moody young gentleman's arm and Miss Marshall followed with her stanch friend the major—Hearn raging with jealous pain the while—the time came when she found her precaution of no avail. Mr. Hearn was too much in earnest, too deeply in love, to be longer held at bay.

"Mrs. Lane," he stammered at last, as they were walking home late at night, "I must speak to Miss Marshall. Surely you know why. Have I not your good wishes? Will you not help me?"

How could Mabel Lane refuse? Once the gate was reached she bade both men come in, though Miss Marshall would have dismissed the major; and then slipping from the parlor along the hallway to the dining room she left Miss Marshall to entertain her guests, while with nervous hands she set forth wine, and then presently called Kenyon, as though to her aid. He came instantly, and Miss Marshall would have followed, but Hearn was too quick and sprang before her to the doorway. For three—four minutes, nervously, incoherently, Mrs. Lane strove to keep up a laughing chat with the bulky major; but he, too, saw the ruse as he sipped his wine, and neither was practiced in the art of dissembling.

Suddenly Hearn's footsteps, quick and firm, were heard in the hallway, the front door closed with sudden bang, and without a word to his hostess he was gone. Mrs. Lane's heart sank within her. Conversation was at an end. Kenyon stood for an instant in awkward silence. Then Miss Marshall's skirts were heard as she fairly rushed up the stairs, and the major took himself off as quickly as a clumsy man could effect an escape. An instant later Mabel Lane stood at Georgia's door. It was closed.

"Portia," she called, in low, pleading tones, "Portia, mayn't I come in?"

For a moment no answer at all.

"Georgia, dear, do speak to me."

At last a quick, impetuous step; the door was thrown open. All was darkness, but as Mrs. Lane entered with outstretched arms there came a low, almost wailing voice from the bedside:

"Oh, Mabel, Mabel, how could you?"

The trick of passing a person's body through a playing card is an old one, but none the worse for that. The method of preparing the card is shown in the cut. You first inform your audience that you will pass your body through an ordinary playing card or a piece of paper of that size.

You cut a card longitudinally down the middle, stopping just short of each end, as shown by diagram No. 1. You fold the card in half along the line of the incision, and then with a pair of scissors make a succession of cuts through the double thickness, from each side alternately, as shown in No. 2. Again unfold the card, and drawing its ends apart you will find it transformed into an endless band, composed of a number of little slips, the angles between each becoming less and less acute as you pull, till they are drawn sufficiently far apart to allow you to pass the card over and around your body. This trick is most easily done with thin note paper of tough quality.

A SONG OF SPRING.

Blow, softly blow, sweet spring time wind,
O'er budding lanes and fields of green—
(I must get Mike to fix that blind;
The back door needs a new wire screen.)

Brown robins flutter from the hedge
Where nests are hidden—(Gracious me,
The boys have notched this railing's edge
Until it's really ruined—See?)

Swift lights and shadows on the hill,
Bring back dear visions, dear, in vain—
(We can't put up lace curtains till
We paint these window-frames again!)

Oh, fairest dream! Oh, softest charm!
If I could seize it—(Yes, I hear!
Tell Kate to make the suds quite warm,
And I'll be down directly dear.)

Adieu to toil, to sordid cares—
(The junk man, is it? Very well,
Just ask him if he'll step up stairs
And see these stoves I have to sell.)

—Madeline S. Bridges in Ladies' Home Journal.

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 11, 1891.

Death may not be afraid of doctors, in fact I am certain that it isn't, but the fact remains that the death rate of Washington, which, owing to la grippe and other foreign complications—no insult intended to Italy or New Jersey—has been abnormally high for several months past, has taken a tumble of more than fifty per cent. during the last three days. I don't say that the presence of the several thousand physicians here in attendance, as delegates and onlookers, at the forty-second annual meeting of the American Medical Associaton, which convened yesterday, had anything to do with the decreased death rate of the town, but still it is a coincidence worth mentioning.

Of course we are glad to see the smiling faces of the men who always get credit for their cures and who never have to stand trial for the murders they commit while experimenting in the name of science, nevertheless it does not have a tonical effect upon people with weak stomachs to have made the principal subjects of discussion at breakfast, bacteria and microbes at dinner and the same with variations as to how yellow fever and the small pox ought to be treated at supper and during the rest of the evening, and it does not add one whit to a man's comfort to be handed a pamphlet on "The danger of suicide from melancholia," or some other equally as cheering a subject, every time he goes out for a little fresh air and a walk. When we are well, all of us believe in the adage "Throw physic to the dogs," without stopping to think that perhaps the dogs don't want it, but when we get sick we want a doctor, and a P. D. Q. at that.

I saw Marquis Imperial today: the gentleman who is all alone supporting the

at this capitol, and who has just been charged by Premier Rudina with the heavy responsibility of transacting only "current business" at the Italian legation, which by the way, Baron Fava's time located in two small rooms over a French restaurant, and may be yet for all anybody knows to the contrary. The Marquis was gotten up in dudish style, his mustachios curled as exquisitely as any head waiter in a high priced restaurant, and was promenading, in company with a very handsome young married woman, down Connecticut avenue, which the Anglomaniacs now always call "Wotten Wo," and for the time the only "current business" in which he was interested was talking nothings into the little pink ear of his companion.

The new woman's club gave a 5 o'clock tea this afternoon to members only. The members do not like to have their organization spoken of as a woman's club, they wish the imposing title upon their stationary, to be used when speaking of it. The rooms of the new club are directly opposite the handsome building of the swell Metropolitan club to which belong the husbands and sweethearts of many of the members of the ladies' club, but the report that the location was selected solely with a view of keeping an eye on the outgoings and incomings of the aforesaid husbands and sweethearts is indignantly denied, and was probably started by some disgruntled female Mugwump who was not asked to join the new club.

"THE WASHINGTON CLUB,"

The Japanese minister and Mme. Tateno, who have grown quite popular considering the short time they have been here, have cards out for a swell dinner party for Thursday, of next week.

The Mexican minister and his wife, who is an American (she was Miss Allen, of New York), will spend the summer travelling in Europe.

They are telling a good story on a Senator who is fond of the races. Yesterday he had a "tip," and invested ten dollars in two French Mutual tickets.

HIS HORSE CAME IN SECOND,

and in a fit of disgust he tore up the tickets and threw the bits of pasteboard away. Later he discovered that not a single ticket had been sold on the winner and that holders of tickets on the second horse would be paid just the same as if their horse had come in first. That gave sundry dollars to the cash account of the pool sellers, who recognize nothing but the tickets sold.

THE DEATH OF DR. EDWARD MAYNARD

occurred here this week, and deserves more than a passing notice. He was by profession a dentist, and in 1857 became a member of the faculty of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, the first dental college ever established; but he was better known as an inventor. In dentistry he was the first to use gold foil for the filling of the nerve cavity of teeth, which he introduced in Europe, and for which Emperor Nicholas, of Russia, offered him the title of "Actual Dentist to his Imperial Majesty," which, like a good American, he declined. He was the inventor of the Maynard rifle, of the metallic cartridge shell, of the fulminate automatically moving priming, which for years displaced percussion caps; of the process for converting smooth bore muskets into rifles, besides a number of other things. He was made a chevalier of the Military Order of the Red Eagle by the King of Prussia and was given the great medal of merit by the King of Sweden, on account of his military inventions.

"The Farmer's Alliance," said a republican from Ohio, "is going to upset somebody's calculations in our state this year. It is growing so rapidly that it is almost certain that it will have a state ticket in the field this fall, and the probabilities are that its candidate for governor will be Ex-representative Williams, a former republican, who is an able man and a hustler. If it drew equally from the old parties it wouldn't affect the result, but from the best information I can gather the Alliance gets at least so that if it polls a large vote it is easy to see what the effect will be. It will not only give the democrats the governorship but a United States Senator as well, for the legislature elected this year will elect Senator Sherman's successor."

I called on several Alliance men to see if I could get confirmation of the above, but if they knew of any movement to put an Alliance state ticket up in Ohio this year they declined to say so, contenting themselves with corroborating the statement as to the rapid growth of the organization and saying that the question of nominating a state ticket was one to be settled by the order in the state.

Representative Hooker, of Mississippi, is in town, and while he will not admit the probability of the Alliance for re-election, he does admit that the democrats will have to fight to defeat the Alliance, and that for the first time in that state the democrats are to organize clubs in every voting precinct of the state. This last statement speaks for itself. From Alliance sources I learn that the election of an Alliance man as successor to Senator George is considered almost a certainty.

Senator Morgan, a democratic member of the Senate committee on Foreign Affairs, is one of the many prominent men who believe that a is bound to come in the near future, and that whatever may start it, its real object will be for commercial supremacy on the American continent. Senator Morgan says: "We are surrounded, as it were, by a cloud of British influences. We feel them on Behring Sea, and in the eastern fisheries; in the Nicaragua canal—everywhere about us she is reaching out to hinder or to injure us." The revolution in Chili may bring on trouble with England. The United States has been requested by the President of Chili to use its good offices as mediator between his government and the insurgents, and if it be true that England is secretly supporting the insurgents, as has been charged, it will probably resent the attempt of the United States minister, Patrick Egan (who, on account of his connection with the Irish Home Rule struggle is not in good order with the British government anyway), to bring about peace upon any other terms than the success of the insurgents.

MR. HARRISON

will, barring accidents, get back to Washington this week, and he will find lots of work waiting for him. There is the reciprocity treaty with Venezuela, which only needs his proclamation setting a date for it to go into effect; the Spanish agreement for reciprocity with Cuba and Costa Rico; the partly negotiated reciprocity agreement with San Domingo; several matters pertaining to the purchase of Indian lands; some weighty questions of finance, including Secretary Foster's idea of continuing the four-and-a-half per cent. bonds after they mature, next September, at 2 per cent. and piles of unimportant routine business, to say nothing of Behring Sea matters, which are understood to have reached another acute stage.

Secretary Blaine has been spending a few days in New York, but he will be on hand to welcome Mr. Harrison, although it is extremely doubtful whether he feels disposed to do as much for Mr. Harrison's son, Russell.

The copyright law goes into effect July 1 but the Treasury department has already sent a circular letter explaining its provisions to all customs officials.

Secretary Noble has gone to St. Louis, where he expects to be kept for about ten days by pressing private business.

The sailing instruction for the commanders of the Revenue Cutters Bear and Rush were mailed by the Treasury department Saturday, but it is thought that supplemental instructions will be telegraphed to either Portland or Seattle after Mr. Harrison returns, at both of which ports they are ordered to stop on their way from San Francisco to Behring Sea. Secretary Foster refuses to say what is the nature of the instructions sent.

WILLARD.

U. L. C. Social.

The Union Literary Circle of Weymouth and East Braintree held the social which usually marks the close of its season, in the vestry of the Union church on Tuesday evening last. A large number of the members and their friends were present and a pleasant social time and an interesting programme were enjoyed.

The first number as announced by President Eaton, was a trio by Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Worster and Miss Allen, and this was well received and applauded. The second number was the reading by Miss Jenkins of a very cute little selection from Patsy's Exploits. A solo by Mrs. Worster followed which caused a ripple of merriment by the reference to "the foolish little bonnet." Charles Hunt then rendered a solo on the violin and Willie Mason gave a recitation. The trio again sang and this closed the first part of a very enjoyable entertainment.

The refreshments were now served by the committee in charge and consisted of an abundant supply of ice cream, sherbet and nice cakes.

During the after part of the evening's entertainment the company were regaled with toasts both "dry and dipped." B. F. Smith was toast-master and introduced the several speakers with apt and witty quotations Those responding were: Rev. B. F. Eaton, Rev. Wm. Hyde, Rev. Oliver Huckel, J. W. Armington, C. T. Crane, Miss Hyde and Miss Sheppard.

This society numbers fifty and has spent the winter in pleasant study. The circle now stands adjourned till October.

Interesting.

An interesting book has appeared, Richard Henry Dana's "A Biography by Charles Francis Adams."

Commodore James Hall was with Dana in the brig Pilgrim on the western coast of North America. He shipped as seaman, but was promoted and appointed second mate. He is mentioned several times in "Two Years before the Mast," and he and Dana were on very pleasant terms. He is now living in East Braintree, and was 80 on the Fourth of July last. May many happy years be added to his long and eventful life.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with so much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally. F. J. Cheney & Co., props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75 cents.

MY MAY.

Hark to the joyful sound, to the revel of rills!
The buds have leaped into leaf on a thousand hills;
The only snow is the snow of the orchard spray;
She cometh across the land, my May, my May!

There springeth a fire at the root of growing things;
There stirreth desire at the heart that awakes and sings;
The breast of the bluebird is shot with a brighter ray;
She cometh across the land, my May, my May!

She cometh with kindling eyes and with morning smiles.
O'er the sapphire-shining seas from the golden isles;
Her breath is that of the jasmine bloom and the hay;
She cometh across the land, my May, my May!

She quickeneth drowsing Hope by her calm caress;
She bringeth us heart-content for a balm to bless;
O, to lure her feet awhile from the Juneward way!
She cometh across the land, my May, my May!

But enough! She cometh. Rejoice, my soul, rejoice!
Join, O my voice, with the universal voice,
To hail the dream-delight of her dream-brief stay!
She cometh across the land, my May, my May!

—Clinton Scollard in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Country Newspaper

A short time since, Mr. Fred H. Miller, editor of the Hingham Journal, delivered an address upon the above subject before the Sons of Veterans.

It was very good and received some considerable attention from the press of the surrounding towns. We have been intending to quote some extracts from it for the benefit of our readers, but until this week have been unable to give it room. We will say in recommending its perusal that we heartily indorse its sentiments.

The address, stripped of much of its local application, was as follows:

"I never accepted an invitation to respond to a post-prandial sentiment with so much satisfaction or with so much general pleasure as I do this one upon "The Country Newspaper."

A writer has said that a "country editor is both a fool and a smart man; a fool for being an editor and a smart man for keeping out of the poor-house."

I don't quote this, gentleman, because I am in sympathy with the sentiment of it. On the contrary, if I thought the position of editor of a weekly paper entitled me to no more consideration than that of a fool, I should retire to such field of operation as would gain me greater favor among men. As to that part of it which refers to his keeping out of the poor-house, it may be his smartness or it may be a pride in giving him proper support on the part of his constituents. Certain it is that be he ever so competent, a failure to recognize it on the part of the community will meet with but half-way results for him.

In every community there is a disposition on the part of some to belittle the conduct and the usefulness of the local paper. Hardly a man in it but what were he called to conduct it could improve it in all respects. "Anyone can run a newspaper" has got to be so familiar an expression that more than one-half of a community believe it to be a fact. Samuel Bowles, than whom no individual more competent to speak, once said: "Editors are born, not made;" and, gentlemen, I have yet to have it pointed out to me that in the newspaper profession more than in any other, men mistake their calling. To that class of individuals who are in sympathy with the editor, and with his paper, who believe that the paper helps the town as much as the town helps the paper, who look upon it as much a component part of the make-up of the town as its schools and its churches—and as such would foster and encourage it to the last degree—to those people I take off my hat. Your editor as much as your teacher or your minister wants your aid and your encouragement.

A country newspaper is a reflex of the community in which it is published. It is a popular but fallacious impression that newspapers are just what their publishers make them. They are not: they are to a great extent what the business community where they are published makes them. They represent the character and merits of the community far more exactly than they do the energy and enterprise, the ability and ambition of their editors. It is in the power of the business men of any community to push their local newspaper forward to a standard impossible of attainment by any effort of the publishers without their co-operation, and in no other direction can an equal measure of effort and experience be applied with any like equal effect in advancing the interests, not only of the community at large but of the individual business man himself. It is a singular but unquestionable fact that even the most sagacious and public-spirited of the business men in most communities do not seem adequately to appreciate the value of the local newspaper as an agency of advancing the business interests, and augmenting the importance of the town where it is published. There are to be found in every town a considerable portion of business men who are ready to give their time and labor to the organization of movements for the attraction of outside enterprises and capital, and whom it is not difficult to induce to subscribe money for the establishment of promising enterprises, but who nevertheless contribute little or nothing to the means of greater importance and efficiency in the building up of their town—the support and improvement of its newspaper.

There is no question but that the newspaper of any town may be made the most effective possible agency in its development and prosperity. The efforts and influence of individuals are at best but spasmodic and transient, but the newspaper works on steadily and incessantly. The individual agitator reaches only a comparatively limited field of opportunity, but the newspaper reaches out in every direction and carries its influence to hosts of unknown and unsuspected watchers of opportunities. Among shrewd, intelligent men of affairs the character of a community is measured more by the standard of its newpsaper than perhaps by any other single indication. With a little observation and experience a remarkably just estimate of the characteristics of a town may be reached by an inspection of its newspaper. If the community is a live, pushing, liberal one, the columns of its local paper will be found crowded with the advertisements of its manufacturers, its mercantile and professional men. If these announcements are absent, the investigator will naturally set the town down as containing a slow, unambitious, unprogressive community. And without such support in a liberal measure no newspaper can do justice either to its town or to the ambition of its publisher.

I maintain that the average newspaper of today is ahead, or in communities where it is but half supported would be ahead, of its people if it were given one-half the incentive to life and energy that is accorded to other business enterprises. It is quite safe to assert that a newspaper is rarely found inadequately representing the consequence and enterprise of its community. The cases are exceptional in which a community deserves better newspapers than it possesses, or in which the local newspaper does not flatteringly reflect the actual character of the community. But to do this—thus to indulge a laudable spirit of local pride—they are very commonly compelled to make pecuniary contributions to the public good, far exceeding in volume what might reasonably be expected by them at the hands of scores of business men who seem to feel that they have done all that is incumbent upon them as public-spirited members of the community if they give the paper the support of a mere subscription.

You will excuse me, I know, if in having made a general application as to newspapers and to the communities in which they are published, I now make a local application. Are you, gentlemen, doing what you can and all you can for the support of your local paper? Surely if it is a desirable thing that you be possessed of a newspaper it is equally desirable that you give it no luke-warm endorsement. The institution that rejoices with you at the advent of each new business enterprise, which stands for the best in morals socially and religously; which advocates measures for your muncipal prosperity; which heralds the birth and laughs with you at marriage; which sorrowfully stands with you at the grave of your departed one—surely this institution is your friend, whose companionship you should cherish. No man among you I declare whose interest is so slightly affected that he can complacently fold his arms and see it die from non-support.

Your town is rich in the associations of the past; her citizens are honest, sober and thrifty; the atmosphere of her society is wholesome; the provision for her public institution is liberal and competent; her beautiful streets and broad fields attract the men of means to make your scenes their summer homes. A newspaper published in the midst of surroundings such as these would illuminate your page "like a bon-fire did the light of it" show you to be more in sympathy with its existence."

Weymouth Gun Club.

The Weymouth Gun Club held a shoot at their range last Saturday afternoon and like the former ones it was very successful. The wind was light and some good shooting was done. The riflemen also did good work. On percentage of birds killed, C. F. White was first with 72 per cent. G. F. Shaw, 2d, 66 per cent; A. H. White, 3d, 55 per cent; Hobart, 4th, 44 per cent; Farrar, 5th; Hall, 6th; Whitmarsh, 7th; J. B. White, 8th; Jacks, 9th; Gardner, 10th.

The score: 10 single—G. F. Shaw, 1st; C. F. White, 2d; Farrar and A. H. White, 3d; Jacks and Barnes, 4th.

10 single—C. F. White, 1st; Hall, Farrar and Hobart, 2d; Whitmarsh, 3d; J. B. White, Barnes, 4th.

6 single—C. F. White, Whitmarsh, 1st; Hobart, 2d; Hall, Barnes, 3d; Jacks, Farrar 4th.

10 single—C. F. White, Shaw, 1st; Whitmarsh, A. H. White, Jacks, Hall, 2d; Hobart, 3d; Gardner, 4th.

3 pair birds—C. F. White, A. H. White, 1st; Shaw, Whitmarsh, 2d; Gardner, Jacks, 3rd.

6 single—C. F. White, A. H. White, Barnes, 1st; Farrar, Whitmarsh, 2d; Shaw, 3rd; Gardner, 4th.

6 single—Hall, 1st; C. F. White, J. B. White, Farrar, 2d; Whitmarsh, Jacks, 2d.

10 birds—C. F. White, 1st; Hall, 2d; Whitmarsh, 3rd; J. B. White, Farrar, 4th.

3 pair birds—C. F. White, 1st; Jacks, 2d; J. B. White, 3d; Whitmarsh, Farrar, 4th.

10 single—C. F. White, 1st; J. B. White, 2d; Whitmarsh, 3rd; Farrar, 4th; Hobart, 5th; Jacks, Hall, 6th.

5 single—C. F. White, Farrar, Hobart, 1st; Jacks, Whitmarsh, A. H. White, 2d; Barnes, 3rd; Hall, Gardner, 4th.

Saved from Drowning.

A two and a half year old child of William Litchfield's had a narrow escape from drowning Monday morning. The child had been left alone for a moment in a baby carriage at Henry F. Bicknell's store door on Broad street, and the perambulator, in some manner, started and rolled down a slight decline over the wall into the canal. Fortunately the carriage remained right side up and Geo. W. Cummings, who witnessed the accident, jumped into the water and rescued the vehicle and its occupant none the worse for the adventure. E. C. Raymond took the child home.

Protection of Birds.

The Massachusetts Society for the Protection of Cruelty to Animals offer the following prizes to any person who will furnish sufficient evidence that shall convict any person of the violation of the law of Massachusetts, by killing any insect-eating bird or taking eggs from its rest: Ten prizes of $10 each, and five of $5 each.

All such violations shall be made known to officer Noble Morse of North Weymouth that an investigation may be made at once.

The law should be rigidly enforced that the birds may be protected. Complaints must be accompanied with two or more reliable witnesses.

Honors.

Frank H. Bemis of North Weymouth, formerly a member of the Class of '88, North High School, has the honor of being President of the Senior Class at Boston University.

President Lovell.

Thomas P. Lovell who is enthusiastic on base ball has been elected president of the New England Base Ball League. With President Lovell at the helm the league teams will undoubtedly enjoy a brilliant and prosperous season,

Alvah Will Cater.

The dinner of Reynolds Post 58 G. A. R., will be served at Agricultural Hall, South Weymouth, this year. Weymouth's popular caterer, Alvah Raymond, will supply the wants of the inner-man as in former years.

A Safe Investment.

Is one which is guaranteed to bring you satisfactory results, or in case of failure a return of purchase price. On this safe plan you can buy from our advertised Druggist a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It is guaranteed to bring relief in every case, when used for any affection of Throat, Lungs or Chest, such as Consumption, Inflamation of Lungs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Croup, etc., etc. It is pleasant and agreeable to taste, perfectly safe, and can always be depended upon. Trial bottles free at A. M. Bachelder & Co's, Weymouth; E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth, Druggists.

A National Event.

The holding of the World's Fair in a city scarcely fifty years old will be a remarkable event, but whether it will really benefit this nation as much as the discovery of the Restorative Nervine by Dr. Franklin Miles is doubtful. This is just what the American people need to cure their excessive nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, dizziness, sleeplessness, neuralgia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, etc. It acts like a charm. Trial bottles and fine book on "Nervous and Heart Diseases," with unequalled testimonials free at A. M. Bachelder & Co.'s. It is warranted o contain no opium, morphine or dangerous drugs

For the Gazette.

IN MEMORIAM.

TO MRS. JOSEPH HARDING.

Gone to rest! Life's journey ended!
All its duties bravely done;
Gone to rest, as goes the laborer,
At the setting of the sun.

Why should we who tarry longer
Where the gathering shadows fall,
Mourn because a friend and brother
Hears the loving Master's call?

He has walked for years among us.
Faithful, quiet, just and true;
Doing, with a Christian spirit,
What his hands could find to do.

Place the ripened sheaf above him—
Of his life an emblem meet;
O'er the heart that throbbed with kindness
Lay the lilies pure and sweet.

Sweeter than the breath of lilies—
Richer than the ripened grain,
Is the record he has left us,
Of a manhood free from stain.

Oh! ye stricken, heavy mourner,
In your lonely home to-day!
Rest your heart on God's sweet promise,
He will be your strength and stay.

Though your soul be bowed with sorrow,
Let your faith much more abound;
One more seat on earth is vacant—
One more saint in Heaven is crowned.

Trading Receipts.

In olden days, when railroad companies used to believe their conductors honest, an official, whose run was from Buffalo east, was called into the president's room at the end of one of his trips, and the big man kindly said to him:

"John, the receipts on your run have been growing beautifully less for some time past."

"Yes, sir; but travel is very light, you know."

"Is it? I hadn't heard of that. John, you have lately built a nice house?"

"Yes."

"You have a diamond pin?"

"Yes."

"You keep a horse and buggy?"

"Yes."

"And your salary is only $60 per month John?"

"Yes, sir."

"I don't think you would steal from the company."

"Oh, no! no! no! sir!"

"But I've a proposition to make. Suppose you give the road your receipts, and you take everything else coming in! If you don't, I don't see how we are going to pay running expenses over a month longer!"—New York Sun.

Piscatorial Pleasures.

Fishing in Whitman's pond, East Weymouth, is excellent this season, and the deciples of Izaac Walton are having fine sport. Bass, pickerel, perch, hornpouts and the lesser denizens of the pond are more numerous than for years. Joshua Cook hooked four handsome pickerel and a number of smaller fry Monday, and a bass of several pounds weight is reported among the results of a recent days' fishing.

Beyond Town Limits.

—In Plymouth when boys ten years of age play with loaded pistols they get shot as was the case last week.

—There is much vandalism at Pilgrim Hall Plymouth, such as skinning the coverings from trunks, chairs and sofas.

—A lady at Centre Hanover is the champion snake killer so far this season, she has already fifteen to her credit and the season is yet young.

—Rockland has reconsidered the vote whereby it was to have a steam fire engine and will dispense with that luxury a while longer.

—Rockland has also voted to have a superintendent of streets, but it will cost nothing as they voted to pay him from the road appropriation of last March.

—The deadly toy pistol has been putting in some good(?) work in Readville the past week.

—The aldermen of Marlboro have refused to grant licenses to druggists by a vote of five to two.

—Wrentham is to have a public library. The plans are in the architect's hands, and work will begin at once.

—Eli Perkins was to have given his lecture on the "Philosophy of Wit" in Rockland last week, but as the people had too much wit to buy tickets the lecture was not given.

—Dedham is about to avail itself of the privilege of precinct voting.

—Medfield is to have the best or nothing. The order of Aladdin's Lamp will give its members $100, for initiation fee of $5, and two monthly installments of 50 cents each. When a certificate comes due the Great Keeper simply rubs the lamp and it is paid.

—The number of building permits granted to Dorchester, some weeks, outnumbers all the rest of Boston.

—The old Cobb house, recently burned in Kingston, is said to have been 240 years old.

—The Jerusalem Road extension will soon be completed. It will have cost $2700 but nearly every dollar of it will be paid back to the town of Cohasset this year in corporation taxes.

—Capt. Seth Sprague, a 90 year old citizen of Marshfield passed away last week.

—E. A. Bumpus, son of Judge Bumpus, was thrown from his horse while riding at Hough's Neck last week, and had his arm broken above the elbow.

A Pleasing Sense

Of health and strength renewed and of ease and comfort follows the use of Syrup of Figs, as it acts in harmony with nature to effectually cleanse the system when costive or bilious. For sale in 50c. and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists.

Merit Wins.

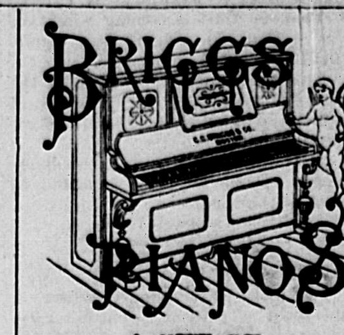

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or tha. have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory resutls do not followtheir use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth; E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth, Drug Store, large bottles 50c. and $1.00.

Remarkable Facts.

Heart disease is usually supposed to be incurable, but when properly treated a large proportion of cases can be cured. Thus Mrs. Elmira Hatch of Elkhart, Ind., and Mrs. Mary L. Baker of Ovid, Mich., were cured after suffering 20 years. S. C. Linburger, druggist at San Jose, Ill., says that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which cured the former, "worked wonders for his wife." Levi Logan of Buchanan, Mich., who had heart disease for 30 years, says two bottles made him "feel like a new man." Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold and guaranteed by A. M. Bachelder & Co. Book of wonderful testimonials free.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Railroad at Canajoharie, N. Y.

FRIDAY, MAY 15 1891.

Florida has long been known as the "land of flowers" and the home of consumptives. And now it is stated that it is also a land of sugar. It is claimed that sugar cane can be cultivated there better and cheaper than in Louisana or Cuba.

Last week fifteen thousand Italians landed upon our shores, and this is about the average. A town of Italians larger than Weymouth being thrust upon us every week in the year. Can the country stand it without danger to its institutions?

From the way Italian immigrants are pouring into our ports, it looks as though the swarthy macaroni eaters proposed getting even with this country through the ballot box. We hope they are not all members of the "Mafia," on vengeance bent. What about that proposed restricted immigration?

Men who talk "bosh" to reporters have no right to complain if the papers print what is said. It is the reporter's business to report, and to report correctly what he hears, and it is an exception to find a reporter who wilfully misrepresents and no reputable newspaper will, knowingly, give him employment.

It is impossible to get brandy for a sick man, but 40 rod whiskey flows freely to lubricate the dry mouths of the drunkards. Thus far, the effect of the no-license vote has been to take away the opportunities of the sick for obtaining liquor for medicine, while the back-kitchen bar-rooms flourish unchecked. Hardly consistent, is it?

The New Orleans grand jury said, in effect, that the lynching of the Italians was proper and justifiable, and it intimates that there are others—detective O'Malley and lawyer Adams—that ought to be similarly dealt with. We rejoice that we reside here instead of in New Orleans. We like a little excitement occasionally,—it tones up the system and wakes us up,—but we draw the line at lynching.

One of the most interesting events of the near future will be the re-entrance of Bismarck into public life, as a member of the German Reichstag. That he is the greatest European of the age, cannot be denied even by those who dislike him. The question is, will he cast his influence for peace or for war? Humanity causes us to hope for continued peace although a general war in Europe would add millions to America's wealth.

Mr. Blaine is holding his tongue very successfully regarding his candidacy for the presidency, but his friends and enemies are doing quite enough talking about him. To hear his friends you would think the millenium was only awaiting his election to appear upon earth, or at least that part of it under the stars and stripes; while to listen to the other side it would seem that the country's doom will be sealed with Blaine as president. This nation is too big and intelligent to be much affected for weal or woe by any one man's being in the president's chair.

What Do We Know About It.

"The treasury is bankrupt," frantically yell the Democrats. "We have millions of available cash in the Treasury," the Republicans retort. Between the two the common people are naturally somewhat bewildered and would like to know just what the financial status of the government is. Of course it is simply nonsense to talk about bankruptcy. Uncle Sam may be a little pressed for cash during the next fiscal year, but nobody doubts his financial soundness. But Secretary Foster might give the people a plain, common sense statement that can be understood without the aid of an expert accountant.

Possibility of a Strong Third Party.

A conference of "reformers" is to be held at Cincinnati next week for the purpose of endeavoring to arrange lines of action for a new political party, and to arrange a systematic plan for the education of the industrial classes on reform issues.

The Farmer's Alliance head the movement and associated with them are the Nationalist clubs, the Knights of Labor, the Reform Press Association and many smaller bodies.

Although there is a strong probability that so many incongruous elements will be brought together that no forceful action can be taken by the convention, there is also a possibility that under the council of wise heads a new party may be formed that may be a power in our future politics.

The Significance of It.

Nearly all the current literature of the day is teeming with socialism. Every new book attempts to deal with and throw new light upon the subject. All authors recognize the strong set of the tide in this direction and are quick to cater to the absorbing interest of the people in the great heart stirring subject of the improvement of the material conditions under which the mass of humanity is laboring.

The hungering demand for this literature is enormous as is shown by the sales of hundreds of thousands of books containing only a germ or glimmer of a better future for the people.

What does this signify?

It means that a tremendous educational work is going on—That the people are opening their eyes to see the great possibilities which are theirs if they will only stretch forth their hands and grasp them.

That the near future is to see a freer and nobler race of men and women than the world has ever yet conceived of.

That these important and weighty matters are engaging the attention of of the world's best men and women, and that ways will be found to gradually improve the lot of the poor till the appalling stories of hardship and suffering now heard upon every hand will be a thing of the past and a relic of the nineteenth-century "dark ages."

That the time is coming when the saying that "All men are born equal" shall have a real significance.

That the days of oppression, of the ill use of the great power of money, of trusts and of railroad corporations are surely numbered.

That it is not charity or benevolence that the people are being educated to demand, but justice.

"The mills of God grind slowly,
Yet they grind exceeding small."

Liquor for Medicine.

The most embarassing question of this town at present is that in regard to the necessary sale of liquor. Under no-license, the Selectmen have refused to grant the druggists any licenses to sell for medicinal purposes, and as a consequence no liquor can be obtained by the sick, even on a doctor's order.

We are informed that on Sunday last it was necessary to obtain some French brandy for a patient suffering with pneumonia, and, as the druggists would not supply it under the present status of affairs, a long delay was incurred by the necessity of telephoning to Boston for it.

Under the present laws, the express companies are liable for bringing liquor into a no-license town. If they live up to the law, as of course they should, it is difficult to see how any liquors can be obtained, even in the severest cases of sickness, unless a special private messenger be sent to Boston for it.

There is something radically wrong in this state of affairs. Medicine should be freely, easily and quickly obtained when necessary, and when ordered for a patient by a physician, liquor becomes as much a medicine as quinine or any other drug.

If it is not thought best by the selectmen to grant the druggists the right to sell for medicine, then some other way might be devised whereby, under proper restrictions, liquor may be obtained when absolutely needed.

If the physicians would, themselves, undertake the task of supplying the liquor which they order it would be, perhaps, a happy solution of the difficulty.

But it seems as if the necessary means of restriction and of supervision might be arranged so that the druggists could be allowed to supply liquor upon an order from a regular physician.

We acknowledge that, perhaps, the record of the druggists in the past is against the supposition that they can be trusted to live up to the letter of the license law, and that there was ample cause in this record for the selectmen to refuse to grant them licenses. On the other hand the druggists cannot be blamed for refusing to incriminate themselves by selling, or for taking their liquors out of their stock when they would be liable to seizure if found there.

However considered it is a knotty problem to solve. But that our people will be willing to be compelled to depend upon Boston for this, at times, much needed and often-ordered-by-the-physician medicine, we do not believe.

The matter must be settled in some rational manner so that the sick may not be sacrificed to an intemperate attempt at temperance.

Weymouth in the Twelfth.

As we have before stated, by the census of 1890 Massachusetts is one of the few Eastern States which have made sufficient gain in population to be entitled to an additional Congressman, on the basis on which the Fifty-third and subsequent congresses will be made.

The work of making thirteen congressional districts where there were but twelve has been no light task. The Legislative Committee has been engaged in preparing a plan which was submitted to the Legislature yesterday. Unlike the former method, this time the numbers begin in the extreme western part of the state, so that but few, if any towns, cities or parts of cities will be in the district of the same number as before.

Yet the changes in associations are few; most localities will have the same political attachments as under the old arrangement.

Weymouth will be in the Twelfth, instead of the Second district, but will be associated with nearly the same towns. We shall, however, be separated from Quincy and Milton, as they with several of the Boston wards, make the 10th District.

The committee have very evenly balanced the districts as to population, the widest difference being 170,221 and 174,866.

The political status of the districts has been, it is thought, quite well maintained.

Should the report of the committee meet the approval of the legislature and become a law, the election of 1892 will be looked forward to with much interest.

Addition to the Monatiquot Yacht Club Fleet.

Vice Commodore E. F. Linton is having built for his use a cabin cruising launch, a naptha propelled craft for cruising up and down the coast. The new boat will be of the best pattern of steam launches and will cost $5,500. A boat of exactly the same build and dimensions made the voyage from New York to Florida rounding Cape Hatteras with ease.

It is 40 feet in length and 8 feet beam. The engines will be of ten-horse power. There will be a pilot room and a main saloon, besides the engine room and galley. The hull will be of cedar, oak ribs, painted white with name in brass letters on the stern. It will be sheathed with copper to the water line. The pilot room will be furnished in oak with leather covered cushions. A speaking tube will communicate with the engine room. The saloon will be finished in antique oak, with plush cushions. The galley will be provided with all possible conveniences to make a stay on the boat comfortable. There will be brass fittings throughout around the steering gear, etc.

This craft will make a handsome and imposing addition to the Monatiquot Yacht Club fleet the coming season.

Fifteenth Anniversary.

Division 9, A. O. H. of East Weymouth, will hold their fifteenth anniversary in Odd Fellows Opera House, this Friday evening. They will have speaking, singing and a dance. Supper will be furnished by Caterer Blunt of Boston. The State officers of the order will be present. President William Tobin will be master of ceremonies.

RAIN.

It rains, and all the sky is gray;
While I with heart so blithe and gay
Sit here and dream my time away.

Heart-sunshine throws on outward things
Its own glad life; with ruffled wings
The lark through rain soars up and sings.

And so it still must ever be;
The eyes, the eyes shall only see
Without what is within, for we
Are makers, everlastingly.

—C. W. Herbert, in Spectator.

Obituary.

A short obituary notice of Mr. E. F. Pratt was published by us the week of his death, but we are requested by his friends to print the following:

North Weymouth has recently been called to mourn the loss of one of its best citizens, Elisha Francis Pratt, who was born in Weymouth Nov. 11, 1833, and died April 27, 1891. Mr. Pratt was the son of Elisha and Mary Pratt, and was the eldest of a family of six children, one of whom only survives him. His mother, to whom his devotion was tender and unremitting, passed to the higher life but a few months ago. His venerable father still survives "in the serene evening of an unblemished life" waiting the call to "go higher."

Mr. Pratt was united in marriage on the 10th of May, 1857, with Mary Freeman Joseph, with whom he lived in most loving relations in the modest cottage on North street, which was his home—the home he loved—the entire period of his married life. Three children were born to Mr. Pratt; one only, a promising son, survives him.

Mr. Pratt was connected with the shoe business in one form or another from his youth. He was in the employ of the firm now known as J. H. & F. H. Torrey from the time the factory situated at the corner of North and Bridge streets was erected—about 30 years—and at the time of his death had been in the employ of the firm longer than any other man in the factory.

Mr. Pratt had been troubled with a kidney difficulty for several years, but it was not till within a few months that the disease assumed serious form. His sudden, unexpected death was a shock to the community as well as to his family. No man was more highly respected or more universally beloved. An enemy he had not nor could have. He bore universal love to humanity and did to all men in all things what he conscienciously believed to be right. He was specially interested in all the reforms of the day, temperance, justice, equal rights, and sought to the best of his ability to bring about the reign of "Peace on earth and good will to men." He was one of the rare few of whom the words of the world's greatest poet could be appropriately quoted:

"His life was gentle and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world This was a man."

Mr. Pratt's funeral took place on the afternoon of April 29. After a brief private service at the home the mortal form was borne to the Universalist church where he had regularly and devoutly worshipped. The service was conducted by Rev. B. F. Eaton, pastor of the church. A select quartette from the church choir rendered fitting music. The members of Crescent Lodge I. O. O. F. of East Weymouth, of which he was an honored member, were present in full force and conducted the special service of the order. His shopmates were present in a body together with the citizens generally, crowding the church to its utmost capacity.

At the close of the services the large company present took the "last look" at the face of one they had loved so well and then the mortal form was borne to its resting place in the family lot in the village cemetery.

Teachers' Meeting.

The teachers of Weymouth had the pleasure last Friday of listening to a most excellent talk on "Language" by Robert C. Metcalf of Boston. Mr. Metcalf spoke emphatically of the importance of teaching the child to think, first giving him something to think about; of the great advantage of the elementary science lessons as an aid to good language. He emphasized the importance of teaching the pupil to stand properly and to express himself in complete sentences. He said that much of the poor work done in arithmetic was due to the child's imperfect understanding of the language of the problem. He hoped the time would soon come when the reading books would be greater help in acquiring good language than they now are. Many of the books now in use contain only short selections or matter too difficult for the child to comprehend, so that reading becomes simply a calling of words. For written work he advised a free use of dictation exercises, a few minutes being devoted to the work every day; not a haphazard giving of sentences with no end in view, but a definite, systematic plan of work.

At the close of the lecture Mr. Metcalf spoke to the teachers of the higher grades on work especially adapted to these classes.

Norfolk Probate Court.

In the Norfolk Probate Court before Judge White at Quincy the following miscellaneous business was transacted:

Will approved: Of John Connell, Mary Connell of Weymouth executrix; bond, $1,500.

Administration granted: George W. White of Weymouth upon the estate of Elisha Alden; bond, $3,000.

Accounts allowed: First of Charles H. Bodge of Weymouth, estate of Ellis Bodge. Second, of Charles Q. Tirrell, guardian of George E. Tirrell; Henry Wardwell of Salem, appointed guardian of George E. Tirrell of Weymouth.

Prince H. Tirrell of Weymouth, appointed trustee under the will of Cyrus Tirrell; bond, $4,000.

The Active Base Ball Club.

The Active base ball club has reorganized with practically the same membership as last year. No managar has yet been chosen to succeed Oscar Madan who has served so efficiently in that capacity hitherto, but will be unable to devote the requisite time to the position this season. A subscription paper will be circulated before long to raise money for the necessary expenses of the coming season. Citizens should give liberal support to the club which has furnished and will still furnish good examples of the national game. Why not arrange a series of games with clubs from the other villages for the championship of Weymouth?

Y. P. S. C. E. Social and Lecture.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, connected with Union church, gave a social and entertainment in the lecture room of Union church, on Wednesday evening. Only a very few were present, but the programme was of unusual excellence for that class of entertainment. The programme was as follows: Trio, Misses Thayer, Gutterson and Allen; violin solo, James Hunt; solo, Miss Jennie Thayer; lecture, Mr. Borton; solo, Mr. G. H. Baker; trio, Misses Thayer, Gutterson and Allen.

The lecture or talk by Mr. Borton was very interesting and replete with mirth awakening anecdotes and descriptions of Mexican and Chinese customs. Those who were frightened away by the fear of a dry lecture, sadly missed it this time.

Director's Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the directors of the Weymouth and Hingham Street Railway Co., in Boston to-day.

A New Church at East Braintree of Methodist Faith.

The public has been kept informed of the doings of the Methodist Society of Weymouth and East Braintree through our columns for some time past, and will no doubt remember that about two years ago a piece of land was secured by them on Commercial street, East Braintree. Then the philanthropic and generous citizens of the village were invited to subscribe toward the sum necessary for the erection of a church. That these efforts to raise money have been successful is shown by the very pretty and charming little edifice now standing upon their lot of land.

The dedicatory exercises were held last Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the church was filled to its utmost capacity, some even failing to obtain admission.

The exercises, which were in charge of Presiding Elder S. O. Benton of Providence, opened with organ voluntary by Miss McDowell, followed by an anthem by a quartette consisting of Mrs. Owen, Miss Gutterson and Messrs. Wight and Blanchard.

Rev. A. S. Staples and Rev. J. F. Buckey read appropriate selections from the scriptures. Rev. Mr. Huckel made a fervent prayer, invoking the Divine blessing upon this Methodist people, and the quartette sang a response. Rev. S. O. Benton explained the reason of the erection of the church, that it was believed there was a field here for labor in the Methodist's peculiar way, and that it was started in no spirit of rivalry toward the other churches.

Rev. Dr. Charles Parkhurst, editor of Zion's Herald, delivered the sermon and made an eloquent appeal for cheerful Christian workers. He thought that it was wrong and displeasing to God to go about with a long face, gloomy and dispiriting. "What the world most needed," he said, "was an abundant crop of cheerful Christians." "A living faith was needed and not a dead one. There is too much of the latter now in all churches." He spoke very strongly and pressed the truth home with some very pathetic incidents and anecdotes that brought tears to the eyes of the audience.

Presiding Elder Benton stated that the cost of the church had been about $2,600, that $1,600 had been raised by the members and that, therefore, there remained a debt of $1,000. This he desired to see cleared up that day if possible and he invited subscriptions. First, he asked those who would pledge themselves to give $100 to raise their hands, and as an encouragement he offered $100 from the Methodist Mission Home Society.

The only other $100 subscription was made by Mr. Josephus Sampson. After some little wait for the encouragement of the hesitating, the amounts asked for were dropped to $50, and several of these were obtained. Then the amounts were lowered in succession to $25, $20, $15, $10, $5, $3, $2, $1, and many pledges were received for these various sums. As a final effort the boxes were passed for small sums. The grand total of the amount thus raised was $760.

The dedicatory ritual and the Doxology closed the exercises.

In the evening a sermon was delivered by Rev. S. O. Benton, presiding Elder of the district, and a collection was again taken resulting in about $40 more toward the debt, and members of the church then pledged themselves to raise the remaining $200, so that the debt is practically wiped out and the Society starts on its mission under the most favorable auspices.

The officers of the church are: Stewards, Messrs. Josephus Sampson, Wm. Nickson, Henry M. Storms, Christian Hanson, Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Mrs. A. E. Pratt, Mrs. Esther H. Abbott, Mrs. Lydia C. Allen, Miss Sarah C. Bennett, Miss L. M. Clark; trustees, Messrs. Henry M. Storms, Josephus Sampson, William Nickson, Alvin A. Pratt, Christian Hanson, Samuel Curtis, Albert Littlefield; pastor, A. S. Staples; recording steward, Mrs. L. F. Johnson.

Institutes vs. King Phillips.

The Institutes played the King Phillips of Rockland May 9th and easily defeated them, although weakened by the absence of two men. The game was very close up to the sixth inning, when the Institutes by good hitting aided by errors made 8 runs.

Gearan, the change pitcher, played a masterly game, allowing but 8 scattering hits and not giving a single base on balls. The features of the game were the battery work of both teams, the 2d base play of Sullivan and the batting of Coleran. Attendance about 300. The score:

Earned runs, Institutes 3; 2-base hits,—Coleran 2, Quinn and Gearan; stolen bases—Sullivan 2, Caneen 1, Leben 3; first base on balls, by Lynch 7; hit by pitched ball by Gearan 2, by Lynch 1; double plays, Coleran and Sullivan, Conners and Sullivan, Lynch, McCugh and Murphy; struck out by Lynch 10, by Gearan 6. Umpires, Lyons and Smith.

That was a great stop of Sullivan's in the 7th.

The Institutes lost a hit in the 2d by having it called foul. The ball went directly over first base.

Rymes made a good impression although it was his first game this season.

McCarty showed lack of practice on third base.

Watch the pitcher a little closer Mr. Umpire.

The outfielders of the Institutes showed great team work in backing up the bases.

Pitchers Bagley and Corridan are laid up with sprained ankles.

The club play the strong West Hingham nine tomorrow. Game called at 3.30 p. m.

The sub-committee on plans, it is understood, have a plan nearly ready to present to the whole committee. It is probable that several plans will be considered before a final decision.

Odd Fellows Association.

Crescent Lodge Hall Association held its annual meeting last Saturday evening and elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, Hiram E. Raymond; vice-president, Frank D. Thayer; secretary and treasurer, Joseph A. Cushing; directors, Herbert F. Bates, Frank D. Thayer, Winslow M. Tirrell, Z. L. Bicknell, John F. Cushing, Joseph A. Cushing, James A. Roarty; supt. of building, H. F. Bates.

Wish we had it Here.

One of the busiest places in the country is the works of the J. P. Lovell Arms Co., at Worcester. They begin this week running night and day gangs, the works stopping only at 12 at noon and 12 at night, when an hour is taken for dinner by the gang then in charge. Nearly five hundred hands are thus employed.

Elected to Office.

The First Nationalist Club of Boston elected officers on Wednesday evening. Among the list we see the name of Thomas A. Watson who is elected on the Advisory Committee and also chosen one of the Delegates to the Cincinnati Convention next week.

Memorial Day in the Schools.

Memorial Day which is becoming more and more observed by all classes of people as the years go by, will be especially observed in all the schools in town this year. Friday afternoon of May 29 has been set apart for this occasion and appropriate exercises will be given.

Obituary.

On Tuesday evening at 10 o'clock, Augustus M. Bicknell expired at his residence on Green street. He had been complaining for some time, and last week's Gazette reported he was threatened with pneumonia. This week we carry the yet sadder news that he is dead. A son is made an orphan, and a wife a widow, and a brother and three sisters are made to mourn and weep for one they loved and cherished, and whom friends and fellow men respected and esteemed.

Though death is sure and certain, and by it all mortal toil and suffering is ended, we can but weep, and sorrow arises within us when one whom we loved and revered is taken from the hearts of those whom he loved and lived for.

Augustus M. Bicknell was the second son of Harrison and Jane L. Bicknell, and a member of a family of three girls and two boys. He was born Aug. 18, 1848, in the house in which he died. At the time of his death he was 42 yrs. 8 mos. 24 days old. He was a true and upright man, sedate and reserved, yet frank in his manners and action, ever ready to aid whosoever he could, and lend a hand to the needy. His sickness was only of a week's duration, and when his friends had the greatest hopes for his recovery, death's cruel and merciless hand clutched its victim, and all earthly toil and suffering ended, and sorrow and pity was the lot of those whom he left on earth.

Mr. Bicknell was a member of Crescent Lodge, Wompatuck Encampment, I. O. O. F., in which he took a great interest, and had filled various offices. For years he was a member of the fire department, and at the time of his death he was a member of E. S. Beals Hook and Ladder Co. His mother died January last after a long and lingering sickness.

The following are his sisters and brother: Miss Emily Bicknell, Charlestown; Mrs. Spear, Mrs. G. H. Newton and Maj. F. A. Bicknell, of North Weymouth.

Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2, at his late residence on Green street, Rev. W. D. Leland officiating. The interment was at the Village Cemetery.

May Dance.

Last Friday evening the young people of the First Universalist society gave their annual May dance and as usual it was a great success.

The grand march was enjoyed by forty-six couples, and many more took part in the after numbers of the order.

Ice cream and cake were sold and in spite of the heated hall, the evening was one of great pleasure to all those present. A feature of the occasion was the great number of very young lads and lassies, who of course, in their youthful enthusiasm, danced faster and harder than their elders and had a "splendid time."

—See Ad. of Real Estate to be sold on Pond street, Saturday, May 23.

—SPECIAL OFFER. Every farmer should read the American Dairyman, the oldest dairy paper in the world. It treats on feeding, breeding and care of stock, care of milk, manufacture of butter and cheese. How, when and where to market farm products. Its market reports are absolutely correct. Published every Thursday. Subscription price $1.50 per year. Will be mailed to any address in the United States or Canada from now to Jan. 1, 1892, for 75 cents. Address: J. E. Clark, publisher, 5 and 7 Murray St., New York.

—THE HOME, a household magazine devoted to the interests of every family, comes to us this month filled with good things. Besides a number of interesting stories, its fashion review is particularly sensible in advocating the short skirts for ladies street dresses, instead of the demi-train, which is the latest caprice of fashion. This department supplies patterns of the various styles given.

Under the heading of Our Boys and Girls are some bright stories, and an attractive Puzzle Corner. The Work Basket contains directions for fancy work that do not seem too extravagant for moderately filled purses, with "Practical suggestions for decorative work in oils."

But a very attractive and novel idea is the department headed, Sunshine for Shut-ins. As its name indicates it is devoted to the interest of invalids who are shut in from the activity and beauty of the world without, and are so dependent on others for a little brightness and joy.

It is a medium of communication between invalids from different parts of the country and contains some interesting as well as pathetic reading.

The editor of The Home with the co-operation of the editor of this department, has formed a small library for circulation among these unfortunates, many of whom are at a distance from towns with their public libraries. It must be a source of good to those who can use it.

There are other departments containing much bright and interesting matter, while its short editorials are full of good points. The Home offers special premiums to clubs and fine inducements to agents. Published monthly by People's Publishing Co., 141 a Milk St., Boston, Mass. 50 cents per year.

—TO FURNISH THE HOUSE. We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Standard Furniture Co., 23 Washington and 87 Friend streets, which will be found in another column. Although this concern is comparatively new, the members of the firm have a long experience in the trade, and won for themselves a good reputation for honest dealing and polite attention to their customers. Mr. John Rossborough was several years with A. McArthur & Co.; Joseph H. Symonds was identified several years with A. McArthur & Co., and the Home Furniture Co.; Henry P. Worthley was a member of the old firm of Rossborough, Symonds & Worthley, the other members have had a long experience in the wholesale trade. We feel justified in recommending any of our readers in want of furniture, carpets, etc., to give them a call before buying elsewhere. With their long experience and large capital we think they can give greater bargains than can be found anywhere in New England.

—Henri De Besse calls attention in ad. elsewhere, to his lessons in violin, piano and voice culture, to be given in Lincoln hall. Read.

—In 1880, and later, "Brick" Pomeroy was laughed at for projecting a five mile tunnel in Colorado, to get into the very bowels of the great mineral deposits in that state, sixty miles west from Denver; but now, after driving more than one mile of tunneling through solid granite and reaching veins from which gold, silver and lead ore is being brought by the car load for the enrichment of those who had the courage and cash to invest, there is not so much haw-hawing as there was. The large pamphlet sent to those who ask, addressing M. M. Pomeroy, president, Pulitzer Building, New York City, is very interesting reading, telling as it does what pluck has and is doing for public and private benefit.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. S. B. Poole and family extend sincere thanks to all who in any way assisted them in their bereavement, especially to the G. A. R., for their efficient aid; to the singers, and to the Rev. E. E. Philips for his kindly words of condolence. They will ever be gratefully remembered.
Lovell's Corner, May 7, 1891.

CARD OF THANKS.

We take this occasion to express our heartfelt thanks and gratitude to all who have been so kind in our late bereavement; to our friends and neighbors who have done all that sympathetic hearts and willing hands could do; to our beloved pastor for his words of sympathy so much needed; to the choir and Sunday-school and also the order of which the deceased was a member, for their beautiful floral offerings; to the shopmates for their most appropriate bank of roses, and to those who kindly offered the use of the church for the funeral services, such acts will help us to bear our sorrow and will ever be gratefully remembered.
MARY F. PRATT, WALTER F. PRATT.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to return our heartfelt thanks to all our neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted in our hour of need; to the Rev. W. D. Leland for the words of comfort, and to the singers for their attendance at the funeral of a beloved mother.
MR. and MRS. GEORGE SAMPSON.

CARD OF THANKS.

The official board of the M. E. Church at East Braintree, at the Quarterly Conference held Wednesday evening, May 13, voted a letter of thanks be extended to the citizens of Braintree and Weymouth, and all neighboring towns, for their generosity and kind feelings which they have manifested in the behalf of this society. The Recording Steward was authorized to publish the same in the Weymouth Gazette and Braintree Observer.
MRS. L. F. JOHNSON, Recording Steward.

Lovell's Corner Happenings.

—At the Porter M. E. church, Friday evening, the Lovell's Corner Temperance Union held its regular monthly meeting. After the usual preliminary exercises and the transaction of routine business, the entertainment of the evening was furnished by president George B. Rogers, assisted by a stereopticon. He delivered a talk on noted places in this country, especially in the Mississippi valley in and about New Orleans. He described at length the "jetties," spoke of the public buildings of the city, notably of the Corn Exchange and the Picwick Club house, enlarged on the cemeteries and churches, and showed how sugar, rice, and cotton are cultivated. A large audience was present.

—The officers for the ensuing year of the Ladies Social Circle are: Mrs. Chas. Lovell president, Mrs. Levi Hunt vice-president and Mrs. Frank Rea secretary and treasurer.

—Francis Hunt and family have moved into their newly purchased home on Pleasant street.

—The choir of the Porter M. E. church will give an entertainment at Holbrook next Wednenday evening. The Misses Taylor will assist.

My Head was Fairly Rotten,

And how much I suffered it is hard to describe. That loathsome disease, catarrh, caused the above, and the doctors said they could not relieve me. I paid hundreds of dollars, for which I received no benefit. I got more good from two bottles of Sulphur Bitters than from all the money I paid to doctors. I shall continue the Sulphur Bitters, as I have great faith that they will cure me.—S. M. Day, 41 Hanover Street, Boston.

Weymouth and East Braintree Locals.

—Dust caused the glass of the lantern on the fountain to look like ground glass, and the light struggling through of an evening threw very dim and ethereal shadows in the pathway of the dusty pedtrians, before the late rain.

—The Executive Committee of the Weymouth Improvement Association will meet at Arcanum Hall, Monday, May 18, 1891.

—Rt. Hon. John Foster Gray has received invitations to speak at West Medway and Milford on Memorial Day.

—Patrick Moriarty received a bad injury to his eye while chopping wood. He is being attended by doctors at the Eye and Ear Infirmary, Boston.

—Wm. Cary of Kennebec, Me., is in town visiting friends.

—John R. Walsh is ill with pneumonia.

—The Weymouth Gun Club has had seven tons of hay put on its grounds to save birds not broken by shot.

—Three young men of this place visited Nantasket Sunday and getting filled up with strong water were left and had to walk home.

—John Canifield of New York who has been here on a visit to his parents returned home Monday.

—Henry Dugan, brakeman on the O. C. freight train, is dangerously ill with rheumatic fever.

—Patrick Caulfield is ill with spinal trouble.

—The new Methodist church which presents such a handsome appearance was painted by W. T. Burrell.

—The yacht "Posy" which has been thoroughly overhauled at Quincy Point, is to be launched this week.

—Mrs. Elliot Pierce returned from a visit to Brooklyn N. Y. this week.

—Geo. Ratcliffe, night operator at the South Braintree station is laid up with the grippe.

—Wm. Hall is ill with the grippe.

—Miss Lucy M. Poole has removed to Taunton, Mass.

—Geo. R. Davis received a pension this week for faithful service rendered the government during the late war.

—The School Committee made the annual inspection of the school houses this week.

—Mrs. Owen Connor is visiting friends at Lawrence for a few weeks.

—William Langford of Lynn was visiting friends in town this week.

—Joseph I. Bates, Jr., started yesterday for Port Antonio, Jamaica, where he will take charge as manager of the Palm Hotel.

—Governor Hose Co. No. 3 will hold their annual supper next Wednesday evening. Harvey Blunt caterer.

—Miss Alice Currier of Roxbury has been visiting Miss Lillie La Duc.

—Mr. Owen Connor, who has been ill all winter is able to be out again.

—The W. C. T. U. will meet at the vestry of the Baptist church, Monday, at 3.45 p. m.

—The Ladies' Cemetery Improvement Association will meet with Mrs. Wendell Phillips, Wednesday, May 20, at 2.30 p. m.

—A lodge of Odd Fellows is to be organized here. The charter list is now open.

—Miss Nettie Binney entertained a party of about twenty friends from the Boston Missionary School, Wednesday.

—Mrs. Willaim Richmond is ill with heart trouble.

—The newly formed District Council of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators of American Union No. 120, will meet in the council this evening.

Weymouth Centre.

—G. M. Pratt has established an office in the building of Alpheus Bates' estate, corner of Middle and Broad streets.

—About 1 o'clock on Tuesday morning, the house belonging to the Donovan estate on Middle street, was discovered to be on fire, and to such an extent had the flames advanced, that the building was entirely consumed before much assistance could be rendered. The loss is estimated to be about $800; insured for $1,300. Origin of the fire a matter of doubt, as the premises were vacated the day before. The fire demonstrated the need of a light hose carriage and a few hundred feet of hose in the vicinity of Shaw's Corner.

—Mrs. Frank Mullen with Masters John and Fred will sail in a few days for Ireland to visit friends.

—Patrick Butler and his sister Mrs. Powers will make a trip to Ireland in a few weeks.

North Weymouth Depot Items.

—The annual meeting of the Old North Church, was held Monday evening, in the chapel, Mr. Palmer acting as chairman. The following officers were elected: Deacon for three years, Frank A. Richards; church committee, Miss M. M. Bates, Edmund Humphrey, William Humphrey; treasurer, Edmund Humphrey; clerk, William Humphrey; auditor, Emerson L. Hunt. The objects of the usual four collections are: American Board of Missions, Home Missionary Society, American Missionary Association. During the year, five members of the church have died, and four new ones admitted. A vote of thanks was given to those who served the church in an official capacity during the year.

—Miss Annie Thompson arrived home from Germany, Friday. She has visited Paris and other noted cities, but has spent most of her time in Strasburg, studying with her brother.

—Mr. Palmer started for Boxford, Mass., Thursday, on his vacation. He will be gone until September, and various ministers will supply the pulpit during his absence. Rev. Mr. Blanchard of this place will take charge of the Thursday evening meetings, and will attend to all pastoral duties.

—We are sorry to record another death in this village. Mr. John Humphrey passed away last Monday at about noon. His funeral took place Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, after which his body was taken to Mount Auburn Cemetery.

—Tickets are now on sale for the lecture "A Dream of To-morrow," by Mrs. Mary Livermore, May 22.

Pond Plain Notes.

—The fair held last Friday evening for the benefit of the Samuel Blanchard cemetery was very successful. An excellent programme was presented, consisting of cornet and violin solos by ladies from Rockland; a song by Johnnie Vining, with Miss Lottie E. Blanchard as accompanist, also readings by Miss Lulu Smith and Mr. H. H. Joy. A fine assortment of fancy and useful articles was for sale, as well as ice-cream and cake. About $60 was netted.

—Although South Weymouth people think that the Sabbath should be observed as a day of rest and quiet, it seems that some people from Brockton do not. Last Sunday a large party spent the day at Shaw's stand on the shore of Weymouth Great Pond. Although fresh water was close at hand they did not make much use of it.

South Weymouth Pickings.

—At the vestry of the Universalist church last week Thursday evening there was an "observation party." On a table was spread out a collection of articles of every imaginable shape and name. All persons had an opportunity to observe them for a limited time, and then to write from memory the names of as many as they could in a limited time. The first prize for men was won by Wm. H. Sargent, the "booby" prize by L. A. Blanchard. The first prize for women was won by Miss Rena F. Blanchard, and the "booby" prize by Mrs. Russell Thomas. This entertainment was preceded by a supper and was followed by music by Mrs. Clara Holbrook and Miss Louie Holbrook, and a whistling duet by Mrs. Leonard Curtis and Mrs. G. B. Bailey.

—William Burrell, the owner of the Music Hall property, is to increase his income from that source by finishing up a tenement of four or more rooms in the rear of the store of Miss C. C. Stickney.

—Yesterday Rev. W. H. Bolster of the Union church was called to his former parsh in Everett to assist in the ordination of Rev. E. P. Holton who goes to India as a missionary, and in the installation of Rev. E. T. Pitts, formerly of the Union church Weymouth, as pastor of the Everett church. Rev. Mr. Bolster delivered the ordaining prayer in the afternoon, and the charge to the people in the evening, besides participating in the council in the morning.

—"Competition is the life of trade" even if it be the "death of profits." Since two firms have been competing for the ice trade in this village the price has fallen to sixteen cents a hundred as against sixty cents a hundred last season.

—At the regular monthly meeting of the Co-operative bank Saturday evening $2000 was sold at a good rate of premium.

—Louis A. Cook has purchased another piece of real estate. The Alonzo Vining place on Union street opposite Reed avenue came into the hands of our local real estate magnate at a bargain to settle an estate.

—Before the auction sale of those lots, upon whose probable value so many are making estimates, Union street will be extended into the field at the "turn," water pipes laid, and electric lights erected The sale will take place in about three or four weeks.

—A. E. Vining has sold for the heirs of Sarah J. Torrey, the Chandler block on Main and Pond streets to George L. Wentworth, Esq., also the John W. Thomas place on Union street to Louis A. Cook, Esq. The real estate broker remarks that one has but to listen to his suggestions to become affluent.

—Last Sunday morning, Rev. Daniel Evans, pastor-elect of the East Weymouth Congregational church, preached in the Union church. His discourse was on "Man's Indebtedness." "Man is indebted," he said, "first, to the past for the social, civil, and religious institutions which have come down to him at the price of thought, toil and blood. Second, to the present, for his surroundings which have been so well adjusted to his wants. Third, to the race of which he is a member, not as a grain of sand, but as a correlated organ. The theory of individualism pushed to an extreme as regards man results in selfishness; as applied to God separates him from man and represents him as walking through a grave-yard and arbitrarily calling to life certain ones to the exclusion of others. This is the predestination or election. Were this so He would not be our Father in Heaven. Our relation to Him rather is that of a child to his earthly father. Our indebtedness to the race is the basis of all foreign missionary operations. Science believes in the survival of the fittest. Christianity believes in making all fit. Man can pay his indebtedness by preserving the institutions which have been handed down to him from the past, by adjusting himself to his present environment, by securing the good of his fellow-men especially by promoting harmony between employers and employees." Rev. Mr. Evans is an eloquent pulpit orator, in rapidity of delivery reminding his auditors of Phillips Brooks or of Joseph Cook. He is about to graduate from Andover Theological Seminary, and will be ordained and installed at the East Weymouth church, May 26.

—Otis Cushing, the popular proprietor of Cushing's South Weymouth and Boston Express, has recently had his picture taken in one of his teams at the railroad station by our local photographer. Last week Rev. W. H. Bolster received a package marked "Express paid," and found on opening it a framed picture of his friend Cushing and team.

—The anniversary of the Second Church Sunday-school was celebrated Sunday evening with appropriate exercises. The congregation of the Union church was present as invited guests.

—The firm of Clark and Foster is to be dissolved by mutual consent May 31.

—At the regular fortnightly meeting of the Wednesday Night Club the subject of the international complications which have arisen between the United States and Italy and Chili was discussed by George L Wentworth, George B. Rogers, Henry B. Reed, Edgar R. Downs and John G. Hutchins. Alfred O. Crawford was chosen treasurer vice Leonard B. Joy who is now acting as president.

—The law against bicyclists riding on the sidewalk still is in force although it has of late fallen into "innocuous d'esuetude." Complaint has been made by some who have been startled by the silent gliding vehicle "which steals upon them ere they are aware," although no accident has yet occurred.

—The Active Base Ball Club has erected in Highland Cemetery, a stone to the memory of their late associate, William H. Reed. The stone is of granite, and bears the monogram W. H. R. It cost $50.

—A meeting of the teachers of Wards 4 and 5 was held at the South High school building, Wednesday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. Superintendent Norcross presented a schedule of questions to be filled out by teachers, giving various statistics about the work and organization of the schools for the year now nearing its end.

—While the Improvement Association is agitating the question of crossings for the benefit of those who travel on foot, the crossing on Union street provided by Josiah Reed, primarily, of course, for his own convenience, but which has been much used by the public generally, has been buried beneath loads of gravel. It is understood that complaint was made by those who drive across it that it was not up to grade. It seems as if some grading down might have preserved this crossing for the benefit of foot passengers, instead of grading up for the benefit of passengers who ride.

—Another illustration of the decadence of business in South Weymouth. Butler's barber shop is closed. The proprietor has turned his attention to market gardening and poultry-raising.

—Mr. H. O. Maxham of Tufts college will preach at the Universalist church next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock, and possibly also in the evening.

—At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Improvement Association, the president was instructed to call a public meeting of the citizens of South Weymouth to consider the question of electric communication with neighboring villages by the proposed street-railways. This meeting will be held in Engine Hall, Ward 5, next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. An effort will be made to have present representatives of the companies interested, and also members of the board of selectmen. This matter of an electric road is one of vital importance to the welfare of the village. Shall we keep up with the progress of the times, which has demanded and obtained electric lights and water-works, and now demands an electric road or roads, or we shall drift back ward by doing nothing? "To-day we fashion destiny." Let every citizen who possibly can attend this meeting and, at least, give the encouragement of his presence.

—The annual meeting of the Universalist society was held Tuesday evening, May 12. Wm. H. Sargent was chosen moderator. John Blanchard, who had served 16 consecutive years as clerk and was not absent or tardy in all that time, declined serving longer. Lawrence A. Blanchard was chosen clerk; Mrs. A. Fenton Bullock was chosen treasurer; Messrs. F. F. Bullock, Wm. H. Sargent and Gordon Willis were chosen as prudential committee. On motion of A. F. Bullock a vote of thanks was tendered the retiring clerk.

North Weymouth Gleanings.

—Mr. Augustus Bicknell died Tuesday night. The final cause of his death was heart failure.

—John E. Stoddard is having the O. P. Fisher system of hot water and warm air combination placed in his residence on Bridge street.

—Edward B. Newton, a brother of our highly esteemed citizen J. L. Newton, when but 19 years of age went to Boston to look for a situation where he could earn an honest dollar. After trying until about to give up in despair, he succeeded in securing a situation in Quincy market with the well-known firm of Shattuck & Jones, the largest fish dealers of Boston. He very soon won the respect and confidence of his employers. For three years he drove their order wagon receiving orders and delivering fish. Being a shrewd, enterprising business man, he was given the full business of buying all their fish, having to be on the wharfs as early as two and three o'clock in the morning. He followed that branch of their business for several years, then he was given a situation in the market as head salesman. By his honesty and strict integrity and gentlemanly bearing, as well as close attention to business, he was, after the death of Mr. Jones, made a member of the firm and has had the principle charge of the business since. The other partners having been in the business long, have laid by enough to carry them through the remainder of life's journey, and wishing to retire from business, this North Weymouth boy who enlisted with Messrs. Shattuck & Jones twenty-one years ago has bought out his partners this week having ample means of his own to pay for the whole. Mr. Newton resides in Winthrop and is one of the leading citizens of that town. He has been chairman of the board of selectmen for several years besides holding many other responsible offices.

—E. Frank Beals and wife arrived here Wednesday from Milwaukee. They intend to remain here with their relatives and friends some three weeks before they return to their western home.

—The Ladies' Cemetery Circle will meet Tuesday evening May 19 with Mrs. Josiah H. Pratt.

—Manuel Page is shortly to take a trip to the western islands where he is called to settle his uncle's estate.

—Mrs. Thomas E. Kinder is visiting friends in Middleboro.

—Seth A. Pratt arrived home from Zanzibar, Friday last, after a voyage of 77 days. We hope to give our readers a few details next week.

—Frank A. Newell is having his residence painted.

—Geo. Ruggles is on the sick list.

—A man of about sixty years, born and brought up in Old Spain went to dig clams at high water.

—Mr. Cherrington is having the bowlders about his new house removed by Michael Delorey.

—Benj. E. Corlew will open the Bay Side on or about June 1.

—Boston parties have purchased the land of Francis Cushing on Norton street.

—Fish and snake stories reign supreme as a rule but here are a few egg facts. A gentleman, the owner of a few feathered bipeds, was recently donated by his good "biddies," six eggs which he thought were rather large. Being in his eyes valuable gems he used troy weight to balance them and they weight just one pound, making two ounces for the average egg, or 960 grains. Shortly after an egg of diminutive dimensions was laid by a respectable biddy, which by weight was only 63 grains; in comparison with the other the ratio is one to fifteen. Quite a variety in seven eggs.

Braintree.

—The Thayer Academy nine beat the Harvard Medical School team 9 to 4 on French's common Wednesday afternoon.

—Mrs. Lombard returned from a trip to New York Saturday.

—George Ratcliff is on the sick list.

—A very pleasant sociable and supper was given in the chapel of the First Parish Wednesday evening. Under the management of Mrs. Edw. Jones, Mrs. Aseph Arnold and Mrs. Martin Hollis a very appetizing supper was served from 6 to 8 o'clock, after which followed a social time where the young people were largely represented.

—N. R. Proctor has started on the cellar of his new residence about to be built on Maple street.

—At the town meeting Friday evening it was voted to dispense with further services of a counsel.

—Mrs. A. A. Ellsworth and her son George returned on Wednesday from Chicago. Mr. Ellsworth is looking very well after his severe illness, and does not seem to have been especially fatigued by the long journey.

George Howes returned from Savannah this week and showed some fine specimens of magnolia blossoms.

—Among the residences of Braintree which have received a new coat of paint this spring are those of Hon. Samuel Thorndyke, Aubrey Hilliard, and Mr. Davenport.

—The Junior Tennis Club expect a very pleasant and interesting afternoon in "doubles" and "singles" on their grounds Saturday. Some of the male members have a great deal of enterprise and push and a very brilliant season is expected.

—No public benefactor has as yet left Braintree a drinking-fountain, but a finely equipped soda fountain is appreciated. During the past spell of warm weather the one here was surrounded with a merry crowd of young people seeking to quench their thirst.

—Wanted.—A South Braintree correspondent for the Gazette to furnish local items. Write to office.

—Mr. Harold Stevens received this week a handsome canoe. The waters of Monatiquot at present will serve for practice and next summer, when he has become efficient in the management of the canoe, he anticipates a pleasant vacation in exploring the Nashua river in New Hampshire.

—Master Ernest, son of Mr. Allen Gage, fell from a stone-loaded wagon, Thursday. Although one of the wheels passed over him no bones were broken. Thursday evening his condition was not very favorable but it is hoped that no serious injury has been sustained.

—The street department has been at work on the low ground in the yard of the Union school-house and where, during wet weather, water has been accustomed to stand, have filled in gravel and put down tile drain. This accomplishment is greatly appreciated by those who have occasion to walk by that place. The West street improvement is also a spoke in the right place for formerly the rolling stones on the hill made a very insecure foothold for horses.

—Mrs. Geo. H. Lane is visiting her son and family at Brunswick, Me.

—Mr. N. E. Hollis has a fine new Goddard buggy.

—A handsome boy baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Belcher, Sunday.

East Weymouth Briefs.

—James L. Bates No. 36 S. of V., will perform escort duty for Reynolds Post No. 58, G. A. R., Memorial Day. The Camp, which now numbers 100 members, will muster in several recruits tonight.

—The Methodist Sunday-school has elected these officers: Superintendent, William H. Pratt; assistant superintendents, Myron P. Ford and Mrs. Myra A. Raymond; secretary, L. Winthrop Bates; treasurer, Joseph A. Cushing; librarian, H. H. Sylvester.

—Peter W. French and family have occupied their summer home.

—The Pound party given by the Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters was very successful. An excellent programme was presented, consisting of a piano solo by Mrs. Charles Merchant; reading, Miss Mabel Keene; solos by Miss Barber of Cambridge; readings by Miss Clark of the Boston School of Oratory; duet by Misses Berta and Ella Raymond, and lively hammer and needle contests. The hammer contest proved that some ladies can drive nails straight and hit them on the head every time. Mrs. T. H. Emerson received the first prize. In the needle contest the first prize was awarded to Asa Pratt.

—A large number of the members of Orphans Hope Lodge A. F. A. M. attended a meeting of the Mystic Shrine, last Friday.

DWELLING HOUSE, Stable,

And about Three Acres of Land, more or less, and the Furniture in said house at Auction, situated on

POND STREET, SOUTH WEYMOUTH MASS.,

and known as the Michael Gilligan Estate, will be sold at PUBLIC AUCTION on

at 1 o'clock P. M. One Large Dwelling House and Stable, also one small building, together with about three acres of land, situated on Pond Street, South Weymouth, near the depot. It has a frontage on Pond street of 175 feet, and runs back to the railroad track, making the back land very valuable for business purposes. The Dwelling House has eleven apartments, very conveniently arranged for two families. There is also a never-failing well of water upon the premises. The buildings are in thorough repair, and about one minute's walk from railroad depot. Immediately after the sale of the house and lands, a part of the household furniture will be disposed of to the highest bidder. Also, five Crimping Machines, all in good order, and about forty dozen Boot and Shoe forms, a number of them are new and all are in good order. Also, Benches and a quantity of Tacks. After which will be sold one Tip Cart and one Express Wagon, and many other articles too numerous to mention.

FRIDAY, MAY 15 1891.

Florida has long been known as the "land of flowers" and the home of consumptives. And now it is stated that it is also a land of sugar. It is claimed that sugar cane can be cultivated there better and cheaper than in Louisana or Cuba.

Last week fifteen thousand Italians landed upon our shores, and this is about the average. A town of Italians larger than Weymouth being thrust upon us every week in the year. Can the country stand it without danger to its institutions?

From the way Italian immigrants are pouring into our ports, it looks as though the swarthy macaroni eaters proposed getting even with this country through the ballot box. We hope they are not all members of the "Mafia," on vengeance bent. What about that proposed restricted immigration?

Men who talk "gosh" to reporters have no right to complain if the papers print what is said. It is the reporter's business to report, and to report correctly what he hears, and it is an exception to find a reporter who wilfully misrepresents and no reputable newspaper will, knowingly, give him employment.

It is impossible to get brandy for a sick man, but 40 rod whiskey flows freely to lubricate the dry mouths of the drunkards. Thus far, the effect of the no-license vote has been to take away the opportunities of the sick for obtaining liquor for medicine, while the back-kitchen bar-rooms flourish unchecked. Hardly consistent, is it?

The New Orleans grand jury said, in effect, that the lynching of the Italians was proper and justifiable, and it intimates that there are others—detective O'Malley and lawyer Adams—that ought to be similarly dealt with. We rejoice that we reside here instead of in New Orleans. We like a little excitement occasionally,—it tones up the system and wakes us up,—but we draw the line at lynching.

One of the most interesting events of the near future will be the re-entrance of Bismarck into public life, as a member of the German Reichstag. That he is the greatest European of the age, cannot be denied even by those who dislike him. The question is, will he cast his influence for peace of for war? Humanity causes us to hope for continued peace although a general war in Europe would add millions to America's wealth.

Mr. Blaine is holding his tongue very successfully regarding his candidacy for the presidency, but his friends and enemies are doing quite enough talking about him. To hear his friends you would think the millenium was only awaiting his election to appear upon earth, or at least that part of it under the stars and stripes; while to listen to the other side it would seem that the country's doom will be sealed with Blaine as president. This nation is too big and intelligent to be much affected for weal or woe by any one man's being in the president's chair.

What Do We Know About It.

"The treasury is bankrupt," frantically yell the Democrats. "We have millions of available cash in the Treasury," the Republicans retort. Between the two the common people are naturally somewhat bewildered and would like to know just what the financial status of the government is. Of course it is simply nonsense to talk about bankruptcy. Uncle Sam may be a little pressed for cash during the next fiscal year, but nobody doubts his financial soundness. But Secretary Foster might give the people a plain, common sense statement that can be understood without the aid of an expert accountant.

Possibility of a Strong Third Party.

A conference of "reformers" is to be held at Cincinnati next week for the purpose of endeavoring to arrange lines of action for a new political party, and to arrange a systematic plan for the education of the industrial classes on reform issues.

The Farmer's Alliance head the movement and associated with them are the Nationalist clubs, the Knights of Labor, the Reform Press Association and many smaller bodies.

Although there is a strong probability that so many incongruous elements will be brought together that no forceful action can be taken by the convention, there is also a possibility that under the council of wise heads a new party may be formed that may be a power in our future politics.

The Significance of It.

Nearly all the current literature of the day is teeming with socialism. Every new book attempts to deal with and throw new light upon the subject. All authors recognize the strong set of the tide in this direction and are quick to cater to the absorbing interest of the people in the great heart stirring subject of the improvement of the material conditions under which the mass of humanity is laboring.

The hungering demand for this literature is enormous as is shown by the sales of hundreds of thousands of books containing only a germ or glimmer of a better future for the people.

What does this signify?

It means that a tremendous educational work is going on—That the people are opening their eyes to see the great possibilities which are theirs if they will only stretch forth their hands and grasp them!

That the near future is to see a freer and nobler race of men and women than the world has ever yet conceived of.

That these important and weighty matters are engaging the attention of of the world's best men and women, and that ways will be found to gradually improve the lot of the poor till the appalling stories of hardship and suffering now heard upon every hand will be a thing of the past and a relic of the nineteenth century "dark ages."

That the time is coming when the saying that "All men are born equal" shall have a real significance.

That the days of oppression, of the ill use of the great power of money, of trusts and of railroad corporations are surely numbered.

That it is not charity or benevolence that the people are being educated to demand, but justice.

"The mills of God grind slowly,
Yet they grind exceeding small."

Liquor for Medicine.

The most embarassing question of this town at present is that in regard to the necessary sale of liquor. Under no-license, the Selectmen have refused to grant the druggists any licenses to sell for medicinal purposes, and as a consequence no liquor can be obtained by the sick, even on a doctor's order.

We are informed that on Sunday last it was necessary to obtain some French brandy for a patient suffering with pneumonia, and, as the druggists would not supply it under the present status of affairs, a long delay was incurred by the necessity of telephoning to Boston for it.

Under the present laws, the express companies are liable for bringing liquor into a no license town. If they live up to the law, as of course they should, it is difficult to see how any liquors can be obtained, even in the severest cases of sickness, unless a special private messenger be sent to Boston for it.

There is something radically wrong in this state of affairs. Medicine should be freely, easily and quickly obtained when necessary, and when ordered for a patient by a physician, liquor becomes as much a medicine as quinine or any other drug.

If it is not thought best by the selectmen to grant the druggists the right to sell for medicine, then some other way might be devised whereby, under proper restrictions, liquor may be obtained when absolutely needed.

If the physicians would, themselves, undertake the task of supplying the liquor which they order it would be, perhaps, a happy solution of the difficulty.

But it seems as if the necessary means of restriction and of supervision might be arranged so that the druggists could be allowed to supply liquor upon an order from a regular physician.

We acknowledge that, perhaps, the record of the druggists in the past is against the supposition that they can be trusted to live up to the letter of the license law, and that there was ample cause in this record for the selectmen to refuse to grant them licenses. On the other hand the druggists cannot be blamed for refusing to incriminate themselves by selling, or for taking their liquors out of their stock when they would be liable to seizure if found there.

However considered it is a knotty problem to solve. But that our people will be willing to be compelled to depend upon Boston for this, at times, much needed and often-ordered-by-the-physician medicine, we do not believe.

The matter must be settled in some rational manner so that the sick may not be sacrificed to an intemperate attempt at temperance.

Weymouth in the Twelfth.

As we have before stated, by the census of 1890 Massachusetts is one of the few Eastern States which have made sufficient gain in population to be entitled to an additional Congressman, on the basis on which the Fifty-third and subsequent congresses will be made.

The work of making thirteen congressional districts where there were but twelve has been no light task. The Legislative Committee has been engaged in preparing a plan which was submitted to the Legislature yesterday. Unlike the former method, this time the numbers begin in the extreme western part of the state, so that but few, if any towns, cities or parts of cities will be in the district of the same number as before.

Yet the changes in associations are few; most localities will have the same political attachments as under the old arrangement.

Weymouth will be in the Twelfth, instead of the Second district, but will be associated with nearly the same towns. We shall, however, be separated from Quincy and Milton, as they with several of the Boston wards, make the 10th District.

The committee have very evenly balanced the districts as to population, the widest difference being 170,221 and 174,806.

The political status of the districts has been, it is thought, quite well maintained.

Should the report of the committee meet the approval of the legislature and become a law, the election of 1892 will be looked forward to with much interest.

Addition to the Monatiquot Yacht Club Fleet.

Vice Commodore E. F. Linton is having built for his use a cabin cruising launch, a naptha propelled craft for cruising up and down the coast. The new boat will be of the best pattern of steam launches and will cost $5,500. A boat of exactly the same build and dimensions made the voyage from New York to Florida rounding Cape Hatteras with ease.

It is 40 feet in length and 8 feet beam. The engines will be of ten-horse power. There will be a pilot room and a main saloon, besides the engine room and galley. The hull will be of cedar, oak ribs, painted white with name in brass letters on the stern. It will be sheathed with copper to the water line. The pilot room will be furnished in oak with leather covered cushions. A speaking tube will communicate with the engine room. The saloon will be finished in antique oak, with plush cushions. The galley will be provided with all possible conveniences to make a stay on the boat comfortable. There will be brass fittings throughout around the steering gear, etc.

This craft will make a handsome and imposing addition to the Monatiquot Yacht Club fleet the coming season.

Fifteenth Anniversary.

Division 9, A. O. H. of East Weymouth, will hold their fifteenth anniversary in Odd Fellows Opera House, this Friday evening. They will have speaking, singing and a dance. Supper will be furnished by Caterer Blunt of Boston. The State officers of the order will be present. President William Tobin will be master of ceremonies.

RAIN.

It rains, and all the sky is gray;
While I with heart so blithe and gay
Sit here and dream my time away.

Heart-sunshine throws on outward things
Its own glad life; with ruffled wings
The lark through rain soars up and sings.

And so it still must ever be;
The eyes, the eyes shall only see
Without what is within, for we
Are makers, everlastingly.

—C. W. Herbert, in Spectator.

Obituary.

A short obituary notice of Mr. E. F. Pratt was published by us the week of his death, but we are requested by his friends to print the following:

North Weymouth has recently been called to mourn the loss of one of its best citizens, Elisha Francis Pratt, who was born in Weymouth Nov. 11, 1833, and died April 27, 1891. Mr. Pratt was the son of Elisha and Mary Pratt, and was the eldest of a family of six children, one of whom only survives him. His mother, to whom his devotion was tender and unremitting, passed to the higher life but a few months ago. His venerable father still survives "in the serene evening of an unblemished life" waiting the call to "go higher."

Mr. Pratt was united in marriage on the 10th of May, 1857, with Mary Freeman Joseph, with whom he lived in most loving relations in the modest cottage on North street, which was his home—the home he loved—the entire period of his married life. Three children were born to Mr. Pratt; one only, a promising son, survives him.

Mr. Pratt was connected with the shoe business in one form or another from his youth. He was in the employ of the firm now known as J. H. & F. H. Torrey from the time the factory situated at the corner of North and Bridge streets was erected—about 30 years—and at the time of his death had been in the employ of the firm longer than any other man in the factory.

Mr. Pratt had been troubled with a kidney difficulty for several years, but it was not till within a few months that the disease assumed serious form. His sudden, unexpected death was a shock to the community as well as to his family. No man was more highly respected or more universally beloved. An enemy he had not nor could have. He bore universal love to humanity and did to all men in all things what he conscientiously believed to be right. He was specially interested in all the reforms of the day, temperance, justice, equal rights, and sought to the best of his ability to bring about the reign of "Peace on earth and good will to men." He was one of the rare few of whom the words of the world's greatest poet could be appropriately quoted:

"His life was gentle and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world This was a man."

Mr. Pratt's funeral took place on the afternoon of April 29. After a brief private service at the home the mortal form was borne to the Universalist church where he had regularly and devoutly worshipped. The service was conducted by Rev. B. F. Eaton, pastor of the church. A select quartette from the church choir rendered fitting music. The members of Crescent Lodge I. O. O. F. of East Weymouth, of which he was an honored member, were present in full force and conducted the special service of the order. His shopmates were present in a body together with the citizens generally, crowding the church to its utmost capacity.

At the close of the services the large company present took the "last look" at the face of one they had loved so well and then the mortal form was borne to its resting place in the family lot in the village cemetery.

Teachers' Meeting.

The teachers of Weymouth had the pleasure last Friday of listening to a most excellent talk on "Language" by Robert C. Metcalf of Boston. Mr. Metcalf spoke emphatically of the importance of teaching the child to think, first giving him something to think about; of the great advantage of the elementary science lessons as an aid to good language. He emphasized the importance of teaching the pupil to stand properly and to express himself in complete sentences. He said that much of the poor work done in arithmetic was due to the child's imperfect understanding of the language of the problem. He hoped the time would soon come when the reading books would be greater help in acquiring good language than they now are. Many of the books now in use contain only short selections or matter too difficult for the child to comprehend, so that reading becomes simply a calling of words. For written work he advised a free use of dictation exercises, a few minutes being devoted to the work every day; not a haphazard giving of sentences with no end in view, but a definite, systematic plan of work.

At the close of the lecture Mr. Metcalf spoke to the teachers of the higher grades on work especially adapted to these classes.

Norfolk Probate Court.

In the Norfolk Probate Court before Judge White at Quincy the following miscellaneous business was transacted:

Will approved: Of John Connell, Mary Connell of Weymouth executrix; bond, $1,500.

Administration granted: George W. White of Weymouth upon the estate of Elisha Alden; bond, $3,000.

Accounts allowed: First of Charles H. Bodge of Weymouth, estate of Ellis Bodge. Second, of Charles Q. Tirrell, guardian of George E. Tirrell; Henry Wardwell of Salem, appointed guardian of George E. Tirrell of Weymouth.

Prince H. Tirrell of Weymouth, appointed trustee under the will of Cyrus Tirrell; bond, $4,000.

The Active Base Ball Club.

The Active base ball club has reorganized with practically the same membership as last year. No managar has yet been chosen to succeed Oscar Madan who has served so efficiently in that capacity hitherto, but will be unable to devote the requisite time to the position this season. A subscription paper will be circulated before long to raise money for the necessary expenses of the coming season. Citizens should give liberal support to the club which has furnished and will still furnish good examples of the national game. Why not arrange a series of games with clubs from the other villages for the championship of Weymouth?

Y. P. S. C. E. Social and Lecture.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, connected with Union church, gave a social and entertainment in the lecture room of Union church, on Wednesday evening. Only a very few were present, but the programme was of unusual excellence for that class of entertainment. The programme was as follows: Trio, Misses Thayer, Gutterson and Allen; violin solo, James Hunt; solo, Miss Jennie Thayer; lecture, Mr. Borton; solo, Mr. G. H. Baker; trio, Misses Thayer, Gutterson and Allen.

The lecture or talk by Mr. Borton was very interesting and replete with mirth awakening anecdotes and descriptions of Mexican and Chinese customs. Those who were frightened away by the fear of a dry lecture, sadly missed it this time.

Director's Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the directors of the Weymouth and Hingham Street Railway Co., in Boston to-day.

A New Church at East Braintree of Methodist Faith.

The public has been kept informed of the doings of the Methodist Society of Weymouth and East Braintree through our columns for some time past, and will no doubt remember that about two years ago a piece of land was secured by them on Commercial street, East Braintree. Then the philanthropic and generous citizens of the village were invited to subscribe toward the sum necessary for the erection of a church. That these efforts to raise money have been successful is shown by the very pretty and charming little edifice now standing upon their lot of land.

The dedicatory exercises were held last Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the church was filled to its utmost capacity, some even failing to obtain admission.

The exercises, which were in charge of Presiding Elder S. O. Benton of Providence, opened with organ voluntary by Miss McDowell, followed by an anthem by a quartette consisting of Mrs. Owen, Miss Gutterson and Messrs. Wight and Blanchard.

Rev. A. S. Staples and Rev. J. F. Buckey read appropriate selections from the scriptures. Rev. Mr. Huckel made a fervent prayer, invoking the Divine blessing upon this Methodist people, and the quartette sang a response. Rev. S. O. Benton explained the reason of the erection of the church, that it was believed there was a field here for labor in the Methodist's peculiar way, and that it was started in no spirit of rivalry toward the other churches.

Rev. Dr. Charles Parkhurst, editor of Zion's Herald, delivered the sermon and made an eloquent appeal for cheerful Christian workers. He thought that it was wrong and displeasing to God to go about with a long face, gloomy and dispiriting. "What the world most needed," he said, "was an abundant crop of cheerful Christians." "A living faith was needed and not a dead one. There is too much of the latter now in all churches." He spoke very strongly and pressed the truth home with some very pathetic incidents and anecdotes that brought tears to the eyes of the audience.

Presiding Elder Benton stated that the cost of the church had been about $2,600, that $1,600 had been raised by the members and that, therefore, there remained a debt of $1,000. This he desired to see cleared up that day if possible and he invited subscriptions. First, he asked those who would pledge themselves to give $100 to raise their hands, and as an encouragement he offered $100 from the Methodist Mission Home Society.

The only other $100 subscription was made by Mr. Josephus Sampson. After some little wait for the encouragement of the hesitating, the amounts asked for were dropped to $50, and several of these were obtained. Then the amounts were lowered in succession to $25, $20, $15, $10, $5, $3, $2, $1, and many pledges were received for these various sums. As a final effort the boxes were passed for small sums. The grand total of the amount thus raised was $760.

The dedicatory ritual and the Doxology closed the exercises.

In the evening a sermon was delivered by Rev. S. O. Benton, presiding Elder of the district, and a collection was again taken resulting in about $40 more toward the debt, and members of the church then pledged themselves to raise the remaining $200, so that the debt is practically wiped out and the Society starts on its mission under the most favorable auspices.

The officers of the church are: Stewards, Messrs. Josephus Sampson, Wm. Nickson, Henry M. Storms, Christian Hanson, Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Mrs. A. E. Pratt, Mrs. Esther H. Abbott, Mrs. Lydia C. Allen, Miss Sarah C. Bennett, Miss L. M. Clark; trustees, Messrs. Henry M. Storms, Josephus Sampson, William Nickson, Alvin A. Pratt, Christian Hanson, Samuel Curtis, Albert Littlefield; pastor, A. S. Staples; recording steward, Mrs. L. F. Johnson.

Institutes vs. King Phillips.

The Institutes played the King Phillips of Rockland May 9th and easily defeated them, although weakened by the absence of two men. The game was very close up to the sixth inning, when the Institutes by good hitting aided by errors made 8 runs.

Gearan, the change pitcher, played a masterly game, allowing but 8 scattering hits and not giving a single base on balls. The features of the game were the battery work of both teams, the 2d base play of Sullivan and the batting of Coleran. Attendance about 300. The score:

Earned runs, Institutes 3; 2-base hits,—Coleran 2, Quinn and Gearan; stolen bases—Sullivan 2, Caneen 1, Leben 3; first base on balls, by Lynch 7; hit by pitched ball by Gearan 2, by Lynch 1; double plays, Coleran and Sullivan, Conners and Sullivan, Lynch, McCugh and Murphy; struck out by Lynch 10, by Gearan 6. Umpires, Lyons and Smith.

That was a great stop of Sullivan's in the 7th.

The Institutes lost a hit in the 2d by having it called foul. The ball went directly over first base.

Rymes made a good impression although it was his first game this season.

McCarty showed lack of practice on third base.

Watch the pitcher a little closer Mr. Umpire.

The outfielders of the Institutes showed great team work in backing up the bases.

Pitchers Bagley and Corridan are laid up with sprained ankles.

The club play the strong West Hingham nine tomorrow. Game called at 3.30 p. m.

Odd Fellows Association.

Crescent Lodge Hall Association held its annual meeting last Saturday evening and elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, Hiram E. Raymond; vice-president, Frank D. Thayer; secretary and treasurer, Joseph A. Cushing; directors, Herbert F. Bates, Frank D. Thayer, Winslow M. Tirrell, Z. L. Bicknell, John F. Cushing, Joseph A. Cushing, James A. Roarty; supt. of building, H. F. Bates.

Wish we had it Here.

One of the busiest places in the country is the works of the J. P. Lovell Arms Co., at Worcester. They begin this week running night and day gangs, the works stopping only at 12 at noon and 12 at night, when an hour is taken for dinner by the gang then in charge. Nearly five hundred hands are thus employed.

Elected to Office.

The First Nationalist Club of Boston elected officers on Wednesday evening. Among the list we see the name of Thomas A. Watson who is elected on the Advisory Committee and also chosen one of the Delegates to the Cincinnati Convention next week.

Memorial Day in the Schools.

Memorial Day which is becoming more and more observed by all classes of people as the years go by, will be especially observed in all the schools in town this year. Friday afternoon of May 29 has been set apart for this occasion and appropriate exercises will be given.

Obituary.

On Tuesday evening at 10 o'clock, Augustus M. Bicknell expired at his residence on Green street. He had been complaining for some time, and last week's Gazette reported he was threatened with pneumonia. This week we carry the yet sadder news that he is dead. A son is made an orphan, and a wife a widow, and a brother and three sisters are made to mourn and weep for one they loved and cherished, and whom friends and fellow men respected and esteemed.

Though death is sure and certain, and by it all mortal toil and suffering is ended, we can but weep, and sorrow arises within us when one whom we loved and revered is taken from the hearts of those whom he loved and lived for.

Augustus M. Bicknell was the second son of Harrison and Jane L. Bicknell, and a member of a family of three girls and two boys. He was born Aug. 18, 1848, in the house in which he died. At the time of his death he was 42 yrs. 8 mos. 24 days old. He was a true and upright man, sedate and reserved, yet frank in his manners and action, ever ready to aid whosoever he could, and lend a hand to the needy. His sickness was only of a week's duration, and when his friends had the greatest hopes for his recovery, death's cruel and merciless hand clutched its victim, and all earthly toil and suffering ended, and sorrow and pity was the lot of those whom he left on earth.

Mr. Bicknell was a member of Crescent Lodge, Wompatuck Encampment, I. O. O. F., in which he took a great interest, and had filled various offices. For years he was a member of the fire department, and at the time of his death he was a member of E. S. Beals Hook and Ladder Co. His mother died January last after a long and lingering sickness.

The following are his sisters and brothers; Miss Emily Bicknell, Charlestown; Mrs. Speer, Mrs. G. H. Newton and Maj. F. A. Bicknell, of North Weymouth.

Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2, at his late residence on Green street, Rev. W. D. Leland officiating. The interment was at the Village Cemetery.

May Dance.

Last Friday evening the young people of the First Universalist society gave their annual May dance and as usual it was a great success.

The grand march was enjoyed by forty-six couples, and many more took part in the after numbers of the order.

Ice cream and cake were sold and in spite of the heated hall, the evening was one of great pleasure to all those present. A feature of the occasion was the great number of very young lads and lassies, who of course, in their youthful enthusiasm, danced faster and harder than their elders and had a "splendid time."

—See Ad. of Real Estate to be sold on Pond street, Saturday, May 23.

—SPECIAL OFFER. Every farmer should read the American Dairyman, the oldest dairy paper in the world. It treats on feeding, breeding and care of stock, care of milk, manufacture of butter and cheese. How, when and where to market farm products. Its market reports are absolutely correct. Published every Thursday. Subscription price $1.50 per year. Will be mailed to any address in the United States or Canada from now to Jan. 1, 1892, for 75 cents. Address: J. E. Clark, publisher, 5 and 7 Murray St., New York.

—THE HOME, a household magazine devoted to the interests of every family, comes to us this month filled with good things. Besides a number of interesting stories, its fashion review is particularly sensible in advocating the short skirts for ladies street dresses, instead of the demi-train, which is the latest caprice of fashion. This department supplies patterns of the various styles given.

Under the heading of Our Boys and Girls are some bright stories, and an attractive Puzzle Corner. The Work Basket contains directions for fancy work that do not seem too extravagant for moderately filled purses, with "Practical suggestions for decorative work in oils."

But a very attractive and novel idea is the department headed, Sunshine for Shut-ins. As its name indicates it is devoted to the interest of invalids who are shut in from the activity and beauty of the world without, and are so dependent on others for a little brightness and joy.

It is a medium of communication between invalids from different parts of the country and contains some interesting as well as pathetic reading.

The editor of The Home with the co-operation of the editor of this department, has formed a small library for circulation among these unfortunates, many of whom are at a distance from towns with their public libraries. It must be a source of good to those who can use it.

There are other departments containing much bright and interesting matter, while its short editorials are full of good points. The Home offers special premiums to clubs, and fine inducements to agents. Published monthly by People's Publishing Co., 141 a Milk St., Boston, Mass. 50 cents per year.

—TO FURNISH THE HOUSE. We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Standard Furniture Co., 23 Washington and 87 Friend streets, which will be found in another column. Although this concern is comparatively new, the members of the firm have a long experience in the trade, and won for themselves a good reputation for honest dealing and polite attention to their customers. Mr. John Rossborough was several years with A. McArthur & Co.; Joseph H. Symonds was identified several years with A. McArthur & Co., and the Home Furniture Co.; Henry P. Worthley was a member of the old firm of Rossborough, Symonds & Worthley, the other members have had a long experience in the wholesale trade. We feel justified in recommending any of our readers in want of furniture, carpets, etc., to give them a call before buying elsewhere. With their long experience and large capital we think they can give greater bargains than can be found anywhere in New England.

—Henri De Besse calls attention in ad. elsewhere, to his lessons in violin, piano and voice culture, to be given in Lincoln hall. Read.

—In 1880, and later, "Brick" Pomeroy was laughed at for projecting a five mile tunnel in Colorado, to get into the very bowels of the great mineral deposits in that state, sixty miles west from Denver; but now, after driving more than one mile of tunneling through solid granite and reaching veins from which gold, silver and lead ore is being brought by the car load for the enrichment of those who had the courage and cash to invest, there is not so much haw-hawing as there was. The large pamphlet sent to those who ask, addressing M. M. Pomeroy, president, Pulitzer Building, New York City, is very interesting reading, telling as it does what pluck has and is doing for public and private benefit.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. S. B. Poole and family extend sincere thanks to all who in any way assisted them in their bereavement, especially to the G. A. R., for their efficient aid; to the singers, and to the Rev. E. E. Philiips for his kindly words of condolence. They will ever be gratefully remembered.

Lovell's Corner, May 7, 1891.

CARD OF THANKS.

We take this occasion to express our heartfelt thanks and gratitude to all who have been so kind in our late bereavement; to our friends and neighbors who have done all that sympathetic hearts and willing hands could do; to our beloved pastor for his words of sympathy so much needed; to the choir and Sunday-school and also the order of which the deceased was a member, for their beautiful floral offerings; to the shopmates for their most appropriate bank of roses, and to those who kindly offered the use of the church for the funeral services, such acts will help us to bear our sorrow and will ever be gratefully remembered.

MARY F. PRATT, WALTER F. PRATT.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to return our heartfeit thanks to all our neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted in our hour of need; to the Rev. W. D. Leland for the words of comfort, and to the singers for their attendance at the funeral of a beloved mother.

MR. and MRS. GEORGE SAMPSON.

CARD OF THANKS.

The official board of the M. E. Church at East Braintree, at the Quarterly Conference held Wednesday evening, May 13, voted a letter of thanks be extended to the citizens of Braintree and Weymouth, and all neighboring towns, for their generosity and kind feelings which they have manifested in the behalf of this society. The Recording Steward was authorized to publish the same in the Weymouth Gazette and Braintree Observer.

MRS. L. F. JOHNSON, Recording Steward.

Lovell's Corner Happenings.

—At the Porter M. E. church, Friday evening, the Lovell's Corner Temperance Union held its regular monthly meeting. After the usual preliminary exercises and the transaction of routine business, the entertainment of the evening was furnished by president George B. Rogers, assisted by a stereopticon. He delivered a talk on noted places in this country, especially in the Mississippi valley in and about New Orleans. He described at length the "jetties," spoke of the public buildings of the city, notably of the Corn Exchange and the Picwick Club house, enlarged on the cemeteries and churches, and showed how sugar, rice, and cotton are cultivated. A large audience was present.

—The officers for the ensuing year of the Ladies Social Circle are: Mrs. Chas. Lovell president, Mrs. Levi Hunt vice-president and Mrs. Frank Rea secretary and treasurer.

—Francis Hunt and family have moved into their newly purchased home on Pleasant street.

—The choir of the Porter M. E. church will give an entertainment at Holbrook next Wednenday evening. The Misses Taylor will assist.

My Head was Fairly Rotten,

And how much I suffered it is hard to describe. That loathsome disease, catarrh, caused the above, and the doctors said they could not relieve me. I paid hundreds of dollars, for which I received no benefit. I got more good from two bottles of Sulphur Bitters than from all the money I paid to doctors. I shall continue the Sulphur Bitters, as I have great faith that they will cure me.—S. M. Day, 41 Hanover Street, Boston.

Weymouth and East Braintree Locals.

—Dust caused the glass of the lantern on the fountain to look like ground glass, and the light struggling through of an evening threw very dim and ethereal shadows in the pathway of the dusty pedtrians, before the late rain.

Weymouth Centre.

—G. M. Pratt has established an office in the building of Alpheus Bates' estate, corner of Middle and Broad streets.

—About 1 o'clock on Tuesday morning, the house belonging to the Donovan estate on Middle street, was discovered to be on fire, and to such an extent had the flames advanced, that the building was entirely consumed before much assistance could be rendered. The loss is estimated to be about $800; insured for $1,300. Origin of the fire a matter of doubt, as the premises were vacated the day before. The fire demonstrated the need of a light hose carriage and a few hundred feet of hose in the vicinity of Shaw's Corner.

—Mrs. Frank Mullen with Masters John and Fred will sail in a few days for Ireland to visit friends.

—Patrick Butler and his sister Mrs. Powers will make a trip to Ireland in a few weeks.

North Weymouth Depot Items.

—The annual meeting of the Old North Church, was held Monday evening, in the chapel, Mr. Palmer acting as chairman. The following officers were elected: Deacon for three years, Frank A. Richards; church committee, Miss M. M. Bates, Edmund Humphrey, William Humphrey; treasurer, Edmund Humphrey; clerk, William Humphrey; auditor, Emerson L. Hunt. The objects of the usual four collections are: American Board of Missions, Home Missionary Society, American Missionary Association. During the year, five members of the church have died, and four new ones admitted. A vote of thanks was given to those who served the church in an official capacity during the year.

—Miss Annie Thompson arrived home from Germany, Friday. She has visited Paris and other noted cities, but has spent most of her time in Strasburg, studying with her brother.

—Mr. Palmer started for Boxford, Mass., Thursday, on his vacation. He will be gone until September, and various ministers will supply the pulpit during his absence. Rev. Mr. Blanchard of this place will take charge of the Thursday evening meetings, and will attend to all pastoral duties.

—We are sorry to record another death in this village. Mr. John Humphrey passed away last Monday at about noon. His funeral took place Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, after which his body was taken to Mount Auburn Cemetery.

—Tickets are now on sale for the lecture "A Dream of To-morrow," by Mrs. Mary Livermore, May 22.

Pond Plain Notes.

—The fair held last Friday evening for the benefit of the Samuel Blanchard cemetery was very successful. An excellent programme was presented, consisting of cornet and violin solos by ladies from Rockland; a song by Johnnie Vining, with Miss Lottie E. Blanchard as accompanist, also readings by Miss Lulu Smith and Mr. H. H. Joy. A fine assortment of fancy and useful articles was for sale, as well as ice-cream and cake. About $60 was netted.

—Although South Weymouth people think that the Sabbath should be observed as a day of rest and quiet, it seems that some people from Brockton do not. Last Sunday a large party spent the day at Shaw's stand on the shore of Weymouth Great Pond. Although fresh water was close at hand they did not make much use of it.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

South Weymouth Pickings.

—At the vestry of the Universalist church last week Thursday evening there was an "observation party." On a table was spread out a collection of articles of every imaginable shape and name. All persons had an opportunity to observe them for a limited time, and then to write from memory the names of as many as they could in a limited time. The first prize for men was won by Wm. H. Sargent, the "booby" prize by L. A. Blanchard. The first prize for women was won by Miss Rena F. Blanchard, and the "booby" prize by Mrs. Russell Thomas. This entertainment was preceded by a supper and was followed by music by Mrs. Clara Holbrook and Miss Louie Holbrook, and a whistling duet by Mrs. Leonard Curtis and Mrs. G. B. Bailey.

—William Burrell, the owner of the Music Hall property, is to increase his income from that source by finishing up a tenement of four or more rooms in the rear of the store of Miss C. C. Stickney.

—Yesterday Rev. W. H. Bolster of the Union church was called to his former parish in Everett to assist in the ordination of Rev. E. P. Holton who goes to India as a missionary, and in the installation of Rev. E. T. Pitts, formerly of the Union church Weymouth, as pastor of the Everett church. Rev. Mr. Bolster delivered the ordaining prayer in the afternoon, and the charge to the people in the evening, besides participating in the council in the morning.

—"Competition is the life of trade" even if it be the "death of profits." Since two firms have been competing for the ice trade in this village the price has fallen to sixteen cents a hundred as against sixty cents a hundred last season.

—At the regular monthly meeting of the Co-operative bank Saturday evening $2000 was sold at a good rate of premium.

—Louis A. Cook has purchased another piece of real estate. The Alonzo Vining place on Union street opposite Reed avenue came into the hands of our local real estate magnate at a bargain to settle an estate.

—Before the auction sale of those lots, upon whose probable value so many are making estimates, Union street will be extended into the field at the "turn," water pipes laid, and electric lights erected The sale will take place in about three or four weeks.

—A. E. Vining has sold for the heirs of Sarah J. Torrey, the Chandler block on Main and Pond streets to George L. Wentworth, Esq., also the John W. Thomas place on Union street to Louis A. Cook, Esq. The real estate broker remarks that one has but to listen to his suggestions to become affluent.

—Last Sunday morning, Rev. Daniel Evans, pastor-elect of the East Weymouth Congregational church, preached in the Union church. His discourse was on "Man's Indebtedness." "Man is indebted," he said, "first, to the past for the social, civil, and religious institutions which have come down to him at the price of thought, toil and blood. Second, to the present, for his surroundings which have been so well adjusted to his wants. Third, to the race of which he is a member, not as a grain of sand, but as a correlated organ. The theory of individualism pushed to an extreme as regards man results in selfishness; as applied to God separates him from man and represents him as walking through a grave-yard and arbitrarily calling to life certain ones to the exclusion of others. This is the predestination or election. Were this so He would not be our Father in Heaven. Our relation to Him rather is that of a child to his earthly father. Our indebtedness to the race is the basis of all foreign missionary operations. Science believes in the survival of the fittest. Christianity believes in making all fit. Man can pay his indebtedness by preserving the institutions which have been handed down to him from the past, by adjusting himself to his present environment, by securing the good of his fellow-men especially by promoting harmony between employers and employees." Rev. Mr. Evans is an eloquent pulpit orator, in rapidity of delivery reminding his auditors of Phillips Brooks or of Joseph Cook. He is about to graduate from Andover Theological Seminary, and will be ordained and installed at the East Weymouth church, May 26.

—Otis Cushing, the popular proprietor of Cushing's South Weymouth and Boston Express, has recently had his picture taken in one of his teams at the railroad station by our local photographer. Last week Rev. W. H. Bolster received a package marked "Express paid," and found on opening it a framed picture of his friend Cushing and team.

—The anniversary of the Second Church Sunday-school was celebrated Sunday evening with appropriate exercises. The congregation of the Union church was present as invited guests.

—The firm of Clark and Foster is to be dissolved by mutual consent May 31.

—At the regular fortnightly meeting of the Wednesday Night Club the subject of the international complications which have arisen between the United States and Italy and Chili was discussed by George L Wentworth, George B. Rogers, Henry B. Reed, Edgar R. Downs and John G. Hutchins. Alfred O. Crawford was chosen treasurer vice Leonard B. Joy who is now acting as president.

—The law against bicyclists riding on the sidewalk still is in force although it has of late fallen into "innocuous d'esuetude." Complaint has been made by some who have been startled by the silent gliding vehicle "which steals upon them ere they are aware," although no accident has yet occurred.

—The Active Base Ball Club has erected in Highland Cemetery, a stone to the memory of their late associate, William H. Reed. The stone is of granite, and bears the monogram W. H. R. It cost $50.

—A meeting of the teachers of Wards 4 and 5 was held at the South High school building, Wednesday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. Superintendent Norcross presented a schedule of questions to be filled out by teachers, giving various statistics about the work and organization of the schools for the year now nearing its end.

—While the Improvement Association is agitating the question of crossings for the benefit of those who travel on foot, the crossing on Union street provided by Josiah Reed, primarily, of course, for his own convenience, but which has been much used by the public generally, has been buried beneath loads of gravel. It is understood that complaint was made by those who drive across it that it was not up to grade. It seems as if some grading down might have preserved this crossing for the benefit of foot passengers, instead of grading up for the benefit of passengers who ride.

—Another illustration of the decadence of business in South Weymouth. Butler's barber shop is closed. The proprietor has turned his attention to market gardening and poultry-raising.

—Mr. H. O. Maxham of Tufts college will preach at the Universalist church next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock, and possibly also in the evening.

—At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Improvement Association, the president was instructed to call a public meeting of the citizens of South Weymouth to consider the question of electric communication with neighboring villages by the proposed street-railways. This meeting will be held in Engine Hall, Ward 5, next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. An effort will be made to have present representatives of the companies interested, and also members of the board of selectmen. This matter of an electric road is one of vital importance to the welfare of the village. Shall we keep up with the progress of the times, which has demanded and obtained electric lights and water-works, and now demands an electric road or roads, or we shall drift back ward by doing nothing? "To-day we fashion destiny." Let every citizen who possibly can attend this meeting and, at least, give the encouragement of his presence.

—The annual meeting of the Universalist society was held Tuesday evening, May 12. Wm. H. Sargent was chosen moderator. John Blanchard, who had served 16 consecutive years as clerk and was not absent or tardy in all that time, declined serving longer. Lawrence A. Blanchard was chosen clerk; Mrs. A. Fenton Bullock was chosen treasurer; Messrs. F. F. Bullock, Wm. H. Sargent and Gordon Willis were chosen as prudential committee. On motion of A. F. Bullock a vote of thanks was tendered the retiring clerk.

North Weymouth Gleanings.

—Mr. Augustus Bicknell died Tuesday night. The final cause of his death was heart failure.

—John E. Stoddard is having the O. P. Fisher system of hot water and warm air combination placed in his residence on Bridge street.

—Edward B. Newton, a brother of our highly esteemed citizen J. L. Newton, when but 19 years of age went to Boston to look for a situation where he could earn an honest dollar. After trying until about to give up in despair, he succeeded in securing a situation in Quincy market with the well-known firm of Shattuck & Jones, the largest fish dealers of Boston. He very soon won the respect and confidence of his employers. For three years he drove their order wagon receiving orders and delivering fish. Being a shrewd, enterprising business man, he was given the full business of buying all their fish, having to be on the wharfs as early as two and three o'clock in the morning. He followed that branch of their business for several years, then he was given a situation in the market as head salesman. By his honesty and strict integrity and gentlemanly bearing, as well as close attention to business, he was, after the death of Mr. Jones, made a member of the firm and has had the principle charge of the business since. The other partners having been in the business long, have laid by enough to carry them through the remainder of life's journey, and wishing to retire from business, this North Weymouth boy who enlisted with Messrs. Shattuck & Jones twenty-one years ago has bought out his partners this week having ample means of his own to pay for the whole. Mr. Newton resides in Winthrop and is one of the leading citizens of that town. He has been chairman of the board of selectmen for several years besides holding many other responsible offices.

—E. Frank Beals and wife arrived here Wednesday from Milwaukee. They intend to remain here with their relatives and friends some three weeks before they return to their western home.

—The Ladies' Cemetery Circle will meet Tuesday evening May 19 with Mrs. Josiah H. Pratt.

—Manuel Page is shortly to take a trip to the western islands where he is called to settle his uncle's estate.

—Mrs. Thomas E. Kinder is visiting friends in Middleboro.

—Seth A. Pratt arrived home from Zanzibar, Friday last, after a voyage of 77 days. We hope to give our readers a few details next week.

—Frank A. Newell is having his residence painted.

—Geo. Ruggles is on the sick list.

—Mr. Cherrington is having the bowlders about his new house removed by Michael Delorey.

—Benj. E. Corlew will open the Bay Side on or about June 1.

—Boston parties have purchased the land of Francis Cushing on Norton street.

—Fish and snake stories reign supreme as a rule but here are a few egg facts. A gentleman, the owner of a few feathered bipeds, was recently donated by his good "biddies," six eggs which he thought were rather large. Being in his eyes valuable gems he used troy weight to balance them and they weight just one pound, making two ounces for the average egg, or 960 grains. Shortly after an egg of diminutive dimensions was laid by a respectable biddy, which by weight was only 63 grains; in comparison with the other the ratio is one to fifteen. Quite a variety in seven eggs.

Braintree.

—The Thayer Academy nine beat the Harvard Medical School team 9 to 4 on French's common Wednesday afternoon.

—Mrs. Lombard returned from a trip to New York Saturday.

—George Ratcliff is on the sick list.

—A very pleasant sociable and supper was given in the chapel of the First Parish Wednesday evening. Under the management of Mrs. Edw. Jones, Mrs. Aseph Arnold and Mrs. Martin Hollis a very appetizing supper was served from 6 to 8 o'clock, after which followed a social time where the young people were largely represented.

—N. R. Proctor has started on the cellar of his new residence about to be built on Maple street.

—At the town meeting Friday evening it was voted to dispense with further services of a counsel.

—Mrs. A. A. Ellsworth and her son George returned on Wednesday from Chicago. Mr. Ellsworth is looking very well after his severe illness, and does not seem to have been especially fatigued by the long journey.

George Howes returned from Savannah this week and showed some fine specimens of magnolia blossoms.

—Among the residences of Braintree which have received a new coat of paint this spring are those of Hon. Samuel Thorndyke, Aubrey Hilliard, and Mr. Davenport.

—The Junior Tennis Club expect a very pleasant and interesting afternoon in "doubles" and "singles" on their grounds Saturday. Some of the male members have a great deal of enterprise and push and a very brilliant season is expected.

—No public benefactor has as yet left Braintree a drinking-fountain, but a finely equipped soda fountain is appreciated. During the past spell of warm weather the one here was surrounded with a merry crowd of young people seeking to quench their thirst.

—Wanted.—A South Braintree correspondent for the Gazette to furnish local items. Write to office.

—Mr. Harold Stevens received this week a handsome canoe. The waters of Monatiquot at present will serve for practice and next summer, when he has become efficient in the management of the canoe, he anticipates a pleasant vacation in exploring the Nashua river in New Hampshire.

—Master Ernest, son of Mr. Allen Gage, fell from a stone-loaded wagon, Thursday. Although one of the wheels passed over him no bones were broken. Thursday evening his condition was not very favorable but it is hoped that no serious injury has been sustained.

—The street department has been at work on the low ground in the yard of the Union school-house and where, during wet weather, water has been accustomed to stand, have filled in gravel and put down tile drain. This accomplishment is greatly appreciated by those who have occasion to walk by that place. The West street improvement is also a spoke in the right place for formerly the rolling stones on the hill made a very insecure foothold for horses.

—Mrs. Geo. H. Lane is visiting her son and family at Brunswick, Me.

—Mr. N. E. Hollis has a fine new Goddard buggy.

—A handsome boy baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Belcher, Sunday.

—James L. Bates No. 36 S. of V., will perform escort duty for Reynolds Post No. 58, G. A. R., Memorial Day. The Camp, which now numbers 100 members, will muster in several recruits tonight.

—The Methodist Sunday-school has elected these officers: Superintendent, William H. Pratt; assistant superintendents, Myron P. Ford and Mrs. Myra A. Raymond; secretary, L. Winthrop Bates; treasurer, Joseph A. Cushing; librarian, H. H. Sylvester.

—Peter W. French and family have occupied their summer home.

—The Pound party given by the Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters was very successful. An excellent programme was presented, consisting of a piano solo by Mrs. Charles Merchant; reading, Miss Mabel Keene; solos by Miss Barber of Cambridge; readings by Miss Clark of the Boston School of Oratory; duet by Misses Berta and Ella Raymond, and lively hammer and needle contests. The hammer contest proved that some ladies can drive nails straight and hit them on the head every time. Mrs. T. H. Emerson received the first prize. In the needle contest the first prize was awarded to Asa Pratt.

—A large number of the members of Orphans Hope Lodge A. F. A. M. attended a meeting of the Mystic Shrine, last Friday.

CHAPTER XVIII.

For a minute she was held in close embrace.

When it was generally understood around Fort Ryan the following afternoon that Mr. Hearn had taken the first train and gone after the regiment early that morning people were somewhat surprised. Along toward sunset the ladies began to think it time somebody went to call at the Lanes' and see why it was that neither Mrs. Lane nor Miss Marshall had been abroad during the day. Incidentally, too, it might be possible to find out whether congratulations were in order. Nobody could account for the sudden departure of the lieutenant. Kenyon knew of it of course, but to all questions would only reply, as though in surprise:

"Go? Why, of course he went! What else would you expect of a man like Hearn? He was all ready to join his regiment—why shouldn't he go?"

Still, as Mr. Hearn had not said a word about going, even when questioned the night before, every woman at Ryan felt sure there was some sudden reason, and equally sure that Miss Marshall, if she only would, could tell it. Very probably the first callers fully expected to be told that Miss Marshall was not well and begged to be excused. That would have settled the matter to their entire satisfaction. But, on the contrary, Miss Marshall, looking every bit as fresh and cool and animated as ever, came tripping lightly down the stairs the moment they were announced. She perfectly well knew that they would be coming, and was fully prepared to meet them. She had heard, too, of Mr. Hearn's sudden departure; a brief note had come to Mrs. Lane early in the morning, over which that bonny matron had had a good cry. The visitors only succeeded in finding Miss Marshall as brilliant and entertaining as ever, but more provokingly inscrutable. It was impossible to determine from her manner of speaking of Mr. Hearn and his departure whether there was an engagement or not.

Nor was any one a whit wiser at the end of the week. "If she is engaged to him," said the dames and damsels, "she is receiving rather too much attention from the major, who lets no day go by without its call, and the calls are growing longer."

Mabel Lane, who had looked pale for a day or two, was blithe and sunshiny as ever, so far as Ryan society could judge, and in the absence of any local sensation some people were disposed to regard the situation as decidedly disheartening. No woman rests content who suspects an engagement and cannot prove it.

Letters from the regiment gave no clew. Lane wrote to Mabel every day—another thing that made him culpable in the eyes of lords less uxorious—and she was besieged by the other wives with questions as to what was going on in the field. But what he wrote her of Hearn she would tell no one, not even Georgia—who never asked.

"It has been a hard ordeal for Hearn, as any one can see," wrote the captain. "He has aged and changed greatly. The youngsters had planned a sort of love feast for him, but he begged them that nothing of the kind be held, and he has really shunned society since rejoining. He claims that all his time is taken up with his troop, and of course we are very busy; but there is something behind it, and I think you know."

She did know, and yet could not tell. It was her penance for breaking faith with Georgia. The latter had forbidden that she should tell to any one the fact that Mr. Hearn had indeed offered himself and had been refused.

But Lane learned it soon enough. From the moment of his return to the regiment the young soldier spent most of his time, when off duty, in the society of the captain, and one night in the fullness of his sorrowing heart he told his friend of the bitter disappointment that had come to him. He loved her deeply, had asked her to be his wife, and she had gently, even tearfully, but positively, said no, it simply could not be. He had begged her to give her reasons, and she refused. She assured him of her faith, respect and esteem, but pointed out to him that in every way possible since the trial she had striven to avert the declaration which she frankly confessed she could not but foresee. He was forced to admit this, and could no longer press her for reasons, since she had plainly discouraged his suit. Yet it was hard—very hard.

Lane simply could not understand. "Is there any one else?" he wrote to Mabel, and Mabel said she was sure there was not; but she was equally sure Georgia meant no. Mabel herself was even more perplexed than the captain, since Georgia had gently but resolutely forbidden any further mention of the subject between them. And now, with the utter inconsistency of her sex, pretty Mrs. Lane was all eagerness to discover and demolish the barrier to a match which a month ago she would have opposed because it seemed inevitable.

Then came a joy in which Mrs. Lane for the time being forgot her perplexities. Capt. Fred obtained a seven days' leave from the regiment and flew as straight to her arms as a circuitous railroad route could carry him. He greeted Miss Marshall as cordially as ever, but he did not call her Portia as he had intended, because Mabel warned him in a letter that it served to revive associations which were not all joyous. "I called her Portia long before she met Mr. Hearn," was Lane's stout reply; "but if she doesn't like it, that's enough." Maj. Kenyon was bidden to dinner the evening of his homecoming, and of course many of the garrison people happened in, and so there was nothing but general chat. But two evenings later, when the major was sitting in the big armchair and discoursing on some of his favorite hobbies, he broached anew the matter of Judge Hearn's letter urging his son to quit the service.

"Have you never heard Hearn's answer, major?" said Lane. "He read it to me before sending it, and I thought it so good that I kept a copy. Here it is."

Miss Marshall was sitting at the table under the bright lamp as Lane began to read. Mabel noticed that she leaned forward, shading her eyes with her hand.

"I have thought it all over, my dear father. The offer you make me is one for which I thank you with all my heart. Few men could quit the service under better auspices, or return to a home more loved or friends more loving, and yet—I cannot. Ten years of my life, perhaps the best ten, have been spent in a profession which with every year presents new fields, new studies and new requirements. I have worked honestly, have won friends and, in all modesty may say, a good name. Admitting all you write of this recent attempt of the papers to blacken it, my friends here tell me that it but proves the strength of my record that even concerted newspaper assaults could not harm me in the eyes of right thinking people.

"I love the duties. I am deeply attached to many of my comrades. I can be a very fair soldier, and might only make a very poor lawyer. For these reasons I think I ought to stand where I am. But there is still another reason.

"Father, when I bound myself to the United States as a cadet I received at the hands of the nation a schooling such as I could get at no other institution in the world, and was molded by the nation for its service. If in after years I found myself better fitted to serve in some other way, then there might be excuse for tendering a resignation. But when I feel and know that I am far more soldier than I can ever be anything else, it all the more convinces me that my efforts belong now and for a lifetime to the nation that trained me and that I have sworn to serve.

"The dear ones at home know me best, it is true. The class in whose supposed interests I have been so unjustly assailed, it is also true, is very different from that in which we move. But, in the broad light of a soldier's duty, neither the love of the one nor the unreasoning hate of the other should swerve me. The hardest knocks a soldier has to bear come sometimes from the very men whom he is sworn to defend. You would not have me yield because of a stinging wound or two, nor would I be worthy of your name if I faltered now. It is my belief that, despite apparent apathy, there is still north or south a place in the hearts of the people for every soldier who seeks faithfully to serve them, and in that faith—God helping me—I shall follow the old flag to the end."

"By Jupiter!" said Kenyon, as he sprang to his feet and strode excitedly up and down the room, "isn't that enough to make one damn the liberty of the press, to think that a month ago it was holding up that fine fellow for everything that was low and contemptible! Miss Marshall, if I were— Why, she's gone!"

"Just stepped into the dining room a moment," said Mrs. Lane promptly, though her eyes were brimming. "Now, isn't that Mr. Hearn all over?"

But Georgia Marshall had not gone into the dining room. Mabel found her over at the end of the veranda gazing at the distant night lights across the dark and silent valley.

September came, and the Eleventh would soon be on its homeward march. Letters to the regiment made frequent mention of old Kenyon's devotion to Miss Marshall, and even Hearn had to hear occasional bits of conversation that told him that in quitting Ryan he had abandoned the field to a rival. But when orders reached them there was other news: Miss Marshall was to return to the east at once. "Despite every plea," wrote Mabel, "she persists in it, and adamant is no more yielding than is her determination. I am utterly heartbroken, but cannot prevent it. She has been making arrangements for a new position of some kind for the last six weeks, and she will leave before the regiment gets back."

And when the Eleventh came marching into Ryan late in the month, and a host of tanned and bearded troopers rode in behind the band on its dancing grays, Georgia Marshall had vanished from the scene.

Presently Kenyon took a long leave and disappeared. "Having it out with his newspaper friends in Chicago," was Martin's suggestion. But the next thing heard of him he had turned up in Cincinnati and Mabel knew well what that meant, and waited with bated breath. For a month there came no further news, and then he was reported at St. Augustine, more crabbed than ever.

"Then he, too, has been rejected," said Mabel. And she was right. Kenyon did not rejoin until long after the Christmas holidays.

Old Blauvelt by this time had been sent before the retiring board, which recommended him for permanent shelving, and he was still on leave until the needed vacancy should occur. Hearn meantime remained in command of his troop, no longer encumbered by the presence of Trooper Welsh, who had been formally "sent to Leavenworth." Corp. Brent had won his sergeant's chevrons, and was looking forward to examination for promotion.

Everything was going blithely at the post, but for the sadness that seemed to have clouded one young soldier's life, and for the anxious look on Mabel Lane's face when Portia was asked for, as Portia often was. "Teaching children all the fall and winter was telling on her," wrote an old school friend, and when April came she was reported ill, though her own letters made no mention of it. The family would move to their country seat in a week, and she would be so glad, she said, to see the trees and birds again.

* * * * * *

The first of May had come. The lovely suburbs of a bustling city were shrouded in the richest, freshest green. The sweet breath of the early summer, laden with the perfume of lilac and honeysuckle and of myriad blossoms, was sighing through the foliage of a park of grand old trees and rippling the surface of a grassy lawn. Robin and bluebird, oriole and crested woodpecker flashed and flitted through the sunshine, now splashing in the basin of the fountain, now chasing each other in chattering glee through the slanting light and shadow. The drone of beetle and hum of dragon fly fell soothingly on the drowsy ear.

The little knot of Jerseys browsing in the paddock down the eastward slope huddled together sleepily in a shaded corner. The tennis court was deserted, the mallets lay sprawled about the croquet ground, and a pair of Maltese kittens that had been scampering about playing hide and seek among the currant bushes, seemed at last overcome by the langorous spell in which all nature was hushed, and with the confidence of kittenhood proceeded to clamber into the slowly swinging hammock, hung well back in the shade, wherein was reclining the one human being visible in the entire picture—a tall girl with big dark eyes and a wealth of somber braids of hair—a girl whose soft cheeks were almost as thin and pale as the slender white hands loosely clasping an open letter that lay in her lap. And it was this that the foremost pussy, after clambering by swift springs up the pathway afforded by the trailing white skirts, now impatiently pawed to one side and curled herself up in its place; there she was promptly joined by her playmate. Slowly the thin white hand was lifted and gently stroked the fur of the pretty, graceful creature.

"It is a holiday for us, isn't it, Fluffykin?" murmured the girl. "The children and doggy both gone, and it's almost time for us to be thinking of tea—tea all alone. There's the whistle of the sunset train now."

For a moment the wooded slopes on both sides of the valley echoed to the rattle of the incoming cars, the sharp hiss of steam, the distant sound of voices at the little station down the winding village street, arched over with rustling foliage. Then the clang of the bell and the hurrying engine again pushed northward, impatient of delay. A few light carriages and pony phaetons came driving swiftly by; a few of the occupants waved hand or handkerchief to the reclining figure in the hammock, but far more passed by on the other side without a sign or token, and presently silence and solitude again settled down upon the shaded lawn, and the last rays of the westering sun kissed the tree tops good night and slowly died away.

"Surely there should be another letter from Mabel to-night; this one is a week old now," said Portia. But, old as it was, there seemed one page which deserved re-reading, and the white hands sought and found the letter and lifted it before her eyes:

"Mr. Hearn has been gone a week now, and we miss him sadly. He has almost made his home here with us during the winter, and rarely spent an evening anywhere else. His father's death seems to have been very sudden, and it was a great shock. He has a month's leave, with permission to apply for an extension. Georgia—Portia—I could say so much, so very much, if you would only listen. If you would only release me from that promise! I was thinking but yesterday how I blessed the day that my pride broke down and gave me Fred and happiness. Sometimes I cannot but think that only pride—foolish, unwarrantable pride—stands between you and a life as blessed as my own."

Impatiently the letter was hurled upon the grass, and, half turning, Georgia buried her wan face on her arm. Of what was she thinking? Surely those were hot tears trickling through the long white fingers; surely there was little evidence of stubborn pride in the abandonment of that silent, lonely sorrow. All day she had been at leisure, the family and children away in town, and, though neither her duties had been very onerous nor the trials of her new position very great, she had drooped all winter long. This was the first real day of rest; yet, with all its sweetness and sunshine, had it not been full of tears?—full of vague unrest and longing? And now even the sunshine was going, and the gloaming was slowly settling down upon the valley.

Far over the eastern heights the silvery shield of the soft May moon was peeping into view; but the fairy shafts of her gentle light could not yet penetrate the gathering gloom here in the grove where swung the hammock. Still the hot tears came trickling down between the white fingers and, yielding at last to the mournful influence of the dying day, Georgia Marshall wept unrestrainedly—wept while great sobs shook her frame; and while one fluffy kitten, disturbed in her intended nap, stretched forth a furry paw and lifted up a querulous note of remonstrance, her companion, suddenly dislodged from her cozy nest in Georgia's lap, clawed vigorously back upon the heaving folds of the summer fabric, glared around in excited search for the possible cause of such seismatic disturbance, and instantly set back a pair of tiny ears, arched a furry back, bristled her stiffening tail, and gave vent to spiteful challenge at the fell disturber of her peace. There stood a man.

A tall young fellow, erect and powerful in build, clad in civilian garb, but striding across the lawn with the swing of a trooper, halted suddenly not ten feet away and lifted from his shapely head a hat banded heavily with crape. The next instant he had hurled this aside, stepped quickly forward, utterly ignoring pussy's hostile guise, had thrown himself on one knee beside the hammock, and the drooping mustache almost swept the soft, white hands as he impetuously seized them.

"Georgia," he whispered.

Heavens! what a start! In her wild consternation she recoiled from his touch, striving at the same instant to sit erect. Hammocks are not made for combinations so eccentric. The next instant the flimsy thing had slipped from under her and she felt herself going. Drowning men catch at straws; drowning women seize the hand they would have shunned. But for his sudden spring, but for prompt clasping arms, she would have gone headlong to the ground on the opposite side. For a minute she was held in close embrace, a confused mingling of dusty braids, of throbbing femininity, of hotly blushing, tear wet face, of cool linen lawn and clinging hammock netting. Then her hands regained their cunning and found his broad shoulders and she pushed herself free, and then hysterical laughter came to her aid and the shaded grove rang to a peal that, if not merry, was at least irresistible, and at last, as she sat there restored to equilibrium and striving to regain her whirling senses as he stood patiently bending over her, half praying that the inspired hammock might yet attempt some new freak, she glanced up at him through smiles and tears and disordered bangs only to say:

"How utterly absurd!"

To which philosophical remark he vouchsafed no reply whatever.

It is a full minute before she recovers, even partially, either breath or self possession. Then she holds forth her hand, and he assists her to rise.

"This is not the welcome I should give you. Shall we go to the house?"

But even as she asks and her eyes glance nervously, shyly, up into his face, she knows he will accept no invitation that will peril this tete-a-tete. She sees how the lines have deepened in his frank, soldierly face, and that a sadness not all of his recent bereavement has left its traces there. She would lead him from the shaded grove to the parlor, where the lamps are already beginning to twinkle, but he will not budge one step. He stands confronting her.

"No! I have come solely to see you. Is there any reason why we cannot stay here a moment?" And she can think of none. Oh, what infamous fate that he should have found her weeping—bathed in tears!

"I hardly thought to see you at all, especially after—the great—sorrow of your father's death," she falters, her heart leaping and bounding despite her effort to be calm.

"I am taking mother north," he answers simply. "It was a cruel blow to her and a hard one to me. It was all over before I could get home. Mother will spend the summer with her sister on the St. Lawrence, but she has to rest in Cincinnati until to-morrow night. I left her with old friends this afternoon and came out here to find you. I must go back this evening. And now have you no word of welcome for me? Did you not know that I would come, loving you as I do?"

What answer can she make? Her head is drooping low, her hands are clasped together, her bosom heaving, her breath fluttering away, and yet how wild a joy, how exquisite a hope is throbbing in her heart of hearts!

"Georgia"—he speaks impulsively, his deep voice trembling—"you made me accept your answer then and bear my bitter disappointment without a word; but I have borne it too long now. Had you been at the other end of the world I must have followed you, for the longing to see your dear face, to hear your voice, to look into your glorious eyes, has overmastered me time and again. I had to come, and now I will hear what it is that stands between us. God knows my love and honor have been yours a long, long year. God knows there can be no content or joy for me if your answer be final. You have bound my life in yours. You won my whole heart, my deepest gratitude. No; you cannot check me by impatient gesture now. You must hear. You told me there was no other man. Is that true?"

"Perfectly," she answers proudly.

"And yet you would not listen to me. You would not be my wife."

"You forget it was just after the trial. You seemed to think you owed me such a world of gratitude; and—do not men sometimes mistake gratitude for love?"

"Oh, heaven!" he interrupts her impetuously, his hands outstretched. "You do not mean you doubted me, Georgia! If that were your reason is it not banished now? Look—look up into my eyes, my darling, and tell me, if you dare, that it is gratitude, not deep and fervent love, I offer you. Nay, you shall see." And before she could retreat his strong, trembling hands had seized her drooping head, and between them her face, with its dark, lustrous, swimming eyes, its cheeks still tear wet, yet burning with blushes chasing each other to her very brows, her soft red lips quivering and trembling at the dimpled corners—all—all now lifted to his worshiping gaze; and she can repel no longer. One swift glance, and if ever vestige of doubt remained it vanished then and there. No woman on earth could have looked into his eyes and denied the love that burned within them—all her own, all her own.

"Speak to me, Georgia. Do you believe me now?"

"Yes," she whispers, and her face would have hidden itself but for those strong hands again.

"And you have no love to give in return?"

A little silvery beam is peeping through the foliage now. The kittens, forgotten, are rolling over each other in mad frolic at their very feet. The last chirp of drowsing bird has died away. The silence of the sweet summer night has fallen on all surrounding nature, yet he can hardly hear her whisper——

"You never asked it—until now."

"But it is mine, really? Georgia, tell me," he implores.

"It has been—all yours ever since the night I heard your letter—ever since you wrote that you would follow the old flag to the end."

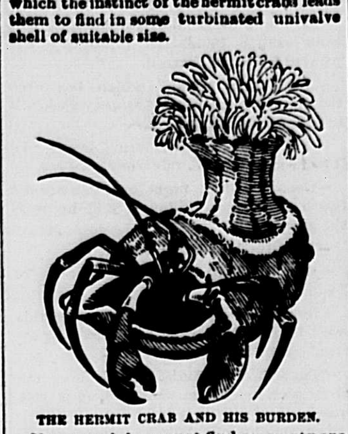

THE END.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS.

NEWS AND NOTES RELATING TO THE ARTS AND SCIENCES.

Characteristics of That Large Family of Crustaceans Commonly Known as Hermit Crabs—Description of a Unique Specimen in the Aquatic Zoo in England.

Hermit crab is the common appellation of a large family of crustaceans having the abdominal or tail sedgments much more largely developed than in true crabs, but undefended by hard plates. This soft and tender tail requires a protective covering which the instinct of the hermit crabs leads them to find in some turbinated univalve shell of suitable size.

THE HERMIT CRAB AND HIS BURDEN.

If on search he cannot find an empty one to suit his fancy he attacks the inmate of the one that does, and picking him out piecemeal takes possession of his new quarters. There is one with a paracitica anemone on the back of his shell in the Brighton aquarium, of which the following is told: "Not long ago this crab changed his shell, and plodded round the old shell for hours to try and persuade the paracitica to come on the new home, but his labors were not rewarded with success, for he went back to his old home and friend, which home is much too small for him now." Hermit crabs are very interesting inmates of the aquarium, but their locomotive habits and their voracity make them unsuitable for an aquarium otherwise very finely stocked.

Paper versus Wooden Doors.

Wood fiber seems to be in strong demand, and its applications seem to be increasing, too. In Hamburg an immense hotel, with its facade and other important parts composed of paper, has recently been erected. Wood pulp is mixed with bronze powder, aniline, or some other color for moldings. Wood pulp is also being used as the basis of a substitute for mortar in covering and finishing walls. It is said to be harder, and, when applied to woodwork in a thin coat, to render it both fire and water proof. Doors made of paper are said to be an improvement over those made of wood. Altogether there is a prospect for the utilization of some of the surplus wood fiber which will presently come upon the market.

When Pompeii Was Overwhelmed.

The question as to the time of the year Pompeii was overwhelmed has puzzled antiquarians, but according to The Gardeners' Chronicle a late discovery answers it with some degree of certainty. The trunk of a tree bearing berries has been discovered among the ashes, the berries giving the clew to the nature of the tree, which was the true or bay laurel (Laurus nobilis). From the degree of maturity of the berries it is, moreover, surmised that the eruption took place in November.

The Food of Corals.

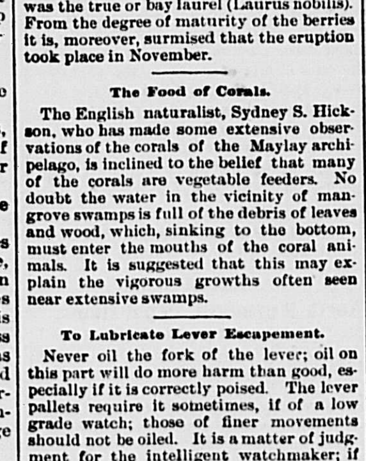

The English naturalist, Sydney S. Hickson, who has made some extensive observations of the corals of the Maylay archipelago, is inclined to the belief that many of the corals are vegetable feeders. No doubt the water in the vicinity of mangrove swamps is full of the debris of leaves and wood, which, sinking to the bottom, must enter the mouths of the coral animals. It is suggested that this may explain the vigorous growths often seen near extensive swamps.

To Lubricate Lever Escapement.

Never oil the fork of the lever; oil on this part will do more harm than good, especially if it is correctly poised. The lever pallets require it sometimes, if of a low grade watch; those of finer movements should not be oiled. It is a matter of judgment for the intelligent watchmaker; if he thinks that a little oil will improve these parts let him lubricate them very slightly, barely perceptible with the glass, is advice given in The Jeweler's Review.

An Interesting Instantaneous Photograph.

The constantly increasing sensitiveness of the gelatine emulsions as now made admits of excessively short exposures, and consequently allows photographers to obtain very beautiful and remarkable instantaneous views.

INSTANTANEOUS PHOTOGRAPH.

In the cut here shown from Nature is represented a man leaping over a settee and caught by the camera in midair. Popular Science News, commenting on the foregoing, says: The sharpness with which such a rapidly moving object was taken is remarkable and indicates an extremely quick acting shutter. The hat just being thrown from the head is worthy of notice.

English Speaking People.

The London Times gives an article on "English speaking people." It there appears that at the beginning of the present century there were 21,000,000 who spoke the English language; that now there are in America alone nearly 100,000,000; in Great Britain and Ireland, 40,000,000; while this same language "has taken for its own" nearly the whole of Australia.

Chocolate Souffle.

Dissolve a quarter pound of chocolate in lukewarm water; add the yelks of four eggs and a cupful of powdered sugar, and mix well together until you have a smooth, frothy paste. Beat up the four whites until you have a stiff froth and add them to the mixture. Pour all into a baking dish; leave it for twenty minutes in the oven and serve.

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

New Fashions and Fancies in Cushions and Bags of Various Kinds.

Some of the newest cushions are circular in shape and made of soft flounces, gathered to produce a floral effect. Occasionally these are arranged in graduated shades, the darkest in the center. Many cushions are covered with puckered silk, having a square in the center of contrasting color, puffed into diamonds. Some of the new cushions are covered with printed silks, and have a gathered frill of plain color.

For the top of chairs two flat square cushions are united with bows at the corners, so that they fall on either side of the chairback; they are generally covered with art silk. There is another shape like an ivy leaf, and small scent sachets also take the form of ivy leaves. Many cushions are fan shaped, while others are oblong.

Some work bags are made in embroidery applique on silk which is drawn together at the mouth and finished with a wide heading. In another shape the bag starts from three or four circles of silk puffings like the petals of a flower. This same shape is applied to bags for holding opera glasses. One of the prettiest bags has a cardboard bottom, the bag, which fits the glass, being made of embroidered silk and having a deep heading drawn in with cord.

A Comfortable New Idea.

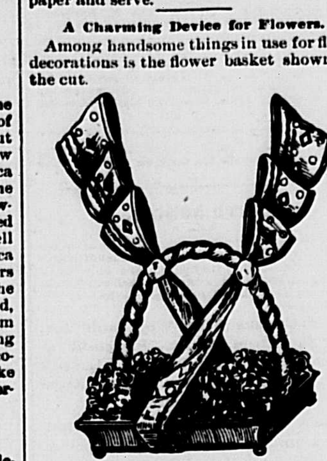

The craze for turning a room in which one wishes to live and breathe and to receive guests into a place where it is almost impossible to move without risk of upsetting some chair or little table on which all kinds of ornaments have been crowded is fortunately dying out. It is impossible to secure real comfort in a room which has for its keynote "the collecting mania," an admirable idea if confined to its proper sphere, the museum, but wholly inappropriate if applied to a boudoir or a room in which a home feeling should predominate rather than the notion of a bazar.

Parsnip Fritters.

Take four good sized parsnips, one tablespoonful of flour and one egg. Put the parsnips into a saucepan of boiling water and boil until tender (if young, three-quarters of an hour; if old, one and a quarter hours). When done drain and mash fine; add to them a half teaspoonful of salt, the flour, the eggs well beaten and a dash of black pepper; mix well and form in small cakes. Put two large tablespoonfuls of dripping in a frying pan, and when hot fry the cakes brown on one side, then turn and brown the other. Drain on brown paper and serve.

A Charming Device for Flowers.

Among handsome things in use for floral decorations is the flower basket shown in the cut.

A FLOWER BASKET.

This tray like basket is of silver wickerwork, filled with a mass of violets and embellished with fancy ribbon, which encircles the receptacle, twines round the handle, and rises at the side in the shape of three upright loops. The arrangement is an exceedingly dainty one for the table, and the idea could of course be carried out in less costly form.

How to Take Care of Good Shoes.

It is most annoying to a lady, after having paid a first class price for a first class article, and after having worn it but a few times, to find it look quite shabby. This is often the case with boots, and she thinks there is nothing left for her but to have them treated with dressing of some sort or other which will brighten them for the time, only to become more unsightly each time it is used upon them. Now, it is affirmed by one who has devoted careful attention to the best care of shoes and boots that all that is necessary when a kid boot is new, and has turned blue, or in any way lost its polish, is to black the discolored parts with common black ink, let it dry, and rub off all the superfluous ink with a soft piece of cloth or rag, then take the white of an egg and beat it well up till it is quite thin, but not frothy. This can be put on all over with the finger, but, like all dressings, should be used very sparingly, not that it will hurt the leather, only that by putting it on thin, as it is transparent, the grain of the leather, which is its beauty, is left visible. This will be found the brightest and cleanest polish that can possibly be got, and dust can be removed with a soft brush.

One of the principal points in cleaning leather is to well rub off all the dirt before using the dressing, and then to use as little dressing as possible, or none at all, if the boots can be made to look well without.

Patent leather is very delicate, more especially when new; in cold weather just a slight pressure will crack it, and for this reason the wearers of it should always put new patent leather boots or shoes before the fire—only for a short time and not too close. This makes the leather very pliant, and prevents it from cracking. When on the foot for the first time patent leather boots should be rubbed to the shape of the foot with the hand; this will block the leather, and it is not so likely to wrinkle and crack in wear. When patent leather boots and shoes are getting dull, white of egg will be found best for them.

French Rolls.

To one ounce of butter add one pound of flour well dried and sifted. When thoroughly blended add a little yeast, as much milk as will form all into a stiff dough, a beaten egg and a little salt. Mix the dough with a wooden spoon, but on no account knead it, or it will not rise. When well mixed let it rise, and put it into muffin tins to bake for twenty minutes. When ready to take from the oven brush the rolls over with a beaten egg, and replace them for a minute to dry.

A Country Where Massage Is the Daily Rule and Fine Physiques Abound.

One of the secrets of the fine physiques of the people of Japan lies in the universal use of the massage treatment. The blind men are the masseurs of Japan. They are known as the shampooers, and the trade of shampooing is given entirely over to them. They are organized into a great trade guild, have their offices, their fixed prices and their rules of labor, and they ply their trade in every city and village of the country.

Every night, says a writer in The Philadelphia Ledger, you will hear the shrill whistle which forms their street cry outside your door, and if you are of the taste of the ordinary Japanese you will call one of them in and give your tired body into his hands. From long training they understand the location of every muscle and every nerve, and with deft fingers they will go over your body as it lies semi-naked on the floor and press each atom until you feel as though you were being mashed to a pulp, but endure the sensation knowing that you will awake a new man, with every force revivified and every muscle renewed. Every Japanese goes through this process every day, and in the cases of the poorer people the shampooing is often done by a daughter or a wife.

The ideal poor man's wife is she who goes over her husband's frame every evening, after his hard day's work, and shampoos his weariness into rest. This exercise brings about a uniformity of muscular development, and in addition to it comes the daily hot bath, which keeps the skin in perfect condition. We have the idea that the hot bath is weakening. It does not seem to be so for the Japanese, for every man, woman and child of the 38,000,000 people in the kingdom is thus parboiled every day, and the average strength is greater than that possessed by the cold bathers of the United States.

THE PUZZLER

No. 79.—Beheaded Rhymes.

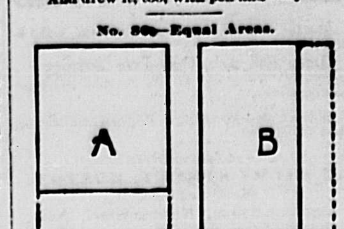

In each of the following couplets fill the first blank with a word, which, after dropping the first letter, will fit the second:

1. The fisherman with line all ——,
Still kept his patience as he ——.

2. At the first bite the line he ——
And off the fish fell from the ——.

3. Pete drew a picture of a ——,
And drew it, too, with pen and ——.

No. 80.—Equal Areas.

Take a sheet of note paper (any size will do) and cut it in half (i. e., into two leaves) at the fold. Cut off a quarter of one leaf along its breadth, and a quarter of the other leaf along its length, as shown by dotted lines in the diagrams.

A and B each represent three-quarters of a leaf of the same note paper. They are therefore equal in area.

Cut A into two pieces, so that the pieces may be put together to form a figure exactly the same as B; or cut B into two pieces, so that the pieces coincide with A.

No. 81.—An Old Proverb.

I am composed of 22 letters.
My 3, 7, 13 an article.
My 9, 20, 21, 13 a number.
My 22, 15, 10 to devour.
My 19, 8, 21, 1 girl's name.
My 4, 6, 17 coldness itself.
My 2, 15, 16, 17 to rescue.
My 7, 11, 12 a personal pronoun.
My 7, 11, 14, 18 what serpents do.
My 5 is the twentieth letter of the alphabet.

No. 82.—Pied Poetry.

[From William Cullen Bryant.]

Turht dsrecuh ot rathe lahls sier nagia;
Het nerelta seyar fo ogd rea sher;
Tbu rroer duwnode trewhis thiw inpa
Nad esdi gmoan ish srohpipswre.

No. 83.—A Number of Nuts.

1. Something which causes pain when on the foot.
2. A nut which seems to belong in a large box.
3. A vegetable and a dish used in preserving fruit.
4. A man's nickname and a man's nickname.
5. A nut that reminds us of the "whispering sea."
6. A nut whose name suggests that it is used in building.

No. 84.—Easy Diamonds.

1. A letter. 2. The cry of an animal. 3. To lay hold of. 4. One of a pack of playing cards. 5. A letter.

1. A letter. 2. A thing for catching fish. 3. To commence. 4. A metal. 5. A letter.

No. 85.—An Amusing Animal.

In mule, not in cat.
In horse, not in rat.
In man, not in deer.
In kid, not in steer.
In tiger, not in hog.
In lynx, not in dog.
My whole is often seen in shows—
An animal everybody knows.

No. 86.—Something We All Watch For.

(1,000) A (1) (50).
Watched for in haste,
Or awaited at leisure;
Sometimes brings sorrow,
And ofttimes pleasure.

No. 87.—A Rhomboid.

Across—A water course; aspirations; a wicked spirit; not hollow; a nation of the dark continent. Down—A consonant; an interjection; a motion of the head; a species of animals; a fish; only an abbreviation applied sometimes to colored people; a title; a vowel.

No. 88.—A Dissection.

A farmer slaughtered and cut up an animal to furnish food for his family, and these are some of the pieces he obtained:

1. One who exists. 2. A wild animal. 3. A man mentioned early in the Bible. 4. What we need in the evening.

What was the animal the farmer killed?

No. 89.—Double Acrostic.

1. A hat. 2. Fuss. 3. A tree. 4. A juice. 5. A liquor. 6. Radius.

Primals and finals, two Roman generals.

No. 90.—Flower Puzzles.

A person and an article of apparel.
An article of food and a hollow vessel.
A dude and an animal.
Fragrance and a boy's name.
One letter in the alphabet and a girl's name.
Particular and a kind of flower.
A spice and an herb.
A domestic animal and to pinch.
A time of day and what many work for.

Food for Thought.

It is his exalted position that makes the weathercock vane.

The concave mirror is not exactly a humorist, but it makes some very amusing reflections.

You can generally get a point on insect life by making yourself familiar with the bee.

She Knew Better.

"Now, children, 'whatever you sow, that shall you reap.' If you sow dandelion seed you will get dandelions."

Little Girl (to her companion)—Well, if he sowed bird seed he wouldn't get birds.

To the Point.

"Cat-nipped," squeaked the mouse, as Tabby got a grip on him.

"You're just the man I'm laying for," as the brick mason said to the contractor.

Key to the Puzzler.

No. 73.—Can You Guess Me? Cod.

No. 74.—Seen in the Fire: Sticks (Styx), sparks, soot (suit), ashes, blaze, smoke.

No. 75.—Geographical Puzzle: Amazon, Turkey, Horn, Good Hope, Farewell, Chili, Orange, Guinea, Steppes, Black, Yellow.

No. 76.—A Palindrome: Able was I ere I saw Elba.

No. 77.—A Neat Trick Explained: No answer required.

Spring Guests.

"Daffydowndilly has come up towne
In a white Petticoate and a green Gowne."

Daffydowndilly, ye Spring it is faire;
Gold 's on ye Tree toppes tall, gold 's in ye aire;
Over ye blue, blue Skye little clouds creep,
Idle as straying Lambs lost of Bo-Peepe;
Here's little West-wind blythe, soft-stepping downe;
And Daffydowndilly has come up to Towne.

Daffydowndilly, here's faire Companie,
Drest all soe lady-fine, welcoming Thee.
Here be Miss Violet, daintie and shye,
Dame Perrywinkle—frock blue as ye Skye;
Here the young Jonquille, abashed, looking downe
Since Daffydowndilly has come up to Towne.

Here be ye Grasses all, thriftiest Folk,
Heeding not wind nor rain, smiling through Smoke.
E'en 'twixt ye cobblestones bravely they're peeping,
E'en on ye Roof soe high they're a-housekeeping;
All o'er our Plat thay've been greening ye browne
'Gainst Daffydowndilly should come up to towne.

Daffydowndilly, brave Sights you shall see;
Wise Men of Gotham—most wonderful Three;
See Humpty-Dumpty; ye King and ye Queen.
She 's making the tartest tarts ever were seen;
He 's counting his money; he 'll put on his crowne,
Now Daffydowndilly has come up to Towne.

Sing, little Byrdies all! Sing, sing aloud,
Cock-Robin Red o' breast, valiant and proud!
Sweet Phebe Peewee, come, swell out your throat!
Chirp, Dicky Sparrow, with livelyest note!
Chaunt all ye Frogs in ye Rushes soe browne!
For Daffydowndilly has come up to Towne.

"Daffydowndilly has come up to Towne
In a white Petticoate and a greene Gowne."

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 15, 1891.

Mrs. Laughton, the regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, which Hon. Jerry Simpson recently designated as a "monopolistic syndicate," because he had to pay one dollar to visit Washington's tomb, accompanied by a number of the vice-regents went to Mount Vernon this afternoon where the annual council of the association begins tomorrow. Only about sixteen or eighteen out of the forty-four vice-regents will attend. Miss Longfellow, vice-regent for Massachusetts, has sent word that owing to bad health she has been compelled to go abroad. Mrs. Leiter, the vice-regent for Illinois, is also abroad and Mrs. Hearst, vice-regent for California, owing to her recent affliction will not come east.

There are few people who will agree with Mr. Simpson in his characterization of this association, which has done what Congress should long ago have done, in purchasing and keeping in order Mount Vernon; but there are, nevertheless, lots of folks who think it little short of desecration to be on a steamboat to Mount Vernon, even if seventy-five cents of it does go to the association which has to maintain the place. The plain English of the whole matter is that the tomb of Washington should be owned by the government and free to all who desire to visit it, but if Congress will not buy it "what are you going to do about it?" The association of women which now owns it has no other way of raising the money for its maintenance than by taxing the patriotism of the visitors to the tomb of the "Father of his Country."

The men who race horses for money having about cleaned out the amateur betters, who twice a year fall willing victims to the "bookies," have hied them to a more profitable field, leaving behind them more than the usual amount of talk about "crooked" races, and this week the men who race horses for fun and the love of the sport are to have their innings in the "Dunblane Meet," which is under the auspices of the Dunblane Hunt Club, which includes in its membership nearly all of the horse loving society men of Washington and vicinity. Only those receiving invitations are allowed to attend these races, the riders in which are all gentlemen, and mostly owners of the horses they ride. Tomorrow and Saturday have been because of the announcement that on those two days the members of the club would attend the races in their red silk hunting coats, just as they do in England, you know. Isn't it just too sweet for any thing?

There is at least one woman in this town who will for the rest of her life swear by the divided skirt advocated by the female dress reformers. The wearing of one of them prevented her taking the star part in an anatomical exhibition on Washington's most fashionable promenade several afternoons ago. The lady was promenading, in a new creation in China silk, which reflected credit upon the modiste who designed it, and which she knew fully set off the advantages of her faultless figure, when one of the sudden squalls, for which this latitude is noted at this season, jumped into the arena, blowing at the rate of ninety miles, more or less, an hour. It got tangled up in that skirt and in about three seconds all that was left of it below the waist was but as the divided skirt came well below the knees there was only a small display of pretty feet and hosiery as the erst-while promenader darted into the portals of a friend's near-by dwelling. What the lady, so ruthlessly undressed by the ungallant wind, thinks of china silk as a material for early spring costumes has not been ascertained.

Mr. Harrison hasn't enjoyed himself on his across-the-continent trip any more than his venerable father-in-law, Dr. Scott, has enjoyed doing the honors or the White House during his absence. Nearly every afternoon the old gentlemen has given some of the many friends he made while a clerk in the Pension bureau an airing behind Mr. Harrison's an honor that the average Washingtonian would sooner have than a crisp hundred dollar bill.

The newspapers have printed at one time or another a great deal about the affability and accessibility of Mr. Blaine. Between us, it is all bosh. No public man during the last fifteen years has been so inaccessible as Mr. Blaine. If he doesn't know you or you haven't a letter of introduction from one of his friends it is next to impossible to get a private word with him. I know this is directly contrary to the generally accepted idea, but its true all the same, as any doubter may easily prove by trying to get an interview with Mr. Blaine.

WASHINGTON, May 18, 1891.

Ex-Representative Yoder of Ohio, who is a Democratic candidate for Sergeant-at-Arms of the next House—curious how these "ex's" are always on hand as candidates for something, isn't it?—is the latest man to bring in a Farmer's Alliance story. Of course he sees the movement through Democratic spectacles; nevertheless what he says is interesting as showing his idea of the drift of things in his State. He says: "Mr. McKinley is honest in the belief that extreme protection, high taxation, is what the people want, but he is deceiving himself. I do not think that any man can be elected in Ohio on the

THE HIGH TARIFF ISSUE.

McKinley makes that the issue and he will be defeated. The farmers are tired of high taxes. The argument he makes as to the benefit of the free sugar clause of his bill condemns the rest of the measure. The farmers ask why some other necessaries of life should not be made cheaper in the same way. The Farmer's Alliance is going to have more to do with the election than either party now thinks." That last sentence is where the milk in the cocoanut lies.

The Raum family have certainly brought misfortune to themselves as well as to the administration by holding office. Green B. Raum, Jr., has been compelled to resign as assistant chief clerk of the Pension Bureau under charges, which if proven should have been followed by a much severer punishment. The charges are that for $200 he had a man appointed to a $600 position, and that for a larger sum he had a man personate the man originally appointed in an examination for promotion before the Civil Service examiners, and that upon that examination the man was promoted to a $1,200 position. The go-between in all these transactions being a negro, formerly a servant in the Raum family, who has been ever since Gen. Raum was Commissioner of Internal Revenue some years ago. How these charges were investigated nobody on the outside knows, but it is known that the negro go-between, the man who bought the appointment and the man who personated him at the Civil Service examination have all been dismissed from the government service, and why young Raum should have been allowed to resign, and have been presented with a month's pay by allowing his resignation to take effect thirty days from date and giving him leave of absence until that time, is what is causing considerable talk here. If he was innocent he should not have been compelled to get out; if he was guilty he should have been summarily kicked out, and punished through the courts.

Office-brokerage is a very old crime in Washington and it is doubtful if there has been a time for many years when it has not to a certain extent been carried on; but it has been commented on that for the last two or three months advertisements have been unusually frequent in the local papers offering to pay for appointments in the government service, and to the old stagers these advertisements are an indication of activity in that particular line of business, and if the guilty ones, when caught are to be allowed to resign and be given a month's pay, there isn't much probability of its ever being broken up.

The Chinese government didn't want ex-Senator Blair as our minister, but it does want and it has applied for a large space for exhibition purposes at the World's Fair. Opinions differ as to the wisdom of the celestials in the first case, but every one will agree that good hard horse sense is shown in the last.

Mr. Harrison is mildly enthusiastic over the reception he met with on his trip, and "Uncle Jerry" Rusk is wildly enthusiastic on the same subject. He says of it: "It was a wonderful excursion, and every day of it was filled with pleasant happenings that must remain fixed in our memories. The great American public—the people—was enthusiastic from start to finish, and if the good folks on our route omitted any courtesy it would be more then I could do to discover the gap." Now hear his opinion of the President's oratorical ability: "He made a greater number of than many high-grade public men could think out and deliver in a life-time." There's no doubt about where "Uncle Jerry" stands on the presidential question.

Ex-Senator Bruce in a public address here said that the race problem must be solved by the negro himself, and at home. If all of them, like the ex-Senator, had $12,000 sinecure Federal positions, perhaps the problem wouldn't need solving.

It was expected that Mr. Harrison would at once announce the new Circuit Court judges, but it is now hinted that the appointments may not after all be made until Congress meets. My own opinion is still that they will be made very shortly.

WILLARD.

Their Fifteenth Anniversary.

Div. 9, A. O. H. of East Weymouth, celebrated its fifteenth anniversary last Friday evening in Odd Fellows' Opera House and it was the most successful held since their organization. President William Tobin opened the proceedings in a neat address of welcome in which he spoke of the good work they have done in helping the sick and needy members of the order, after which he introduced the state delegate, Mr. P. J. Conway of Marlboro' who spoke in an eloquent manner on the aims and objects of the order. State Secretary, John L. McKeever, spoke on unity and advised the young ladies if they were looking for unity to become united to Hibernians as they make the best husbands.

The concert then followed which consisted of songs by Miss Lizzie McGrath, Miss Lilian Purcell, Mr. J. F. Sullivan and Mr. P. J. Mahony; readings by Miss Mary Fogarty; Irish jigs and reels, Mr. Dan Haly. The floor was then cleared for dancing and to the music of Tirrell's orchestra the large party present enjoyed themselves until a late hour in the morning when they separated. Supper was furnished by Caterer Blunt of Boston.

Base Ball Gossip.

—The Institute Base Ball club will be managed by Supt Lyon for the balance of the season.

—The club will appear Saturday next uniformed throughout.

—The Beacons of Hingham have decided to play the Institutes on the home grounds, Saturday next. Go and encourage the boys by your presence.

—Geo. Bagley expects to play on Saturday and Eugene Corridan expects to play in about 3 weeks.

—Jack McCarty will play 1st for the present.

The boys are playing good ball and the presence of the ladies has good effect.

—Jerry Sullivan is acting Captain and is very successful.

—The Supt. of the ground has had them placed in good order and it makes a fine field.

—Ladies day Saturday next.

The Professor and the White Violet.

THE PROFESSOR.

Tell me, little violet white,
If you will be so polite,
Tell me how it came that you
Lost your pretty purple hue?
Were you blanched with sudden fear?
Were you bleached with fairies' tear?
Or was Dame Nature out of blue,
Violet, when she came to you?

THE VIOLET.

Tell me, silly mortal, first,
Ere I satisfy your thirst
For the truth concerning me—
Why you are not like a tree?
Tell me why you move around,
Trying different kinds of ground,
With your funny legs and boots,
In the place of proper roots?
Tell me, mortal, why your head,
Where green branches ought to spread,
Is as shiny smooth as glass,
With just a fringe of frosty grass?
Tell me—Why, he's gone away!
Wonder why he wouldn't stay?
Can he be — well, I declare!—
Sensitive about his hair?

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 3.

Comrades of the Grand Army:

I. Memorial Day with its hallowed memories is near at hand. Each year increases the interest in this beautiful ceremony. It is the day set apart that all over this broad land of ours we, the survivors of the war of the Rebellion, may strew flowers upon the graves of our dead comrades. Each year they drop out from our midst. One by one they go, and none to fill their places.

Comrades, close up the ranks, feel the touch of elbow and, keeping step, march on until we hear the reveille sounded from the other shore.

It is not a day of mourning; rather should we rejoice that our dead have won the victory and are safely camped on the other side. Angels on guard, we cannot wish them back.

Search out every grave that none be forgotten, and let us not forget that this day, more than all others, does much to instil the true spirit of patriotism in the minds of future generations. Our actions speak louder than words.

II. In compliance with General Orders No. 22 from National Headquarters, this Post will parade on Saturday, the 30th inst., and will decorate the graves of all soldiers and sailors within our limits.

III. The Commander earnestly hopes that every Comrade will consider it his especial duty and privilege to be present and assist in the services of the day.

IV. On the Sunday preceding Memorial Day the Post, having accepted the cordial invitation of Rev. Henry C. Alvord to attend service at his church, the Second Congregational in South Weymouth, the Comrades will assemble at Columbian square and march to the place of Divine worship. Services to commence at 2.30 p. m. The Post will appear in full uniform, officers without swords, but will wear belts. The Colors and Guidons will be left at Headquarters.

V. The Post will rendezvous at Thomas' Corner, North Weymouth, on the morning of Saturday, the 30th inst., at 9 o'clock. The Post, having accepted the services of James L. Bates Camp No. 36, Sons of Veterans, they will report at the same time and place.

Comrade Charles G. Morrell has been detailed as mounted Orderly, and will report to the Commander for orders at the hour named.

VI. The honorable Board of Selectmen, also the old War Board, and the editors of the Weymouth Gazette are cordially invited to be present as guests of the Post. They are also invited to attend the Memorial service on the 24th inst.

VII. The following details will be executed prior to the general assembly: The South Weymouth Comrades will report at 6.45 to Past Commander Hastings at Columbian square. He will make details to decorate the graves at Pond Plain and Union street cemeteries, after which he will use all possible despatch in reporting at the Catholic cemetery, East Weymouth, and unite with the comrades from the East in decorating the graves in the usual manner.

The East Weymouth Comrades and the Weymouth Band will report at these Headquarters at 7.15 sharp. The carriages will leave promptly at 7.30 for the Catholic cemetery. Let every Comrade be on time. The Commander feels that more time is needed at this cemetery, and therefore thinks it his duty to make an earlier march.

VIII. The Post will form as a battalion of four companies. Co. A, commanded by Senior Vice-Commander Charles E. Bicknell, will have the right. Junior Vice-Commander Walker will command B, on left. Officer of the Day Dunbar, Color Co. C, and Officer of the Guard Loud, Co. D, third in line.

The battalion thus formed escorted by Camp 36, preceded by the Camp Drum Corps, will move to the Old North cemetery. The Guard will fire a salute of three volleys at the Soldiers and Sailors monument, dedicated to the memory of the heroes of Weymouth who lost their lives in defense of the Nation.

Carriages will be taken for the Landing and the column formed near the railroad station, will move on to Washington street to the Village cemetery entering by the east gate, and leaving by the west on to Front street, march to Washington square where the barges will be taken for South Weymouth, alighting near the west end of Park avenue. The column formed, the march will be direct to the Highland cemetery, thence through Independence square to the grounds of the Weymouth Agricultural Society, where a collation will be served by Caterer Alvah Raymond, and the command take an hour's rest.

Carriages will then be taken for Mt. Hope cemetery. After the conclusion of the ceremonies, carriages will once more be taken for the East Weymouth cemetery, thence the column will march to Jackson square through Broad street to Commercial square, where the ceremonies will conclude with a dress parade and the command dismissed.

IX. Baskets will be furnished in the several villages as usual. It is hoped that our friends, both young and old, will see that they are filled with the flowers of spring, and also prepare wreaths and bouquets for the graves in their localities.

At North Weymouth, Comrades B. F. Thomas, George O. Miller, Isaac H. Walker, Austin Beard, David Dunbar and John Q. Bicknell will see that the flowers are at the usual place.

At the Landing, Comrades Charles E. Bicknell, Charles R. Trott, George E. Fairbanks, R. M. Holbrook, C. H. Spear, Charles H. Loring, Oliver Houghton, George Davis, D. J. Pierce and Benj. F. Torrey will attend to the flowers, and have them in readiness at Lincoln square.

At East Weymouth, James Nolan, Thomas B. Loud, Charles J. McMorrow, F. H. Cushing, Asa B. Pratt, Hiram Porter, Henry Pratt, James J. Mahoney, John Fennell, John L. McKeever and William H. Moran will have the baskets provided for the East Weymouth and Catholic cemeteries.

At Lovell's Corner the following Comrades will see that all flowers, etc., are sent to the entrance of Mt. Hope cemetery; Charles Hawes, George F. Maynard, J. Q. A. Holbrook and Joseph F. Taylor.

At South Weymouth, as last year, each Comrade will be a committee to receive flowers, which may be left at the residence of C. W. Hastings and at the store of Elbridge Nash.

X. Wreaths and baskets intended for particular graves should be plainly marked that they may be placed where the donors wish. In flagging graves Comrades will take particular care that none are missed.

Quartermaster Nash will see that transportation is furnished the Post, music and invited guests. All flags will be displayed at half-mast.

XI. The Adjutant will see that a copy of this Order is sent to each Comrade and also published in the Weymouth Gazette.

By order of
C. W. L. HAYWARD,
Post Commander.

JOHN W. BATES, Adjutant. 6-7

HEADQUARTERS JAMES L. BATES CAMP, No. 36, DIVISION MASS., S. OF V., U.S.A.
EAST WEYMOUTH, Mass., 22, 1891.

Comrades:—

Another evolution in the wheel of time brings us to that season when for a brief period we are called from our secular cares to perform that high and sacred duty which patriot sons owe to the memory of patriot sires. The Grand Army of the Republic in conformity to well established usages, is again called upon to immortalize the memory of brave comrades gone before, by placing with tender hand and moistened eye upon their sepulchres, loving tributes to the honored dead. It is but meet and fitting that the Sons of Veterans should divide with the fathers the honor and distinction of assisting in the performance of this noble and patriotic work.

Therefore, in compliance with our custom, the members of James L. Bates Camp, No. 36, S. of V., will assemble at Thomas' Corner, North Weymouth, Saturday, May 30, 1891, at 9 o'clock a. m., sharp, to act as escort for Reynolds Post, No. 58, G. A. R. Members will appear in full uniform and white gloves.

C. T. BAILEY, Capt. Commanding.
LUTHER W. TURNER, First Sergeant.

Memorial Exercises at North High School.

State law requires that the whole, or a part of the school day preceeding Memorial Day shall be devoted to exercises appropriate to that occasion. At the North High school, Friday, May 29, is to be made a Whittier day, beginning at 1 p. m. The programme given below will be presented and the regular class work will follow the special exercises: song, "Firmly Stand, My Native Land," school; Sketch of Whittier's Life, Miss Newton: English quartette, "Centennial Hymn;" recitation, "Democracy," Master Dee; Rise of Slavery and Whittier's connection with the Anti-Slavery movement, Master Loud; Relation of the incident of the Slave Ships, Miss Oldham; recitation, "The Slave Ships," Miss Wade; recitation, "The Yankee Girl," Miss Litchfield; recitation and song, "Negro Boatman's Song," Miss Crockett; recitation, "The Slaves of Martinique," Miss Peterson; song, "Marching Thro' Georgia," school; Brief description of the war, '61, Master Gutterson; '62, Miss Worster; '63, Miss Burrell; '64, Miss Pierce; 65, Master Hunt; solo, "Babara Frietchie," Mrs. Owen; recitation, "To Englishmen," Master Sullivan; song, "John Brown's Body," school.

The Independence Celebration.

Fourth of July—How can the nation's birthday best be celebrated? Allow me to suggest a way for the Town of Weymouth.

Let all the scholars in our public schools be faithfully rehearsed in singing patriotic songs. Then form into one grand chorus, all who are qualified, and have a patriotic concert on Independence Day in the Town Hall. With waving flags and martial music the occasion can be made one long to be remembered and the sentiment of patriotic songs thus learned will inspire the hearts of those who sing them with love for their country and its free institutions.

The spirit of patriotism must be fed in order that it may not die or slumber, and since our scholars are already being trained in music under competent leadership, it seems as if the present year is a favorable time to carry out such a programme. Similar concerts elsewhere have been most delightful.

FLAGSTAFF.

The Quincy Advertiser Shows Up the Truth.

The following from the Quincy Advertiser has the right spirit in it and will commend itself to the fire department of Weymouth and strengthen the ties of friendship that already exist between the two departments:

The Ledger has succeeded in placing the Quincy Fire Department in a very bad position in Weymouth. We are sorry for this and in conversation with Chief Ripley, who seemed quite reticent about the matter, we learned the following:

"The Weymouth Fire Department managed that fire in a first-class manner, and the wonder to me is how they confined it to the building it started in. I saw no one but what was cool, and as for losing their head, it is absurd. Our boys did not get any refreshments but I want it distinctly understood that they went to render assistance and not to seek what they could devour. I regret that there is any one who would be so small as to attempt to stir up these prejudices." We hope that Weymouth will take no notice of our little daily other than to sympathize with it, for it is not accountable for its utterances, and as years roll over its head we hope it will learn better.

Memorial Addresses.

Congressman Morse delivers the Memorial Day address this year in the Congregational church, Medfield, Sunday evening, May 24; at Pembroke, Decoration Day morning; at Brockton in the Opera House on the evening of May 30.

Historical Society.

The monthly meeting of the Weymouth Historical society will be held in the Tufts library on Wednesday, the 27 inst. at half past seven o'clock p. m.

Good and Reliable.

A good and reliable family medicine is Sulphur Bitters. Every spring for six years I have been troubled with boils. Since I began using Sulphur Bitters, I have not had a single one. You can rely on Sulphur Bitters every time.—Editor Weekly News.

Happy Hoosiers.

Wm. Timmons, postmaster of Idaville, Ind. writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: "Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50 cents a bottle at A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

How to Succeed.

This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient grit—want of nerve. They are nervous, irresolute, changeable, easily get the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirits up," thus wasting money, time, opportunity, and nerve force. There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. Trial bottles and fine book of testimonials free at A. M. Bachelder & Co's.

What They Say.

Crickets chirp, "Hello! Hello!
Sun will shine. I tell you so."
Katydid of habit strict
Makes a point to contradict.
Locusts whirr, all in a swarm,
"Lis—ten! 'T will be ve—ry warm!"
Tree-toad thinks that's cause to fret,
Whines: "No heat! I want it wet."
Bullfrog's voice is thick and hoarse:
Lazy thing croaks, "Cut across!"
Lark calls from the sunny sky,
"I'll reach Heaven by and by."
Baby laughs, a merry crow,
"I've just come from there, you know."

Yachting.

The yachting season is close at hand. Already the dancing blue waves of the river are speaking enticingly to their lovers, urging haste in the preparations for the brief summer's enjoyment.

The Monatiquot Yacht Club expects to hold some very interesting races this season Among the first class yachts will be some unknown quantities.

The Posy has been raised up a number of inches and has a brand new rig throughout, and this fast boat will be faster than ever.

The Moondyne has also a new rig and proposes to surprise her friends and competitors.

The Folly,—well the Folly is now in such a dishabille state that we must speak of her with modesty. The poor old boat has been sadly torn apart. Viewing her the other day, about all that was visible of the old Folly, the heroine of many races, and of many more jolly good times, was the keel and centre-board box. The planking had been all taken off and the deck sawed off about a foot below the gunwale, right through her poor old ribs. New and longer ribs are in place and the contour of the new form that the Folly is to blossom out into was to be traced distinctly. She is to be much wider and a sharp overhanging bow will make her much handsomer besides enabling her to cut the water like a knife. The stern at present looks as if it would be about the same shape as before. The stern, by the way, is receiving much attention from other yachtsmen and many suggestions have been offered as to how it should be formed. The ex-Commodore in his witty way says that they are so solicitous about the stern because that is the part they will see the most of.

What the rig of the Folly will be, we learn is, as yet, undecided, but it will undoubtedly be a good one and a new one. The general prediction is that she will be very much improved by the alterations and be a "flyer."

The Secret we suppose will be in commission but we have heard nothing definite as regards her, nor whether she is to be changed any from last year's form.

The Erin, Commodore Cavanagh's yacht, will of course be "on deck" and if she sails as well as last year, will not be far from the lead.

The White Fawn has a new rig throughout and will be a hard boat to beat judging from the previous record in the club. She carries considerably more sail than last year.

What other yachts will be in the first class we do not know, but the Madge will probably be in for the prizes with as much eagerness as ever, and in a breeze she is a "good one."

The other classes will be treated of in another article.

Railroad Accident—Narrow Escape from a Serious Casualty.

An accident occurred Tuesday to the train which leaves East Weymouth for Boston at 8.01 a. m., which while it fortunately did no further harm than to delay the train a few moments, might have resulted in a terrible accident, entailing a loss of life and maiming scores of passengers. The train runs express between Hingham and East Weymouth. When near New Bridge Lane, West Hingham, the axle on the forward passenger car broke and the thumping of the broken gear created a panic among the passengers. There was no trainman on the car and the frightened passengers expected every minute that a terrible catastrophy would occur. One excited passenger attempted to stop the train by pulling the bell cord but it failed to work and not until the train arrived at East Weymouth did those in charge become cognizant of the danger through which they had passed. The passengers were then changed to another car, and the broken car shunted on to the turnout to await transportation to Boston.

It was a narrow escape from a terrible disaster. The fact that the train ran a mile, around a sharp curve, with a broken axle, without being derailed is most remarkable. Had the train been thrown from the track on the curve below the depot and gone down the steep embankment, scores of people would have undoubtedly been killed and injured. The fact that there was no brakeman on the car was severely commented upon by the passengers. It would seem as if one brakeman should be furnished for each car in a train. If such had been the case in this instance the terror stricken passengers could have appealed to him and he could have stopped the train before anything serious had happened.

Improvement Supper.

The entertainment committee of the Improvement Association met at Arcanum Hall, Monday evening. It was decided to hold their first annual supper and entertainment at Lincoln Hall on the evening of June 2. A good caterer will be secured and a first-class time provided. Tickets have been set at 75 cents, to include the supper, and it is hoped to sell 200 tickets.

Sad Death.

Mrs. Louise Rose Barry of East Braintree died last Tuesday of pneumonia and heart failure, at the age of 38. THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

The column under this title will be given to the people for a free discussion of any and all subjects. The management of the paper distinctly disclaims any responsibility for the opinions here expressed.

EAST WEYMOUTH, May 19, 1891.

TO THE EDITOR OF WEYMOUTH GAZETTE:

Dear Sir,—There still appears to be an unfounded report concerning the origin of the recent fire at Bourk's stable, many laying it, without knowing the facts of the case, to the electric light wires. I think it only fair to the Electric Light Company to permit them to prove to these few misguided individuals who spread the report with so much care, that such could not have been the prime cause of the fire.

Firstly,—All the wires both in the stable and in the house were put in in the usual manner according to the rules and requirements of the New England Insurance Exchange (a copy of which I enclose for your perusal) which are very stringent in their character. After being installed they were inspected and passed as perfect by the Inspector of the Exchange whose only business is to thoroughly examine all the work of companies or individuals engaged in the occupation of wiring for electric lighting or power.

Secondly,—Perhaps the most conclusive proof that I can offer to the general public is that there was no electric light wire in the part of the stable near the place where the fire broke out; all the wires being in the basement and on the first floor and run on the face of the rafters in plain sight of everyone. Perhaps if there had been an electric light in the hay-loft, the lantern, to which some better informed people lay the blame, would never have been taken up amongst the hay.

No doubt but what if there had been electric light wires in any of the buildings that have been recently burnt in such a mysterious manner, they would have had to bear the blame for it as some wish to make them in the above case.

Apologizing for the length of this letter which however deals with a somewhat important subject.

Yours very truly,
J. K. Brydges, Supt.

Beyond Town Limits.

—The Selectman of Plymouth have granted three licenses to druggists to supply the people of that town with liquors for medicinal and mechanical purposes.

—Three persons were buried in Easton last week whose united ages was 251 years.

—When the young lady teachers of North Easton take their exercise in gymnastics and calisthenics, the India-rubber man turns green with envy.

—The Caledonia club of Brockton is arranging for a grand athletic tournament on the 4th of July. Upwards of $1,000 will be given in the different contests.

—Eastham has a growing industry. In 1889, 12,000 bunches of asparagus were shipped from that town; in 1890, 25,000; and it is estimated that the product will be again more than doubled this year.

—Quincy will have no graduating exercises of her grammer schools this year, for want of a suitable room in which to hold the same.

—The Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co. has established a complete telephone circuit connecting all its piers with the Boston office, and the office of the general manager in Hingham.

—Charles G. Hathaway, for many years cashier of the Randolph National Bank, has been elected president in place of Royal Turner, deceased.

—The largest block of granite ever started at Quincy at a single blast was started last week at the works of O. T. Rogers Granite Co. It is estimated to weigh 2,500 tons.

—Whitman is going to try to get its water from the bowels of the earth. The shaft is now down 200 feet and working in dry rock, but there is no occasion to be discouraged as there are still 8,000 miles ahead of them to be dug through if necessary.

—The new district court of South Norfolk is a completed organization, with Oscar A. Marden, Esq., of Stoughton, as judge and Hon. Bushrod Morse and H. F. Buswell, Esq., as associate justices.

—No-license in Marblehead makes loaded trains every night to and from Salem, and it is estimated that $1,000 a week of Marblehead money is left in the latter place.

—Maitland's Band of Brockton will soon begin a series of ten open air concerts in that place.

—The Cohasset Cottager says the village cemetery is full to overflowing and every lot is occupied by "permanent residents." This speaks well for the stability of the occupants of those lots.

—Mrs. Polly Sears of Atlantic, celebrated her ninety-fifth birth, Thursday, the 14th.

—The Savin Hill Yacht club has adopted a new cap for the season and got everything in trim for some fine sport.

—Muskegon, Mich., has been visited by a serious fire, loss a quarter of a million dollars with insurance of only about one-half that amount. The section burned is about three quarters of a mile long and contained twenty large blocks. But for the timely change in the direction of the wind the entire city would have been destroyed. Muskegon is of interest to us mainly from being the present home of Mr. G. C. Fisher, our former school superintendent.

—In Africa, M. Hunckel D. Herculais, the well-known French naturalist, was killed by locusts. The unfortunate man had lain down to sleep in the shade and a cloud of locusts fell upon him. He awoke and fought the insects vigorously. He beat them down by thousands and killed thousands more by setting fire to the underbrush. Obtaining a temporary relief he set down the facts in his note-book. It is supposed that his enemies again set upon him and overcame him, as his skeleton was afterwards found picked clean, under a swarm of locusts with his notebook beside him.

La Grippe Again.

During the epidemic of la grippe last season, Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, proved to be the best remedy. Reports from the many who used it confirm this statement. They were not only quickly relieved, but the disease left no bad after results. We ask you to give this remedy a trial and we guarantee that you will be satisfied with results, or the purchase price will be refunded. It has no equal in la grippe, or any throat, chest, or lung trouble. Trial bottles free at the drug stores of A. M. Batchelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, E. Weymouth. Large bottles, 50c. and $1.00.

A Fatal Mistake.

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary in his new book on "Heart Disease" which may be had free at A. M. Bachelder & Co's, who guarantees and recommends Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. It cures nervous and organic heart disease, short breath, fluttering, pain or tenderness in the side, arm or shoulder, irregular pulse, fainting, smothering, dropsy, etc. His Restorative Nervine cures headache, fits, etc.

FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1891.

Many of our subscribers will be pleased to see the Old Colony R.R. time table in this issue. We print it solely for their accommodation at their request and without pay. We hope to make arrangements with the authorities to have this a permanent feature of the paper. Meanwhile we will run it free for the convenience of the public.

The drowning season has begun quite early and strong this year. Five fatalities of that kind were chronicled in a single day in different parts of New England this week. In three of these instances the report says "he couldn't swim" which is almost as unpardonable as "he didn't know it was loaded."

A boy who can't swim has no right in a canoe on a choppy sea, or sailing a yacht in a breeze of wind.

We do not enthuse much on the new People's Party. There is too much "Kansas" in it. The platform adopted at Cincinati will have to be modified much before it will be well received in the East.

As we predicted last week, so it has proved, that there were too many Farmers' Alliance free silver men in the convention to listen to anyone else.

As the old Liberty party was the forerunner of the Republican party, so the People's party may be the seedling of the real People's party that is sure to come sooner or later.

It may be a little late to plant some kinds of vegetables if it has been the design to have them on the table and cooked at a given day, but it is not late for general planting for the kitchen garden. In fact, nothing has been lost by waiting.

The early part of the season has been so dry that seed put in the ground germinated very slowly if at all, and again there have been so many cold and frosty nights that plants which came up have been set back or entirely destroyed.

The ground is now well watered, and as the cold May storms are probably past, we can with safety look for some good warm and sunny days. The garden planted within the next few days will be yielding as well in August and September as that planted earlier in the season.

The People's Party.

The gathering of the week which is recorded in history as the Cincinnati Convention, was probably as enthusiastic a meeting as has ever been held for the purpose of discussing national affairs.

It can, however, hardly be said to have been a national gathering, as seven-eighths of the delegates came from only ten states, leaving the other eighth to represent the balance of the states and territories.

The convention succeeded in launching a third party on quite a broad and liberal platform.

Should the party become a success and carry the national election of 1892, an era of plenty (?) may be looked forward to, such as has never been known in this or any other land.

First, they propose, a revolution of the present banking system and an issue of legal tender notes good for all debts, public or private, and these notes to be loaned to the people by the government at a rate not exceeding 2 per cent.

Second, a free and unlimited coinage of silver.

The other demands of the platform upon the government are in the line of the two just mentioned; and if, as we said, a party can be organized and become the governing power on this platform, a revolution in social and political affairs may be looked forward to which will suprise the world.

The only thing in the convention which suffered a defeat was the attempt to place a prohibition plank in the structure.

Memorial Day.

The revolving wheels of time which bring in their course the seasons, months, weeks, and days, bring no day which is more generally observed, and which has in it more associations to move the finer and deeper feelings of humanity than Memorial Day.

General Order No. 3 of the Grand Army may be found on our first page and is an order which commands the sympathy and co-operation of the entire town, and no doubt the occasion will be made one of interest.

A new feature of the Memorial season will be its observance in all the public schools in town on the afternoon of Friday, the 29th.

Another feature of the season is the additional interest which is each year being taken in our village cemeteries, thereby keeping fresh and green many associations which otherwise might be lost.

We are not in sympathy with that morbid sentiment which adorns the walls of the home with coffin plates, but life will indeed have been a failure if, when we pass away, we shall not have won the affection of some friend, who will keep the weeds and briers from our resting place, and occasionally trim the grass and plant a flower.

A Duty to Yourself and Neighbor.

Caterpillars everywhere, on every fence, on every post. Going up the doorsteps we walk on caterpillars; passing under the trees they drop upon us. Ugh! How horrible it is!

Some week or two ago we noticed in these columns the immense numbers of caterpillar nests on all the apple and cherry trees and urged a warfare of extermination with fire.

Although many have done their best and have cleansed their own trees, there are a great many who have been negligent; and now, as the predicted result, the loathsome crawlers are "legion."

We are informed that in California they have a law compelling the occupants of a pest-infested district to destroy the insects that endanger the crops. Notices are posted by the authorities describing the pest upon its first appearance and telling the easiest and most efficient means to destroy it, and a certain time is allowed for this to be done. At the expiration of this time, inspectors go about and the owner of a farm or an estate that bears evidence by the presence of the enemy of a disregard of the law, is fined. This law, we are told, works extremely well.

It seems as if some such law was needed here in Massachusetts.

But, meanwhile, it is the duty of every man to, as far as he can, rid his premises of all harmful insects. If one man fights bravely against the caterpillars and burns all the nests upon his own estate, he must still suffer if his neighbors on either side are neglectful of this duty; so we see that the warfare must be a united one to be effectual and that it is inflicting an injury upon our neighbor as well as ourselves to allow caterpillars to breed in uninterrupted bliss upon the branches of our trees.

A vigorous burning of the caterpillar nests just before dark or early in the morning for the next two or three days will be worth a great deal and will destroy millions of these destructive insects. The caterpillars crawl into their nests at dark and remain until after daylight.

Public Meeting of the South Weymouth Improvement Association.

The public meeting of the citizens of South Weymouth called by the executive committee of the Improvement Association to discuss the subject of electric street railroads, was held in Engine hall, Ward 5, Wednesday evening. Edgar R. Downs presided, and Dr. C. C. Tower was elected secretary pro tem. in the absence of Secretary H. H. Joy.

John W. Hart, Esq., said that stock was being sold for the Weymouth & Hingham Co., though they had not yet obtained their charter because they were seeking to have the franchise granted them by the selectmen amended in some particulars.

Henry B. Reed said that he had not looked into the matter and was present not to give light, but to be enlightened.

Charles Hawes of Lovell's Corner, told of the millions who travel now over Pleasant street on business or for recreation, and predicted that an electric road would treble the number.

Samuel S. Spear spoke of the advantages which would accrue to the residents along Main street and at Nash's Corner, claiming, however, that an electric road was no longer necessary to prevent division as that question had already been settled.

Peter J. Healey indorsed the Hatherly Street Railway Co., claiming that that company would most benefit the residents of his section along Union street and that it ought to have a right to run its cars to the depot, and not to Columbian square only, according to the present location granted it; the remainder of the route—from Columbian square to the depot—having been granted to the Weymouth & Hingham Co.

After a lively tilt between Messrs. Healey and Hart, the representative of Union street obtained the assurance that undoubtedly residents of that street would be taken to the depot for one fare, either by one company or by both acting together.

J. Clarence Howe, chairman of the board of selectmen, explained his idea in regard to granting the amended franchise called for by the Weymouth & Hingham Co.

Louis A. Cook affirmed his faith in the future of South Weymouth as shown by his extensive investment in real estate there. He believed that both electric roads would be built, and urged citizens to support both by subscriptions for their stock, and not to imitate the example of the people of Plymouth who allowed outsiders to come in and build the road, and who now are buying in their stock at 140 or 150.

Further remarks were made by James Moore, Francis H. Fearing, Joseph Dyer, Rev. W. H. Bolster, Dr. E. N. Mayberry, Dr. C. C. Tower and others. No subscriptions were asked for at this meeting, but L. A. Cook is to canvas for the Hatherly Company, and those who wish to subscribe for stock of the Weymouth & Hingham Company may hand their names to Henry A. Thomas, A. Fenton Bullock or Henry B. Reed.

The Clark Christian Endeavor Union Holds its Quarterly Meeting.

The Union held its regular quarterly meeting at the First Congregational church, Abington, on Tuesday evening of this week.

The societies comprising the Union are from Abington, Rockland, Weymouth, East Weymouth, South Braintree, North Abington, Hingham, South Weymouth, North Weymouth, Cohasset. South Weymouth and Cohasset failed to appear, but the other societies all sent delegations.

Quite a delegation went from the Congregational and Baptist churches of this village and from East and North Weymouth.

The address was given by Rev. F. A. Warfield of Boston, and the address of welcome was by Rev. R. W. Haskins.

The principal business was the election of a delegate to the Minneapolis convention in July. Mr. Emerson L. Hunt of North Weymouth was chosen. The reports of work of the different societies were omitted owing to the lateness of the hour. A collation of ice cream and cake was provided the invited guests.

Give him a Welcome.

Let everyone turn out to welcome our representative in Congress, Hon. Elijah Adams Morse of Canton, who will deliver his lecture on "Life in Washington" in Fogg's Opera House, Tuesday evening, May 26. Admission free. John A. Fogg, Esq. will preside. This is not a political demonstration, and no member of any party need feel that he is compromising his political standing by being present.

Mr. Morse represents the business man in politics, and the application of business methods in dealing with the interests of the district. That his administration has been appreciated his majority last fall in the midst of the defeat of his political associates is sufficient proof. He is a good illustration that lawyers are not necessarily the best law-makers.

Music by the band and duetts by Mrs. Fannie Sprague Foster and Miss Annie Deane.

Against the Town.

In the case of George M. Gardner against the inhabitants of Weymouth, in the Norfolk Superior Court yesterday, the plaintiff was awarded $1304.16. The plaintiff sued to recover $5000 for injuries he claimed were received by falling on the sidewalk on Madison street, East Weymouth, on account of a defect. The case has been tried twice before with a disagreement each time.

A Song of May.

Merry, rollicking, frollicking May
Into the woods came skipping one day;
She teased the brook till he laughed outright,
And gurgled and scolded with all his might;
She chirped to the birds and bade them sing
A chorus of welcome to Lady Spring;
And the bees and the butterflies she set
To waking the flowers that were sleeping yet.
She shook the trees till the buds looked out
To see what the trouble was all about;
And nothing in nature escaped that day
The touch of the life-giving, bright young May.
—May St. Nicholas.

Good Game at East Weymouth.

A small crowd witnessed a good game of base ball on the Lake street grounds Wednesday afternoon. The teams being the East Weymouths, John Slattery, c.; Fogarty, s.s.; Hyland, 1b.; Morrow, 2b.; Harrington, l.f.; F. McCarty, c.f.; Fraher, 3b.; White, r.f.; Walsh. And the Y. M. S. C., Conlin, E. Slattery, Jas. Slattery, Cronin, 1b.; T. McCarty, 2b.; Fennell, r.f.; Moran, l.f.; Roach, c.f.; Walsh, 3b.

Accident.

Last week Wednesday evening about 6.30 o'clock, when Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Packard and son of Holbrook were at Nash's Corner, returning home from a visit to East Weymouth, a bolt holding the shafts to the axle came out, causing the horse to run. Mr. Packard was thrown out and struck heavily on his head, rendering him unconscious for some time. Dr. Fowler was called and soon made him comfortable enough to proceed home.

Mrs. Packard and her son jumped out and escaped injury. The vehicle was slightly damaged.

Liquor Raid.

Detective N. B. Furnald of Quincy and officers Bayley, Tirrell and Ells of South Weymouth raided the premises of Eugene M. Moran on Union street, last Thursday afternoon, and seized fifteen quart bottles filled with whiskey and one hundred empty lager beer bottles. The whiskey was concealed in a cunningly contrived receptacle behind the washboard of a room on the second floor. The board was so arranged that it was movable, sliding up and down, on pulleys. The trap was so skillfully arranged that the officers searched the place thoroughly for several hours before they discovered the nest.

Well Entertained.

Miss Helen F. Tirrell, who is a member of Mrs. Hayes' school for young ladies in Boston, entertained her schoolmates and the teachers of the school last Saturday afternoon at her home on Main street.

The party, about twenty-five in number, came out from Boston on the noon train: returning at 4.32 p. m. Despite the rain, which prevented their seeing the village at its best, the young ladies must have enjoyed themselves in making the acquaintance of the bill of fare presented. Since their introduction to Miss Helen's pony, a "boom" has taken place, it is rumored, in the pony trade of Boston.

Risky Insurance.

The unoccupied house on Essex street, that was burned last Tuesday night was insured for $700. We learn that the house much dilapidated and that the windows and doors were all knocked out. The owners were extremely fortunate to find an Insurance Company to take such a risk. No local agent took the policy.

Memorial Service.

Reynolds Post 58 G. A. R. will attend church at the 2nd Congregational church, South Weymouth, Rev. H. C. Alvord, pastor, on Sunday afternoon May 24. Service at 2.30 p. m. Coaches for the comrades will leave East Weymouth and Weymouth Landing at 1.30 p. m. and North Weymouth at 1.15 p. m.

Postponed.

Mary A. Livermore's lecture, which was to have taken place this evening in the Old North Church, has been postponed on account of the illness of the speaker. Tickets sold will be good for the lecture when it takes place, or money will be refunded.

Hints for Domestic Use.

One tablespoonful of liquid makes one-half ounce.

Jelly bags should be made of flannel and pudding bags of linen.

Washing floors and shelves with strong pepper, tea or hot alum or borax water will destroy ants and roaches.

Do not put soap in the water with which you clean a mirror; it is almost impossible to polish the glass if soap is used.

Add two tablespoonfuls of kerosene to the pail of water with which you wash grained or other varnished furniture.

Hands may be kept smooth in cold weather by avoiding the use of warm water. Wash them with cold water and soap.

Tar can easily be removed from clothing by immediately rubbing it well with clean lard and then washing out with warm water and soap.—New York Telegram.

A Cheap Substitute for Silk.

Most women will be gratified to learn that the ingenious Mr. Nayemura Sakusaboro, a Japanese druggist, has succeeded, after many years of experiment, in converting wild hemp into a fabric indistinguishable from silk. It is said that a trial of the hempen thread has been made at several silk weaving establishments in Kioto and elsewhere with excellent results, the web having the luster, beauty, softness and more than the durability of silk, while, as the plant grows wild, its tissue will be much cheaper than the slow and costly product of the silk worm.—Harper's Bazar.

Paste This in the Pantry.

Salt eaten with nuts aids digestion.

Milk which stands too long makes bitter butter.

The surest way to have clear jelly is to let the juice drain through a flannel bag, without squeezing it.

If you wish your silk pocket handkerchiefs to remain all the year around as good as new wash them in salt and water before using them.

Keep a little beeswax tied up in a cloth to rub your flatirons with, and you will find that even a white shirt to be done up will soon become a pleasant work.—Exchange.

Worth the Study.

A little careful study will enable any woman to tell the really good from the inferior china. The bargain counter in the china departments of the dry goods stores offer very little that would not be dear at any price. Yet to the uninitiated the plates for nineteen cents compare very favorably with those that cost $1 or $2 each. One can never know too much, and knowledge of this kind is worth acquiring. Every housekeeper takes great pride in having her china closet well filled, and with careful expenditure $100 or $200 will give her a good stock.—New York Telegram.

References Required.

And now a servant girl society has been organized in Gotham for the protection of mistress and maid. The society demands that each servant on leaving her mistress shall leave behind her a "reference" of "character." The reference shall state whether the mistress has been mild tempered or severe, liberal or "prudent," subject to "company" or not, etc. The mistress also gives a reference. In this way both parties are suited, neither is imposed upon, and the world wags harmoniously on.—New York World.

A Female Athlete.

Mrs. H. E. Burmeyer, of New York, is an unusually accomplished athlete. She walks thirty miles at an outing, at a pace of three miles and a half an hour; makes a day's journey on a bicycle on rough roads without resting, climbs mountain peaks with neatness and dispatch, is a long distance skater, an excellent swimmer, a dexterous and powerful canoeist, a sculler and rower who might compete with a college crew, and a gymnast who lifts 525 pounds of iron when out of practice and 625 when at her best. Withal she has abounding health.—Harper's Bazar.

Morning.

Will there really be a morning?
Is there such a thing as day?
Could I see it from the mountains
If I were as tall as they?
Has it feet like water-lilies?
Has it feathers like a bird?
Is it brought from famous countries
Of which I have never heard?
Oh, some scholar! Oh, some sailor!
Oh, some wise man from the skies!
Please to tell a little pilgrim
Where the place called morning lies!
—Emily Dickinson, in May St. Nicholas.

FARM AND GARDEN.

EXPERIENCES AND OBSERVATIONS IN LIFE ON THE FARM.

The Leading Points of a Perfect Pig—Diagram with Accompanying Figure of Model Sides of Bacon—Suggestions for Breeders and Consumers of Pork.

Following are points of a perfect pig: 1. Neat in the head. 2. Light in the neck and shoulders. 3. Deep in the heart and around the ribs. 4. Thick in the loin. 5. Stout in the thighs. 6. Short in the legs. 7. Long silky hair. This type of animal should be aimed at, whether thoroughbred or halfbred or common bred pigs are kept. Large boned, coarse sows are almost invariably deficient in suckling properties and motherly instincts generally, and from their unwieldiness they frequently overlay and crush their young. As size almost always comes from the dam, it is very important that this factor should receive due consideration, and when this size is supported by only just the requisite amount of bone we have of necessity the most economical animal in every way.

MODEL SIDES OF BACON.

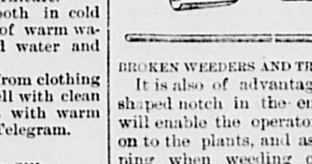

1. Streaky quarter. 2. Rib quarter. 3. Middle quarter. 4. Ham quarter. 5. End of neck. 6. Middle of neck. 7. Thick back and sides. 8. Prime back and ribs. 9. Loin. 10. Fillet. 11. Shoulder. 12. Prime streaky. 13. Thin streaky. 14. Flank. 15. Middle of gammon. 16. Knuckle of gammon. 17. Fore end.

If carefully studied in connection with the figures underneath it the accompanying diagram will explain more clearly than words the desirability of having certain parts of the hog improved and increased in weight, while the less available parts may be correspondingly reduced, and this without detriment to the constitution or fecundity of the animal. For instance, readers will know that the fore end, marked No. 17, is the lowest priced part of the side of bacon. It is therefore desirable to reduce in weight as much as possible. On the other hand the piece No. 9, the loin, is high priced, and it is important that the weight of this be increased.

It is desired to emphasize what was designated in the beginning as point three, "deep in the heart and around the ribs." Looking at this from the consumer's point of view, a pig which is deep in the heart and around the ribs will of necessity produce a larger quantity of first class bacon, viz., prime back and ribs, prime streaky. This is one of the most valuable parts of the animal, and it is therefore desirable to add as much as possible to its weight. From a breeder's standpoint the pig that is deep in the heart and round or well sprung in the ribs will certainly be a good feeder, because he has plenty of room for his stomach, liver, heart and all the main organs. A pig that is long in the legs is nearly always flat in the ham and lacking in plumpness. Good hair is an indication of strength of constitution as well as lean meat.

Use for Broken Trowels and Weeders.

Knock out the old rivets. Then level off the lower end of a small broom handle and rivet securely to plate, as shown in illustration. This makes a very useful implement for digging out plants from the center of cold frames, hotbeds, etc., also for lifting plants anywhere in the flower garden. For many uses this will be found much more convenient than a trowel with a short handle. It will stand more prying.

BROKEN WEEDERS AND TROWELS UTILIZED.

It is also of advantage to form a V shaped notch in the end of blade, as it will enable the operator to easily catch on to the plants, and as it prevents slipping when weeding or thinning out plants that are growing close together. This may seem a little thing, nevertheless the extra amount of work accomplished will be considerable in the long run. The foregoing is from Popular Gardening.

Bees Absconding for Lack of Food.

A frequent cause of the desertion of bees from their hives is short stores. The preventive for this state of affairs is apparent, and yet amateurs are always asking what to do. There is no better advice, perhaps, than that given by Root in his book on bee culture, namely: After the bees have swarmed out and are put back into the hive give them a heavy comb of sealed stores if you can; if not, feed them a little at a time until they have plenty, and be sure that they have brood in the combs. If necessary give them a comb of unsealed larvæ from some other hive, and then feed them until they have a great abundance of food.

Chicken Items.

Col. Curtis, of Saratoga county, N. Y., says: Gapes are caused by a worm. A remedy is to make the chicken inhale lime dust. Sometimes it kills the worm and sometimes the chicken. Cholera is caused by diarrhea, which runs into an infection. Do not keep chickens on the same ground; remove all the well ones from the flock. If a man can realize $1.62 net profit on each hen in a flock of thirty-two, is it not more profitable to keep hens than cows at the present average price for cheese and butter, cost of keep and care of each considered?

Galled Shoulders.

John M. Stahl wrote fifteen years ago that the best preventive of galled shoulders is to bathe the shoulders each evening with salt water. He has written it several times since, and he again calls attention to it in The Farm Journal. He says to tie a cloth around a corn cob, with which to apply the salt water. Begin its use a month before the plow begins and continue it through the working season.

Business Notices.

[Notices under this heading, 3 lines or less, 25 cents.] [Each additional line, 5 cents.]

—If you are wise, you will examine and get prices from Douglas & Co., on anything in the bicycle line.

—If you want a wheel that pays for visits to the repair shop, ride a "Swift."

—Douglas & Co. are agents for the Lovell Diamond Safety. Price, $85.00.

—IN HONOR OF THE BOYS IN BLUE. The Albany, N. Y., TELEGRAM for May 30, will be printed on red, white and blue paper and consist of 16 pages. It will be the most original, unique and popular paper ever presented to the American people. Nothing like it ever attempted by a newspaper in the nineteenth century. As a mechanical wonder and a military literary library there will be nothing even to compare with it issued in this country. If there is no agent in your town you can have the paper mailed to you at 5 cents a copy.

—See Ad. of valuable real estate for sale, consisting of wharf and hotel property, at trustees sale, by Bryant N. Adams, auctioneer.

—The Fredonia Washer will wash more clothes (and better) in one hour than the best washerwoman can by working hard all day. For sale by Joseph I. Bates, Weymouth. 6-8

GAZETTE CHATTER.

GOOD BY SWEETHEART.

"Good by, sweetheart, good by"
I heard a lover cry,
As with tender sighs,
And tearful eyes,
He watched his darling die.

"Good by, sweet tart, good by,"
I heard a baker cry,
As his lazy clerk,
Averse to work,
Absconded with a pie.

Trustees' Sale

—OF—

VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE

Consisting of Hotel and Wharf Property,

Known as Ferry Point,

—AT—

NORTH WEYMOUTH, MASS.

Thursday, May 28, 1891,

At 3.30 o'clock, P. M.

By order of the Trustees of the Weston Estate, will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises, on Thursday, May 28, 1891, at 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon, all the land with the buildings thereon, together with all the Water Rights and privileges of the Weston Estate, and known as Ferry Point, North Weymouth.

The property consists of about 3 3-4 Acres of Land which has an extensive frontage on the Weymouth River, with valuable Wharf Privileges, accessable at all times of the tide by steamboat or sailing craft; a large Hotel well known as the which contains 22 Sleeping Rooms, Large Dining Room, Extensive Dance Hall, with Offices, Kitchen and Cook Rooms; a wide Veranda surrounds the entire house, which affords a magnificent view of the beautiful Weymouth River and its superb scenery. Attached to the Hotel is ample Stable and shed accommodations.

The Estate joins Lovell's Grove on the east, well known as a favorite summer resort, and to which during the present season the Steamer Clifford will make regular trips.

The Sale will afford an excellent opportunity to investors, as a small outlay will make this property very attractive and remunerative.

As a BUSINESS LOCATION it offers many advantages, and can be utilized for manufacturing or other purposes.

Sale positive, rain or shine, and as the Trustees have fully decided to settle the Estate, buyers can feel assured of an Absolute Sale to the Highest Bidder

Cars leave Old Colony Railroad Station, Boston, at 12 m., 1.15, 1.55, 2.30 p. m., connecting with the Electric Cars at Quincy Station to the property.

Terms, $200 at time of sale, other terms at sale. For further information, inquire of the auctioneer, or Francis Ambler, Esq., Weymouth, Mass.

Per order of the Trustees.

Weymouth, May 21, 1891.

RESOLUTIONS.

EAST WEYMOUTH, May 15, 1891.

At a regular meeting of Mechanics' Temple, No. 25, a committee was appointed to draw up the following resolutions.

WHEREAS, By nature and by precept, as well as by religious teachings, life is dear and death is to be avoided, and

WHEREAS, We believe a reliance on God and a faithful service to the Master united with honorable and Christian dealings with our brother man, are qualities well designed to relieve death of its sting and the grave of its victory. Therefore

Resolved, That in the death of brother Fred O. Cushing, our order has suffered a great loss; his family a kind protector, and the community in which he lived an inestimable public servant.

Resolved, That to an uncommon degree, his character as a man and a Christian, is worthy of study and imitation.

Resolved, That we hereby tend our heartfelt sympathies to the widow and family of our deceased brother, and earnestly commend this to the care of our Heavenly Father.

WAREROOMS AND RESIDENCE:
JACKSON SQUARE, EAST WEYMOUTH

South Weymouth Pickings.

—One of our fellow-citizens, when in Milford, Mass., this week, made the discovery that L. A. Cook (or his double) was carrying on another line of business in that place, according to the following extract from the advertising columns of the Milford Journal: "L. A. Cook, agent for Stockbridge manures and Bowker's fertilizers; the best in the market. Also sells mason's materials and brick."

—Miss Mary E. Derby, who has been employed as stenographer and typewriter in a large banking house in Portland, Me., has returned home and accepted a similar position in the office of E. H. Stetson &Co.

—Rev. Henry C. Alvord, pastor of the Second church, has been in Hartford, Conn., attending a meeting of the alumni of the Hartford Theological Seminary, of which institution he is a graduate. He was elected president of the alumni association.

—Rev. Mr. Phillips, pastor of the Porter M. E. church, Lovell's Corner, officiated at the Second church Sunday morning in the absence of Rev. Mr. Alvord.

—The games between the Actives and the True Blues on the grounds of the former club, advertised for last Saturday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, was postponed on account of rain. Tomorrow the Actives go to Hingham to play the Hingham Centers on the fair grounds. They will present the following team: Pitcher, Battles of Brockton; catcher, Baldwin; J. N. Deane, J. F. Maynard, W. B. Loud, I. L. Doble, C. H. Richards, H. W. Loud, W. Hooning.

—South Weymouth needs no hired "spotter" from Boston or elsewhere. Its local police are equal to the emergency. Officers Bailey, Ells and Tirrell recently made an extended search of the premises of one Moran on Union street and succeeded in finding several gallons of whiskey.

—The graduating class of the South High school sent not long ago a copy of the class picture to Mr. Gilman C. Fisher, ex-superintendent of schools, at Muskegon, Mich. The president of the class, Mr. Frank E. Loud, has received a letter thanking the class for its gifts and expressing pleasure at this reminder of life in Weymouth.

—Miss Ella M. Clark attended a dinner party in Woonsocket, R. I., last Friday, at the residence of her cousin, Mrs. Nelson Jenckes.

—Louis A. Cook, Esq. is president of the Hatherly Street Railway Co.

—Rev. W. H. Bolster preached the dedicatory sermon at the Union chapel, South Hingham, last Sunday afternoon.

—Rev. Jacob Baker has been prominent in the organization of the society under whose auspices the chapel at South Hingam was built.

—Rev. Mr. Bolster is the official visitor from the Norfolk association of Congregational ministers to the graduating exercises of Andover Theological Seminary, which occur early in June.

—The Young Men's Social club will hold a grand ball in Music Hall next Friday evening, May 29. Music will be furnished by Cox's orchestra of Brockton. Refreshments will be served in Engine Hall. Mr. Peter J. Healy has charge of the affair, assisted by Messrs. Sullivan and Burke.

—The owner of a lot in Highland cemetery set out some choice plants recently, and in a few days they were found to be missing, root and branch.

—Pond street beyond the railroad station as well of on the hither side, is feeling the spirit of village improvement. Fences have been removed, lawns and sidewalks laid out, and now comes a request for an electric light on the hill beyond the depot. If those who have charge of the distribution of the electric lights are looking for a place to establish a new one, let them consult Messrs. Tribou, Woodbury, Beals, et als.

—In order to increase their funds and also to furnish a pleasant evening's entertainment, the Golden Rule society have arranged a programme consisting of war-songs, recitations, and readings, which will be given next Wednesday evening in the vestry of the second church. A sutler's tent will dispense cake and ice cream instead of coffee and hard-tack. There will be special attractions in the form of solos and orchestral music.

—The lowest estimate on L. A. Cook's land thus far is by Miss Helen F. Tirrell, $54.99; the highest by William J. Rudolph, $425.75. Among the estimates we notice the following: Nathan D. Canterbury, $55; W. H. Bolster, $56.39; Henry A. Thomas, $73.18; Elias S. Beals, $105; James H. $115; Edward Lewis, $115.25; Z. L. Bicknell, $142.50; Hon. Jedediah Dwelley, Hanover, $222.22; John H. Stoddard, Hingham, $225. As showing the estimation in which real estate is held by the musical fraternity, we quote the figures given by the Carmen quartette: Miss Nellie T. Nolan, $135; Miss Annie Deane, $154.50; Mrs. Fannie Sprague Foster, $157.25; Mrs. Marie W. Fobert, $163.

—The Tree Committee of the Improvement Association is having the trees on the highway and on public grounds trimmed. The Public Grounds committee is having their domain put in order for Decoration Day, which is coming to be recognized as the date before which the annual spring cleaning of premises must be done.

North Weymouth Gleanings.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Hawkes left Wednesday for a two weeks' visit to Gresden, Maine.

—Charles Litchfield has purchased the estate of the late Washington Cleverly on Sea street.

—Mrs. Robert Clarke is quite feeble in health.

—Mrs. Charles H. Williams entertained twelve of her friends at an afternoon tea last week Thursday.

—O. P. Fisher has been awarded the contract for plumbing the Bayside House.

—The public park is being renovated by J. H. Pratt, who is putting in some good work on the walks and rockery.

—H. T. Bicknell is remodeling his stable.

—Let Ward One remember our dead heroes and be generous in her floral tribute.

—Avery Ward leaves town Wednesday next to spend his vacation abroad. He intends to visit his two uncles in the British Isles, one being a resident of Windsor, England, the second of Belfast, Ireland.

—Miss Annie Newton is visiting Rev. Mr. Tyler of Dover, Mass.

—Mrs. A. S. Newton is among her South Weymouth friends for a week.

—That section of Commercial street commonly known as Loud's hill is the most wretched section of a country road in existence. The road-bed is miserable, gullied here and there, with rock jutting out and loose bowlders covering its surface completely, threatening injury to horse, wagon and all concerned.

—A recent thieving expedition was inaugurated and carried out, and game roosters were the plunder. Several of our game fanciers lost some very valuable birds on an evening recently.

—H. F. Bicknell is remodeling his livery stable.

Weymouth and East Braintree Locals.

—Mrs. Helen Nash, sails to-morrow, Saturday, for Europe and we are glad to inform her friends that we are promised one or more letters from her ever-ready pen. Those who were entertained by her letters from abroad in the Citizen last summer, will be pleased to learn that they are to hear from her again.

—Mr. and Mrs. Elmer W. Houghton have entertained Mrs. Hattie Jackson of Boston the past week.

—The heavy frost of Monday night wrought serious damage to crops in this vicinity. Francis Richards lost half an acre of cucumbers, and about 2000 tomato plants were also seriously damaged.

—Artemus Binney, hostler at Henry L. Thayer's stable, has been missing for about two weeks. No cause can be assigned for his disappearance.

—Puritan cottage at Fort Point which is owned by Mr. Matthew Macauley of this place has been recently handsomely painted. It is rented to parties from New York for the season.

—Rev. Oliver Huckel is visiting his parents in Philadelphia. He will return sometime next week.

—A buggy containing a young lady and gentleman was overturned at Garfield square, Tuesday evening. The parties were thrown out but escaped serious injury.

—The old sign-post which has been an eyesore to the residents of Lincoln square for a decade, fell over this week.

—Schooner Daniel Webster from Calais, Me., arrived this week with 100,000 feet of lumber for Loud & Pratt.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

The column under this title will be given to the people for a free discussion of any and all subjects. The management of the paper distinctly disclaim any responsibility for the opinions here expressed.

NO. WEYMOUTH, Mass., May 20, 1891.

To the Editors of Weymouth Gazette.

Dear Sirs: — Your editorial on "Liquor for Medicine" has been read with a great interest. The selectmen are certainly to be commended for their course in regard to granting sixth-class licenses, and for the consequences they are most certainly not to blame. It is not true that they have refused to grant any sixth-class license, but that they have refused to grant such a license to those that have applied. In doing this they have followed the statutes exactly, and also sentiments that have been expressed most freely by the citizens of the town for several years. It yet remains to be seen what would happen if one whom the town would feel would obey the statutes exactly, should apply for a sixth-class license. Until that time there is an emergency. And certainly the citizens will be willing to assist one another, and wait until the emergency ends. Other towns have been in the same condition and have been without such a license for years without regret. The citizens of Weymouth too, would rather provide what liquor may be necessary for medicine from some other place; to keep it in their houses in view of sickness, than sell all six licenses for a dollar, or have a liquor nuisance that can be controlled only with exceeding difficulty.

Yours respectfully,

WILLIS D. LELAND.

Braintree.

—Miss Sarah W. Lane was home from Hudson visiting her parents.

—The Afternoon Whist club met with Mrs. Walter Morrison on Monday afternoon. The ladies were excellently entertained and enjoyed a most delightful meeting.

—A number of Boston artists have been invited to assist in the musical to be given by Mrs. Galand, Saturday evening at her residence on Hollis avenue. Miss Hattie Howard Ellis also has been invited to take part in the entertainment. The occasion promises to be a very brilliant affair.

—The ground is broken for Mr. Bailey's new house opposite the parsonage.

—Considerable damage was done to vegetation by the severe frost Monday night. One gentleman had but that afternoon set out a number of tomato plants which were all destroyed in the night by frost.

—The Gypsy moth also seems to have decided to pay Braintree in general a visit this summer. Some of the $78,000 "boodle" appropriated by legislature for the extermination of these pests, could be applied to advantage here.

—Mr. Franklin Shaw Esq., has been able to be out the past week and went to Boston for a business speculation in shoes.

—Mr. Park of Town street is the owner of a phenominal cat who is the mother of kittens each having six toes on each foot.

—Samuel W. Ellsworth of Harvard spent the Sabbath with his parents in Braintree.

—A number of Braintree's young ladies have taken up the most excellent and fashionable habit of horseback riding. The beneficial result from an early morning canter in the exilirating air must be very great, to say nothing of pleasure attendant. The "fad," which, largely recognized all over the country this year, is a very sensible idea and affords a most delightful way of exercise.

—Mrs. J. Franklin Bates has purchased of Joshua Wilkins a handsome family carriage horse.

—The funeral of Mrs. Mary Flynn, widow of the late Daniel Flynn, occurred from the St. John's church, Quincy, Tuesday afternoon, May 19.

—The second exhibition for prizes for excellence in declamation, readings and composition, will be held in the Town Hall, Friday, May 29, at 2 o'clock p. m. The programme will be as follows: Chorus, Welcome, Welcome; declamation, What it is, Bertram A. Dexheimer; readings, Minnie E. Maguire, Bertha M. Blake, Mary Hegarty; declamation, MadAnthony'sCharge, Morton P. Potter; readings, Grace T. Whitmarsh, Lowell T. Hayden, H. Parker Hobart; declamation, Elsie's child, Ada B. Cobb; piano solo, Sadie M. Kelley; declamation, Labor, Florence A. Foster; readings, Annie B. Holbrook, Mary S. Knight, Edith M. Stoddard; declamation, Carol W. Pitkin; song, Grace McCarthy; declamation, Bessie H. Leonard; readings, Essie F. Sturges, Edna M. Goulland, Eva B. Allen; declamation, Oliver A. Tellier; piano solo, Edwin Brooks; declamation, M. Jennie Waterworth; declamation, Bertie W. Tenney; readings, Mary F. Shea, Fannie M. Delano, Bessie M. Gage; declamation, Jessie G. Benham; piano solo, Ethel M. Brigham; declamation, Ellen H. Cobb; song and chorus, Flowers of Spring; reading of prize composition; award of prizes.

—A grand entertainment in aid of the Primary Sunday School Library of the South Congregational church was given in the Town hall, Wednesday evening, to a large and appreciative audience. The excellent programme, each selection of which was nearly perfect and something quite above the ordinary in style and execution, was rendered by the following artists: The Perkins quartette, assisted by a Musical Club from Roxbury, were heard in a number of choice selections. Master Carl Oakman, the boy violinist, held the audience spell bound with his beautiful playing both in a solo and in the obligato accompaniment. The grace, self-possession and precise execution as displayed by him are very rare in one so young, and the amount of feeling expressed in his rendering of "Home, Sweet Home" was very gratifying to the audience. Miss Linda Randall's readings, and the piano and violin duet by Miss Annie Parsons and Miss Annie Zbrosky were very creditable. The solo by Mrs. Brackett was also enjoyed. But the children were no longer able to keep their seats, and pushed to the front of the stage, and the hall rose to its feet, when "Tom Thumb's Wedding" with the tableaux, was presented by the children of the Primary Sunday School. It was indeed a charming sight so exquisitely pretty and innocent they all looked. Helen Waite represented the bride; Charles Cummings, groom; Thurlow Torrey, priest; Olive Thompson 1st bride's maid; Kittie Cummings, Helen Stetson, and Gertrude Allen, bride's maids. All did remarkably well. After the entertainment ice cream and cake were served and a most successful occasion concluded.

—N. E. Hollis is having his house painted.

—R. E. Morrison's house has just been painted.

—The wooden trimmings about the roof of the A. S. Morrison & Co's stone woolen mill have been painted a becoming dark shade touched up with bright yellow. The front of one building is covered with a handsome ivy and the whole place looks neat and tidy.

—The Helping Hand Society held their first anniversary at Odd Fellows hall, Wednesday evening.

—The Braintree Reserves have reorganized under Manager Chase and are scheduled to play the Abingtons at Abington May 30. They invite matches with any amateur clubs of equal age. (eighteen years)

—The Hollinsworth and Whitney employees go to Gardner, Me., Decoration Day, to play the nine selected from the employees of the Hollinsworth and Whitney Paper Mill of that place.

—The Braintree Base Ball Club has organized again and play their first match game the first Saturday in June. This coming Saturday they play a practice game with the "Hollinsworth Paper Mill" on French's Common when the players will be M. Woodsum and Rudderham, battery; McGinniss, Condon, Connors, Buckley, West Woodsum, Bates and Smart. Several other names of good players are on the list, fifteen in all. The manager is ready to consider challenges from any good amateur club for any Saturday after Decoration Day.

—We are sorry to report that Mrs. W. A. Torrey is still very ill.

—Councilman Branley has bought the house and barn on Holbrook avenue of the O. C. R. R. and is moving them to the city.

—A. H. Hollenbeck met with a mishap Wednesday. His grey horse, a spirited animal, took fright from an accident on Washington street and started for home. No driver being aboard to guide him the turn into the driveway was made somewhat abrubtly, and threw the carriage against an apple tree and making it a complete wreck.

—In the sets of doubles on the Junior Tennis Club grounds, Tuesday, Miss Miriam Lane and Harold Stevens, 6; Miss Bessie Morrison and Mr. Fowler, 4. Miss Miriam Lane and Harold Stevens, 6; Miss Bessie Pray and Wm. Congdon, 2. Miss Bessie Morrison and Mr. Fowler, 6; Miss Bessie Pray and Wm. Congdon, 0. Wednesday afternoon, ladies' singles, Miss Nettie Holbrook and Miss Miriam Lane, 2 sets to 1 in favor of Miss Holbrook.

—On Wednesday morning, May 20, a beautiful girl baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Porter.

—On Friday evening the Rebekah's will give a Strawberry Festival at the Lodge room. Eight candidates are expected at the meeting next week.

—Fred Adams, who was bitten on the arm by an Italian, the latter part of last week, has been taken to the hospital. It is feared that blood poisoning has set in and amputation of the limb may be necessary.

—The Pine Tree Club will give a grand finale "down east supper," in Odd Fellows Hall, South Braintree, Saturday evening. A social time, many brilliant speeches and an excellent entertainment, in addition to the Maine supper, are expected.

—See the Post Office department for list of letters in Braintree post office.

—There will be an especially adapted sermon for the G. A. R. in Town Hall, Sunday afternoon, by the Universalist minister, South Braintree.

—A stray horse wandered into the stable of H. Vinton & Son, Tuesday. The animal showed signs of hard work and ill treatment. However, the horse is in good hands and being kindly cared for. Of course the owner will call for his property and settle the bill in a few days.

—Mrs. Litchfield and her son have moved from their new residence on Monatiquot Heights to North Scituate.

—The estate of Mrs. Julia A. Marland, on Washington street, was sold to E. H. Marsh of Boston, by H. B. Vinton.

—See Church Notices for the services of the First Parish Congregational church.

—Homer N. Chase of Auburn, Me., has delivered, through Vinton & Son, nursery stock to the amount of $250, and Hiram Girnery of the West Auburn nursery, stock to the amount of $350, in Braintree and vicinity, showing the interest in fruit trees is still unabating.

—Rev. A. A. Ellsworth has been invited to attend the Sesqui-centennial at Milford, June 10.

—The Monatiquot Lodge K. of P. visited Delphi Lodge, Weymouth, Thursday evening. The amplified 3rd degree was worked on two new delegates.

East Weymouth Briefs.

—Geo. Young broke the record in getting to the fire on Essex street, Monday night. In three minutes from the alarm, the horses were attached to the carriages at the engine house.

—Miss May Norcross, sister of Supt. Norcross, is out of her school at Chelsea, on account of loss of voice, and is spending a few days in East Weymouth.

—The house and stable of Mrs. D. Randall, is being made to shine with a new coat of paint.

—John A. Connell is putting in town water.

—Scott, the barber, has filled a long felt want, and put in a fine suit of bath rooms.

—The Loyal Legion will give an entertainment in Temperance Hall to-night.

—The Womens Christian Temperance Union met with Mrs. E. L. Nickerson, Tuesday afternoon. There was a good attendance of ladies. The weather was so mild and pleasant, that the members enjoyed a picnic trip to the summit of Mt. Randall.

—The Reform Club will hold an entertainment in Temperance Hall next Wednesday evening. The three-act drama, "Fruits of the Wine Cup," and vocal and instrumental music will make up the programme.

—The W. C. T. Union will meet with Mrs. James Matherson, Tuesday, June 2.

—Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond will celebrate their silver wedding next Thursday evening.

—The Loyal Legion held a most interesting meeting Monday afternoon. There 53 members present and three new members admitted.

—The Methodist Sunday-school are rehearsing "The Seasons," and will produce it at an early date.

—The beer shops flourish like a green bay tree in this ward, and nothing is done to discourage the business.

—Portions of Grant street are in a deplorable condition. There are enough loose cobble stones in the street to nearly pave it.

—The Bowen House at Weymouth Beach will be opened this season by Mr. B. W. Bowen.

—James L. Bates Camp, No. 36, S. of V., held a practice drill at Reynolds Hall, last Thursday evening. The camp has always made a creditable appearance in public, and intends to surpass itself upon Memorial Day.

—Mr. Asa Morse of Providence, has been visiting the family of Mr. J. Richard Totman.

—Litchfield's fish market has received a decided improvement in the new show window placed in the front of the building.

—W. H. Lovell has been at work the past week upon the Washington school rockery which will soon show an attractive appearance.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Cunningham are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Marden.

—James L. Bates Camp, No. 36, S. of V., will be represented in the Division Encampment at Lowell, June 3 and 4, by Post Captains W. C. Earle and M. P. Garey, Capt. C. T. Bailey and delegate W. M. Marden.

—Fire in an outbuilding upon the Unitarian church premises last Thursday noon caused an alarm to be given. The blaze was extinguished before any great amount of damage had been done. It is said to have been set by mischievous boys.

—Miss Ida Burrell is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Phillips at Whitman.

—Orphans' Hope Lodge, A. F. A. M. held its regular monthly communication, Wednesday evening.

—Mr. and Mrs. John N. Jackson of Boston, have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Marden.

—As usual, after the rain, the marsh in the rear of the post-office is flooded with stagnant water, and drainage of the surroundings; added to this is the rapidly growing and rapidly decaying vegetation, making a place which should receive the attention of the board of health.

—Rev. Daniel Evans, the newly elected pastor of the Congregational church, began his work last Sunday, and preached to a full house. He will be ordained and installed Tuesday evening, May 26. Services in the Congregational church at 7.30. Rev. W. DeWitt Hyde, D.D., of Bowdoin College, Me., will deliver the sermon.

—Mrs. Henry Loud has been quite ill with pneumonia.

—Where is the public spirit which put the curb stone around the little park in Jackson Square, and put the vase there? The recent rains have developed tall grass, but there seems to be no one to put a lawn mower on it, and the season is rolling on, and no flowers are in the vase.

—G. M. Hoyt was taken quite suddenly and seriously ill on Sunday, but is improving.

—The cantata of the "Months and Season," given so successfully a short time since by Miss Abbie Rogers, will be repeated next Friday evening, under the auspices of the Woman's Home Missionary Society at M. E. church.

—There will be exercises appropriate to Memorial Day at the Middle street school, Friday afternoon, May 29, at 1.30 o'clock. At the Franklin school, there will be memorial exercises in each room, at 2.30 o'clock. Parents, friends and members of the G. A. R. are cordially invited to be present.

—Among the weddings announced for June, is that of our well known boot and shoe manufacturer, Mr. John Carroll, and Miss Nellie Nolan, the talented vocalist of South Weymouth.

And about Three Acres of Land, more or less, and the Furniture in said house at Auction, situated on

POND STREET, SOUTH WEYMOUTH MASS.,

and known as the Michael Gilligan Estate, will be sold at PUBLIC AUCTION on SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1891,

at 1 o'clock P. M. One Large Dwelling House and Stable, also one small building, together with about three acres of land, situated on Pond Street, South Weymouth, near the depot. It has a frontage on Pond street of 175 feet, and runs back to the railroad track, making the back land very valuable for business purposes. The Dwelling House has eleven apartments, very conveniently arranged for two families. There is also a never-failing well of water upon the premises. The buildings are in thorough repair, and about one minute's walk from railroad depot. Immediately after the sale of the house and lands, a part of the household furniture will be disposed of to the highest bidder. Also, five Crimping Machines, all in good order, and about forty dozen Boot and Shoe forms, a number of them are new and all are in good order. Also, Benches and a quantity of Tacks. After which will be sold one Tip Cart and one Express Wagon, and many other articles too numerous to mention.

FAR AWAY.

Far away,
As we hear
The songs of wild swans winging
Through the day,
The thought of him who is no more comes ringing
On my ear.

Gentle fear
On the breast
Of my memory comes breaking,
Near and near,
As night winds' murmurous music waking
Seas at rest.

As the blest
Tearful eye
Sees the sun, behind the ocean,
Red i' th' west,
Grow pale, and in changing hues and fading motion
Wane and die!

So do I
Wake or dream.

AN EXCITING ESCAPE.

Everybody has "experiences" more or less interesting. I had one in Cincinnati in the winter of 1878, which was somewhat out of the usual order, and which will bear telling. I had gone there from Michigan with commendatory letters, which introduced me to prominent steamboat owners, who were operating floating property on the Ohio, Mississippi and Tennessee rivers. With one of these men I entered into a contract, by which I was to have a financial interest in a steamboat then building, and take the responsible position aboard of her as chief clerk.

These southern steamboats—be it said to those who are familiar with steamboating on the great lakes—carry three and sometimes four clerks, and the position of chief clerk is that of cashier. In this position he has to handle large sums of money, as the boats in some trades advance considerable amounts of cash in the shape of "charges" on consignments of southern produce—cotton, peanuts, tobacco, etc. I mention these things to show that the position I was to assume was one in which a dishonest man could misappropriate or embezzle large sums of money, and that I, being a stranger, was being taken largely upon trust.

I boarded at one of the downtown hotels then, and while waiting for the boat to be finished and go into commission had very little to do, especially in the evening. One evening I was sauntering along Fifth street in company with the landlord of the hotel and two Front street commission merchants. When near the corner of Race street some one proposed going up a flight of stairs and trying our luck at "keno," explaining that a nice quiet ten cent game was going on there. "Keno" was certainly harmless, so up we went. Part way up the stairs we found a closed door obstructing our passage; but a word from our conductor, whispered through the wicket which opened at his rap, secured our entrance.

We entered a large room filled with tables, at which sat perhaps 150 people, all intent on the cards in front of them, placing the bits of glass thereon as the caller twirled the goose and announced the numbers drawn. I did not know then, but learned afterward, that this was one of the largest gambling houses in Cincinnati, and that on the floor above roared and clawed the unchained tiger, and other animals equally voracious, familiar to those who woo Dame Fortune for high favors. But the placing of bits of glass on green and white squares of pasteboard for an investment of ten cents, with a chance to win $15 or $20, seemed perfectly innocent and harmless. So, though it was my first experience, I had no hesitation in sitting down with my companions at an unoccupied table and taking a hand in the game.

We had only played two or three cards—during which time, by the way, none of our party "kenoed"—when there was a great racket on the stairway, and a picket came rushing into the room with the warning cry of "Police! We're going to be pulled!"

Well, if there ever was a scattering, a grand transformation scene, it was then and there. It was sauve qui peut! Everybody went helter skelter, leaving cards, money and everything else on the tables, and, in fact, climbing over tables, over turning them and making a headlong push for the upper stairway.

The man who had been twirling the "goose" dismounted it, and hustled it into a large trunk handy by. The man who was manipulating the tally board did likewise. Then these two worthies joined the procession upperstairward. Meantime the battering at the stout door in the lower stairway continued. I had joined the throng going upward, thinking, of course, that as the proprietors of the gambling house were sensible people, and as these raids must be common things, the proprietors aforesaid had suitable exits provided for their patrons, and that we were even now on our way toward one of them.

Finally, after going up two flights of stairs in the darkness—for the lights had been extinguished very soon after the alarm—the crowd came to a standstill. Those behind urged those in advance to go on. But they replied that they couldn't; they had come to the end. I squeezed along into the crowd until I was among those in advance. Some one struck a match to see where we were. It was a cul de sac, a blind passage. It was indeed the end. We had gone up to the roof story. There might have been a back entrance from the lower or second stories of which we could have availed ourselves had we known enough about the locality. But those stories were now in the possession of the police and they would soon be here, when we would be captured like rats in a trap.

Then, for the first time, dawned upon me the extremely awkward not to say desperate position in which I was placed. I knew that this was absolutely my first visit to a gambling house; that I had been engaged in a (comparatively) harmless little game of keno at ten cents a card, at which I couldn't lose more than $1.50 if I played all the evening, which I did not intend to do. Then I thought of being taken to the police station; of perhaps having to stay there all night. Of having my new friends and business associates—for whom I was soon to occupy a position of so much financial trust and confidence—of having them read my name in the morning Enquirer in the list of those arrested in a notorious gambling house raided by the police last night.

I thought of their surprise, and imagined their remarks to the effect that they couldn't put a young man who was evidently a confirmed gambler in charge of such important interests as they proposed. It was a good thing they had found me out before the thing had gone too far, and I had fleeced them out of thousands of dollars.

Horrible! I must get out some way. There was a window near where I stood. I opened the lower sash and found that it looked out on a square courtyard. By the light from windows in the lower stories I could see on the floor or ground of the court broken crockery and other things extremely uninviting to fall upon. No, it was out of the question to try a drop of four stories, even if it had been on a soft bottom. It was sure death to try it. But to be captured! Disgrace and ruin! Terrible alternative! Was there no other chance of escape?

Looking upward I saw that the part of the building in which we were was a sort of connecting link—though it had no opening—between the building facing Fifth street and that facing the alley between Fourth and Fifth. It was not quite so high as either, and the window reached nearly up to the roof. Here at last was a chance. To climb out of the window on to the roof. No sure thing, to be sure. There was nothing to get hold of on the roof to pull myself up with. It was not a steep roof, but it was not a flat one; and the slope was toward me. There was actually no way to hang on except by the friction of hands, arms and body on the sloping roof. It was taking long chances on slipping, dropping down into the court below and being picked up a shapeless and mangled corpse. But then if I wanted to get out I must take some chances. If I waited much longer the police would be there.

So I pulled down the top part of the window and worked myself out until I sat on the sash with my legs dangling inside. Sitting this way I could just get hold of the edge of the roof with my hands. It felt like a dreadfully insecure hold. With the aid of those inside pushing up on my feet (they had endeavored to dissuade me from the rash attempt), I managed to wriggle my hands and arms along on the roof until I was standing on the sash with not quite half of my body on the roof. Oh! how I did squeeze myself to that roof. I sung out to them down below to push up on the sash a little.

They were all interested now, and had evidently almost forgotten about the police.

To see a man killed is not such an every day occurrence. They pushed up the sash a little, and that shoved me a little farther up on the roof. A little more and I could get one of my knees on it. But that little more! The sash was getting so high up that it was too far directly under the eaves to do me any good. So I took my feet off and kicked out in mid air like one swimming. That kick sent me a little farther along on the roof, and I was able to hold my own by the adhesion of my body and clothing to the roof. Another kick at the risk of slipping off, and a little more body on roof. Finally a knee; then both knees, and safety. My late fellow sufferers—whom I could no longer see—gave me a cheer when I told them I was all right.

I was in a position then where I could help any one else to get out with comparatively little danger by giving them a hand and pulling them up. I told them so, and in the exuberance of my spirits invited them collectively to freedom. But only one, a young man about eighteen and a light weight, was venturesome enough to accept the invitation. I pulled him up quite easily. Then together we scampered up on the roof of the front building, and cautiously looked over the coping down on the crowd which had gathered on Fourth street at the word that the gambling house was being "pulled." Such is the buoyancy of youthful spirits that, from being a few minutes before abjectly downcast, we were actually having quite a jolly time; a regular lark up on the roof, out of harm's way, watching detachments of citizens, who had been caught in a gambling house, marching toward the Hammond street station under police escort. It was so funny.

However, when they had all gone we thought ourselves that we could go too. Besides, it was getting late. So we started to go. The building we were on stood on the corner, and those to the south and west of it were a great deal lower. They were old buildings, and this was a new one. Still, that did not bother us much. We were both active, and all we had to do to get on one of the lower buildings and thence to the ground was to slide down a water conductor. Then we skirmished around for a water conductor. We found three, but unfortunately all were of tin, partly disjointed and evidently entirely incapable of sustaining either of our weights.

It began to dawn on us that we might have to stay where we were all night. This would be awkward again, especially as we might be arrested in the morning for not being able to give an account of ourselves. We tried several scuttles, but all were closed, and we dare not make a noise for fear of being mistaken for burglars and shot by any one who might be underneath them. We were pretty nearly "up a stump" when we found a ventilating skylight with side windows, to which was attached a small rope, like flag halliards, for raising the sides of the skylight from below. We pulled up this rope—or as much of it as we could—from both sides, cut it off and tied the pieces together. This we proposed to tie around a chimney and go down on it to the next roof. But it was old and had been exposed to the weather evidently a long time, and it was questionable whether or not it would sustain our weights.

We did the best we could to test it, bracing our feet against each other's and pulling as hard as we could on the rope, a small portion at a time, until we had gone over its entire length. As it didn't break, we concluded it would stand the strain; so we made one end of it fast to the iron brace of a chimney and threw the other over the coping. It did not quite reach the next roof, but it would be a short drop from the end of the rope to the roof. Then the question was who should start first. We agreed that as I was the heavier, if I started to go down and the rope broke, I might break my leg, but he would be left on the roof; whereas, as he was the lighter, if he went down in safety and the rope broke while I was going down I might break my leg, but he would be in shape to call an ambulance. So he started to go down the rope, and he made the descent successfully.

Then came my turn. I climbed over the coping, but kept one hand held on it, while with the other I held on to the small, worn and rotten rope. I hated awfully to let go that coping. It was twenty-five or thirty feet down to that other roof, and it seemed a good deal farther. But there is no use hesitating. Well, here goes. Plunk! Oh, my! I am down on that roof, but I can't get any wind into my body. Ugh! Ugh! I can only grunt. My friend comes to my assistance, rolls me around and feels of my arms and legs. He pronounces me sound as a dollar. Meantime I begin to get a few short breaths. Then my companion tells me that I had my legs "scrunched up," as he expresses it, when I let go the coping; that the rope broke as soon as I put my weight on it, and that I came down like "a shot out of a gun," landing fairly on the most frequent resting place of my anatomy. That's what so completely knocked the wind out of me.

We got down all right then, went to the hotel and washed off the coal dust of the roof. But ever since that time I have been prejudiced against keno.—Alex I. McLeod in Detroit News.

Points About Stockings.

It is, in fact, a maxim among shoe dealers that a woman wearing a white stocking will want a cheap shoe, while black stockings and the best grade of shoes are naturally associated. Black is indeed the fashionable color at this time to an unusual degree, but it is regarded with distrust by some purchasers on account of the liability, real or supposed, of fading. It is claimed by those who should know that the original washing may be so done as to prevent much of the fading.

The formula is thus given: "Both cotton and woolen should always be washed before they are worn. Lay them all night to soak in cold water. Wash them next day by themselves in two waters, warm but not hot, the soap being previously rubbed into the water so as to form a lather before the stockings are put in, and mixing with the first water a tablespoonful of gall. Then rinse them, first in lukewarm water, until the dye ceases to come out and the last water is colorless. Stretch them, and hang them out immediately in the air to dry as fast as possible."—Good Housekeeping.

Lucky Widow Blossom.

The luckiest woman in Kansas City is buxom young Widow Blossom, proprietress of the great Union depot restaurant, who feeds 2,000 people daily at fifty cents a head for a good square meal and owns a three story hotel across the street where part of them may sleep if so minded. The lamented Mr. Blossom located in the Union depot several years ago and had some little trouble in making both ends meet. Expenses were high, and for a time it looked as though he would have to abandon the enterprise to some one with more capital.

He held on, however, and after the tide turned made money rapidly. Then the poor man died, but his handsome widow carries on business at the same old stand, and is yearly laying away a snug sum, estimated all the way from twenty to thirty thousand dollars. She could marry any day, but like most women with money fears to wed a fortune seeker.—Cor. Chicago Herald.

The Change in Woman's Dress.

The elaborately dressed woman, on the street especially, is destined to be a rarity. Flashy styles will be given over to the marked women who seek for attention—attention so far as the criticisms of their own sex and the sneers of the men are concerned. That the time is ripe for a material change in the fashions is conceded by all women of taste and intelligence. Styles have run to the extreme, until only a little distance remained to the point of the exceedingly ridiculous. The strain on the purse has been severely felt.

Changes, and of a radical nature, became so frequent that even the wealthiest found difficulty in keeping pace with them. The reaction which has set in is both timely and healthy. Women on every hand are welcoming the dawn of the simple in dress, while man will have extended to him the honor he has always esteemed the greatest could be conferred upon him—to walk the street with a woman in neat but simple attire.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Water Candlestick.

In a tumbler filled with water a piece of a paraffin candle is placed, after having been weighted by a nail stuck in the lower end to keep the candle floating. The advantage of this light is that it burns steadily, being below the line of any draught, and when it is burned out it is extinguished by the water, leaving no smoke.

As the candle burns down in the ordinary light it flickers and at last gives out an odor of burning grease, which is very unpleasant to the sick. The water glass candle holder prevents all this.—New York Journal.

Codfish is picked up and bones and skin removed then it is packed in old fruit cans with paper neatly pasted on the top when the original covers of the cans are missing.

SIOUX VENGEANCE.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE CUSTER MASSACRE.

The Savages in Overwhelming Numbers Awaited the Opportunity, and Mishap and Misunderstanding Did the Rest. The Record of Heroism.

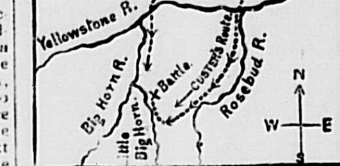

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

SITTING BULL'S tragic death closed another bloody act in the terrible drama of revenge that has had its scene in the Yellowstone region for a quarter of a century. The bloodiest period in that drama marks the slaughter of Custer and his devoted band, and in this Sitting Bull took part, either in person or through followers whom he inspired.

The most important leader of the hostile Sioux at the time was Crazy Horse, who, like Sitting Bull, was simply head man of a band and not a tribal chief. The warriors led by these head men numbered about 250. In the early spring of 1876 repeated hostilities on the part of these roving bands toward white settlers and friendly Indians in Montana and Dakota stirred the government to some action to bring them under subjection. It was proposed to surround them and offer the usual terms.

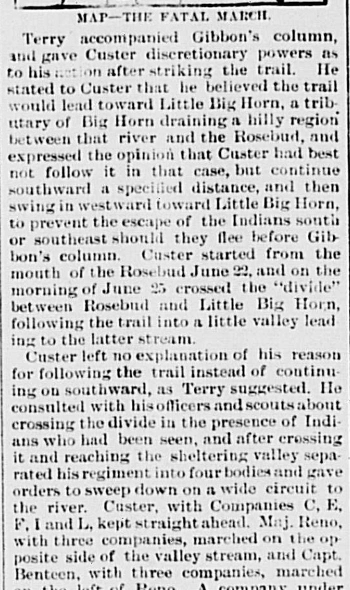

The Indians were on the Yellowstone or its tributaries, and a column of troops under Gen. Terry and another under Gen. Crook started from opposite directions with the purpose of hemming them in. Terry was on the north along the Yellowstone, and had with him two bodies of infantry and cavalry, one led by himself and the other by Col. John Gibbon. Custer was with Terry, and commanded the Seventh cavalry. While the column was halted near the mouth of Rosebud river a scouting expedition struck a fresh lodge pole trail leading toward Big Horn river, a stream parallel with the Rosebud and thirty to fifty miles west of it. Terry divided his forces into two columns, one led by Gibbon, comprising all the infantry and four troops of cavalry, to move along the Yellowstone to the Big Horn and then southward along that stream, closing in on the redskins from the north, and the other, consisting of the Seventh cavalry, led by Custer, to move southward along the Rosebud until he struck the Indian trail.

MAP—THE FATAL MARCH.

Terry accompanied Gibbon's column, and gave Custer discretionary powers as to his action after striking the trail. He stated to Custer that he believed the trail would lead toward Little Big Horn, a tributary of Big Horn draining a hilly region between that river and the Rosebud, and expressed the opinion that Custer had best not follow it in that case, but continue southward a specified distance, and then swing in westward toward Little Big Horn, to prevent the escape of the Indians south or southeast should they flee before Gibbon's column. Custer started from the mouth of the Rosebud June 22, and on the morning of June 25 crossed the "divide" between Rosebud and Little Big Horn, following the trail into a little valley leading to the latter stream.

Custer left no explanation of his reason for following the trail instead of continuing on southward, as Terry suggested. He consulted with his officers and scouts about crossing the divide in the presence of Indians who had been seen, and after crossing it and reaching the sheltering valley separated his regiment into four bodies and gave orders to sweep down on a wide circuit to the river. Custer, with Companies C, E, F, I and L, kept straight ahead. Maj. Reno, with three companies, marched on the opposite side of the valley stream, and Capt. Benteen, with three companies, marched on the left of Reno. A company under Capt. McDougal was left with the pack train. Reno and Custer moved within sight of each other during the forenoon,

Col. Tom Custer. Capt. Calhoun.
Gen. Custer.
Autie Reed. Boston Custer.
THE CUSTER FAMILY OF VICTIMS.

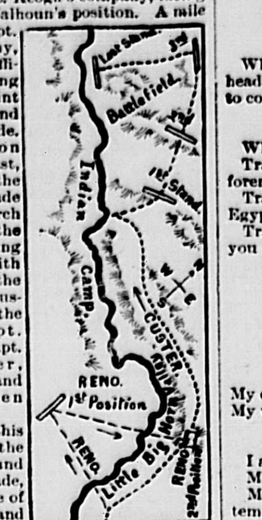

and about 11 o'clock Custer signaled Reno to rejoin him, and an hour later instructed him to move forward and charge. The recall of Reno from the center made a wide interval between the right and left wings under Custer and Benteen, and as Reno went ahead in direct advance of Custer the gap remained unclosed. Benteen went on, as ordered, an hour and a half, and not finding Indians closed in to the right, recrossed the little valley, and regained the main trail in rear of Custer.

The column was thus moving in four bodies on the same route in the following order: Reno, Custer, Benteen, McDougal. Reno dashed ahead, reached Little Big Horn and crossed, hearing nothing further from Custer. Benteen, after recrossing the little valley to the main route, met a man of Custer's column returning with an order to McDougal to hurry forward the pack train. Later a messenger from headquarters was met returning with an order to Benteen to come on quick; there was a big village ahead. These two communications were the last that passed between any soul of Custer's party and any known survivor, excepting one, from the time Reno parted company with them.

The exception was an Indian scout, who served Custer as such, and during the fight disguised himself as a Sioux and escaped. His story is corroborated in part by the testimony of Kill Eagle, who was one of the hostiles, and by the position of the bodies of Custer and his followers, as found. It appears that Custer followed Reno to the point where the latter crossed Little Big Horn, and kept on down the east bank of the stream four miles, thinking that Reno's attack would fall upon one end of the village and that he would attack the other. The high bluff of the river prevented his attacking where he wished, and when finally he reached a ford the Indians met him and drove him back from the stream. Custer then dismounted his men and gradually retired in the face of superior numbers, seizing the most defensible positions he could find. For several hours these were defended, the officers and men falling in the order in which they stood in the ranks. The Indians charged again and again, and Custer went about among his men animating them until he fell very near the last.

The scout stated that when the fight seemed hopeless he went to Custer and offered to help him to escape; that the gallant soldier thought a moment, with a characteristic poise of the head, then, seeing the Indians pouring down for a fresh attack, waved the tempter away and joined a knot of men to fight his last. The story told by Kill Eagle is to the effect that an attack was made on the southern end of the Indian camp by troops from across the river (Reno), but was soon repulsed, the troops recrossing to a bluff, where they were joined by other troops (Benteen and McDougal). The hostiles returned to the village after repulsing this attack on the south, and were immediately summoned to meet troops coming across the river on the east (Custer). The warriors all deserted the village and crossed the stream to fight. After several hours they returned, stating that the soldiers had all been killed. Then they crossed the stream again to the hill and attacked the troops there (Reno, Benteen and McDougal).

The movements of Custer after he made an ineffectual attempt to cross Little Big Horn at the ford were indicated by the positions of the bodies found by Gen. Terry when he reached the mournful scene. Three-fourths of a mile from the stream lay Calhoun's company in an irregular line. They had fought facing the river. A mile distant lay Capt. Keogh's company, facing back toward Calhoun's position. A mile farther lay Capt. Yates' company, with other officers, indicating that at this point a general stand had been made. This position faced northeast, showing that the Indians had made a circuitous march and headed off the troops, causing them to fight with their backs to the river. Gen. Custer, Col. Cook, the adjutant, Capt. Yates and Capt. Tom Custer, Lieut. Riley and thirty-two men fell here.

VALLEY OF DEATH.

A mile from this point and near the river a last stand had been made, and here some of Yates' men and Capt. Smith's company lay in line, with their backs to the river. Between this point and the spot where Custer fell the route was marked with the bodies of twenty-six dead soldiers.

From statements made by hostiles engaged against Custer it is inferred that the Indians encountered him personally, hand to hand, that he fought desperately with his sword and was shot by one Rain-in-the-Face. Custer's body was not mutilated, and his was the only one in the group entirely spared. The number of warriors engaged was estimated by good judges at about 2,500. The bands of Crazy Horse and Sitting Bull were present, and Crazy Horse was the inspiring genius on the Indian side. The savages had large re-enforcements from the neighboring reservations.

The number of troopers with Custer was 277. A monument on the crest where Custer made his last stand records the names of all who fell. The battle ground is a national cemetery.

Terry's column numbered 1,100 men in all, and all the tribes in the vicinity sent their warriors to the camp on Little Big Horn to overwhelm whatever troops had the temerity to attack. Gen. Crook's column, 1,000 strong, on its march north to co-operate with Terry had attacked these same Indians near the head waters of the Rosebud the week previous, and meeting with defeat had returned south without effecting a junction with Terry. Terry reached Custer's battlefield two days after the fight.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

THE INDIAN'S CHALLENGE.

Blaze with your serried columns,
I will not bend the knee:
Your shackles ne'er again shall bind
The arm which now is free.
I've mailed it with the thunder,
When the tempests muttered low,
And where it falls ye well may dread
The lightning of its blow!

I've scared ye in the city,
I've scalped ye on the plain;
Go, count your chosen where they fell
Beneath my leaden rain!
I scorn your proffered treaty!
The paleface I defy!
Revenge is stamped upon my spear,
And Blood! my battle cry!

Some strike for hope of booty,
Some to defend their all.
I battle for the joy I have
To see the white man fall;
I love, among the wounded,
To hear his dying moan,
And catch, while chanting at his side,
The music of his groan.

Ye've trailed me through the forest,
Ye've tracked me o'er the stream,
And struggling through the everglade,
Your bristling bayonets gleam;
But I stand as should the warrior,
With his rifle and his spear;
The scalp of vengeance still is red,
And warns ye—come not here!

I loath ye in my bosom,
I scorn ye with mine eye,
And I'll taunt ye with my latest breath,
And fight ye till I die!
I ne'er will ask ye quarter,
And I ne'er will be your slave,
But I'll swim the sea of slaughter
Till I sink beneath its wave!

—G. W. Patten (from an old collection).

Manual Training for Women.

One of the most significant signs of the times is the progress being made in the manual training of women. The public School of Art for women at Bloomsbury, England, holds a high rank in its instruction in art and mathematics, and is entirely in the hands of women professors. In South Kensington more pupils in proportion to their number carry off prizes in the yearly national competitions than in any other institution. In Belgium there is an Ecole Professional, numbering 770 pupils, and its object is to give women a thorough professional manual education simultaneously with theoretical teaching.

In Holland similar schools exist, which admit to their classes young girls of every rank in society, and not only teach every sort of handicraft suited to professional work, but also furnish excellent opportunities for liberal culture to those who do not need to make of art a means of support. In Denmark the professionally artistic education of women is of a yet more advanced character, and the government school of decorative art is attended by 120 women pupils, who are admirably trained to take up art in its various branches professionally.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Pleasing Sense

Of health and strength renewed and of ease and comfort follows the use of Syrup of Figs, as it acts in harmony with nature to effectually cleanse the system when costive or bilious. For sale in 50c. and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists.

Murdered.

The body of Julius Baer was found by freighters five miles west of here Tuesday morning, in a terribly mangled condition. His head and face were smashed, so as to be hardly recognized, and numerous wounds were found on his body. Mr. Baer was agent for the great blood medicine, Sulphur Bitters. Robbery was undoubtedly the motive, as he was well known to have a large sum of money on his person. As we go to press there is no clew to the perpetrators.—Colorado Press.

A MAY SONG.

Month of bursting buds and flowers,
Springing grass and vernal showers;
Time of singing birds and brooks,
When fair earth her loveliest looks.

Down the green hills sloping side,
Grassy ripples smoothly glide.
Zephyr, with his gentle sigh,
Woos thee as he passes by.

Perfumed with the breath of flowers,
Glad we hail thy welcome hours;
While the sun with eye of love,
Greets us when we look above.

Blossoms white as drifted snow,
Float down, silently and slow.
Flora comes, thy steps to meet,
Strewing flowers 'neath thy feet.

Springtime's latest, loveliest child,
Grateful we, thy breath so mild,
Shedding odors everywhere,
On the fragrant, dewy air.

Charming, flowery month of May!
Basking in thy sunny ray,
Glad we come thy steps to greet
With thanks for all thy balm so sweet.

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 22, 1891.

"Uncle Jerry" Rusk is the happiest man in Washington just now, and lets everybody see it that comes in contact with him. No one would ever suspect to look at him that the genial secretary who presided over the department sometimes jokingly referred to as the "national pumpkin factory," had concealed somewhere about his robust person an almighty hankering after military glory; but he undoubtedly has, which explains many things including the military manner in which he, when Governor of Wisconsin, sat down upon the Milwaukee anarchists and made himself the of that state. Few people had even a suspicion until a day or two ago that the cabinet officer who prefers a corn-cob pipe to a cigar and who sits in his private office in his shirt sleeves when the heat makes a coat burdensome had an ambition to be a soldier.

The secret came out when a long, mysterious looking package marked "Hon. Jeremiah Rusk, Secretary of Agriculture" came by express to the department last week, before the presidential party returned. No one at the department opened it for fear that it might be an infernal machine for Rudini, Kaiser Wilhelm or some other disgruntled—no allusion to the grunt of the American hog, which is now allowed to enter German ports alive, and who as a matter of fact also enters all other ports—European potentate.

Yesterday "Uncle Jerry" opened the mysterious package, and lo and behold! it contained the dearest wish of his great, big heart, a sword, and such a sword! Not one of the slender, gilt-bedecked affairs which adorn the side of a modern army officer, but one of those massive looking, heavy hilted, slightly curved, snickersnees with which the patriots of the American Revolution carved Hessians, mule meat, and other necessary adjuncts of a military campaign in those primitive days. The secretary was and if the telephone line had not been in use—it always is when you want to use it—he would have called up the White House so as to tell Mr. Harrison all about how gratified he was to receive this sword, which not only in itself "filled a long felt want," but also provided him with the means of establishing his eligibility for membership in the Sons of the American Revolution, for the sword was carried in that contest by Secretary Rusk's grandfather, and it was for that reason that it was presented to him by Mr. William Berry, of Macon, Missouri; and should Rudini by some hocus pocus obtain possession of the Itata and bring her up the Potomac to get out of the way of the Charleston, I have no doubt that the secretary would gird on this sword of his ancestor, march down to the beach at the foot of the Washington monument and swipe her clean out of the water.

In the long center corridor in the second story of the White House, several tables are covered with the

and Mrs. Harrison on their tour. There are several hundred of them altogether. Among the most conspicuous are a silver salver presented to Mrs. Harrison by the ladies of San Francisco; a tiny silver baby carriage sent to 'Baby McKee'; a map of the Territory of Utah made of silver and nearly a foot square; the invitation and menu cards of the Palace Hotel banquet, both of solid gold; a silver ladle with a picture of the ship Monterey engraved thereon; spoons from nearly every city visited in the silver states; a miner's lamp of solid silver; silver nut cracker from Mrs. Senator Stanford and several other articles from the same lady, including a handsome picture by a Russian artist; a pyramid of the bark of the big trees of California, and medals, banners, and illustrated albums by the score. As yet these beautiful things have only been seen by personal friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, and I am told that it is a perfect treat to have Mrs. Harrison give you a running sketch of the articles and their donors. The collection taken all together is such a unique one that an attempt is being made to induce the President and Mrs. Harrison to allow them to be publicly exhibited in the National Museum, but they have not yet consented.

The girls have captured

ANOTHER BIT OF MASCULINE APPAREL,

and about the last piece that you would have supposed—the suspenders. A charming young girl whose father is well enough fixed to allow her to get several dresses a season from Monsieur Worth introduced the style in this city in a tennis suit, intended to be worn without a corset. The suspenders are white, elaborately embroidered and are worn over a waist that looks a good deal like a man's neglige silk shirt. The suit has a blazer the same color of the skirt, a dark blue; but when I first saw the young lady she was whacking the ball in her shirt sleeves, with the suspenders shining.

WASHINGTON, May 25, 1891.

At the Farmers' Alliance headquarters here there is little disposition to discuss, for publication, the new-born People's party. Nothing but the kindest feeling exists on the part of the Alliance men for but it is easy to see that they fear that there has been too much precipitancy in its formation; and it is presumable that they wish to see how it is received before committing their organization, which will have to furnish a very large majority of the voters in the new party, if it is to become a factor in the national campaign next. There is another phase of the matter that is not pleasing to the Alliance men, and that is the character, or rather lack of character, of some of the men who have elbowed their way to the front in the new party. These things will be thoroughly weighed before the great Alliance convention meets next February, and after all that convention will really decide whether the third party shall live or die.

The trouble which resulted in the resignation of the son of

has assumed a new and interesting aspect, having gotten into the hands of the District Attorney through the efforts of the Civil Service Commission, which feels very sore on account of the trick that was played upon it in connection with the sale of a promotion in the Pension Office. Commissioner Roosevelt, who, whatever his faults may be is never afraid to publicly spend his opinion, says on the subject: "I am delighted to learn that the Attorney General has turned the case over to the District Attorney. We felt very sure that the testimony made out a prima facie case against the four men,—Raum, Straus, Johnson and Smith—and that it was our clear duty to promptly report the case not only to the heads of the departments in which the men were serving, but also to the Attorney General for such action as he might see fit to take. The misconduct of which these men are alleged to be guilty is of so serious a character that we could do no less. Offences of the kind indicated are sure at times to occur, and the only efficacious way of dealing with them is by punishing the offenders. The prompt and vigorous action of Secretary Noble in this matter reflects the greatest credit upon himself and the administration."

What the District Attorney will do with these cases is a question upon which he and the Attorney General have held several conferences. It is believed that he will be compelled to do something by the Civil Service Commission, which recognizes the doubt cast upon all its proceedings by the fact that one man could take an examination upon which another could be promoted and is determined to try and rehabilitate itself in public estimation by its energy in pushing the prosecution of the detected offenders and by making promises that such things shall not occur again.

Commissioner Raum has not yet tendered his resignation, but the general impression is that he will eventually do so. Many believe that he will so so as soon as Secretary Noble returns to the city, which will be inside of ten days. He is regarded as but many of his personal and political friends do not hesitate to say that the best thing he can do is to resign, in order to relieve the administration of embarrassment.

Mr. Harrison has not up to this time attempted to take up the hanging threads of any of Mr. Blaine's partially completed reciprocity agreements, but I am informed that an arrangement has been made satisfactory to all concerned, whereby, in case Mr. Blaine decides to go to Maine instead of returning to Washington, Mr. John W. Foster, the gentleman who recently went to Spain for the state department and negotiated a trade reciprocity agreement, will become Mr. Harrison's adviser in all matters pertaining to reciprocity, in short a sort of deputy Secretary of State.

The story of Mr. Blaine's being a is regarded here to be too silly to need a denial. I saw a letter that he dictated less than three days ago, and it was in his usual vigorous style, a style which cannot be counterfeited.

The presence of a considerable number of more or less prominent republicans in this city has caused it to be believed that the appointments of the new U.S. Circuit Court judges are about to be made, although there are still some people who think they will not be made until after Congress meets. The rumor is also revived that Mr. Harrison proposes appointing among the judges. Perhaps he will, but if so he will greatly suprise a good many people, myself among the number. It would, of course, be a highly honorable thing for him to do, but his political associates would call it mighty poor politics.

WILLARD.

Sobered Him Off.

A party of young men while proceeding home a few evenings ago, came across a badly intoxicated individual in Commercial square. The man was simply paralyzed and they concluded to help him home before the argus-eyed police should run him in. By the time they got him opposite the premises of A. A. Spear they concluded that the job was too much for them as he had become perfectly helpless.

While in this predicament they conceived of a novel scheme to offset the influence of the spirits. Laying him out on Spear's lawn, they took the hose and turning the water on full force let him have it. The shock was a severe one to the man's benumbed senses but it had an astonishing effect on his physique for it sobered him off in a short time and in so effective a manner that he was able to walk home unassisted.

This mode of treatment is recommended in all cases of similar disease.

Temperance Entertainment.

The Loyal Temperance Legion gave an entertainment in Temperance hall, East Weymouth, last Friday evening, consisting of organ solos, recitations, songs and readings. The following was the talent:

Ada White, Wendell McFawn, Alma Ford, Minnie Pfefferkorn, Lizzie Deere, Mattie Baker, Harold Burrell, Emma French, Jennie Burrell, Mabel Burbanks, Gertie Litchfield, Frank Deere, Vida Dailey Ella Pratt, Chester Madan, Charlie Gumb Edie Burrell, Harry Tower, Lillie Fearing, Helen Dunbar, Amy Madan, Ella Tower.

The drama, "Where Ignorance is Bliss," was given by Clara H. Gardner, Ruth E. Gumb and Ella W. Pratt.

Disgraceful.

It has been the custom for a small body of Union Holiness believers to hold weekly prayer meetings at the residence of Mr. George Buker on Commercial street, East Braintree. Tuesday evening last while a meeting was being held the house was stoned by a gang of roughs, the blinds and doors broken, and other damage done. Mr. Buker went out to remonstrate when he was attacked by them and was struck in the head with a stone inflicting a bad wound, and also kicked and beaten. There were about 40 in the crowd and warrants were issued Wednesday morning for the arrest of the leaders.

Another Veteran Gone.

James Kearney, a native of Boston but for the past eight years a resident of East Weymouth, died last Sunday at noon. Mr. Kearney saw active service in the 16th Mass. Regiment. He was buried from his late home on Pleasant street Tuesday afternoon. The remains were followed to their last resting place by members of the G. A. R., escorted by the James L. Bates S. of V. and the drum corps.

Kingman Reunion.

The Kingman family will hold its reunion July 8 as per vote of the association at its last meeting. A meeting was held at Hotel Belmont, Brockton, on Wednesday evening last to make arrangements for the event.

MR. BELLAMY ASKS WEYMOUTH A QUESTION.

He Bases an Article in the New Nation upon the Argument made by Nathaniel Blanchard of Weymouth, in 1875, Before the Massachusetts Legislature Urging the State to Buy the Boston & Albany Railroad.

Probably the citizens of Weymouth have forgotten that in 1875 this good old town, in conjunction with Natick and several other Massachusetts towns, passed resolutions asking the State to buy the Boston & Albany Railroad, and the late Nathaniel Blanchard, well known to all the old residents (whose son is now one of the editors of this paper) advocated the bill before the legislature.

Now that there is so much talk about Nationalism, this pioneer attempt in the direction of State railroads is of great interest to Nationalists, and what the New Nation says about it will be doubly interesting to those Weymouthites who were associated with Mr. Blanchard in securing the passage of those resolves.

We copy the article as printed in the New Nation of May 23d:

"SHALL THE STATE BUY THE BOSTON & ALBANY.

DO WEYMOUTH AND NATICK STILL THINK SO?

A CHAPTER OF RECENT HISTORY.—AN IDEA THAT MIGHT PROFITABLY BE REVIVED.

"We print an account of the attempt made by Weymouth, Natick and other Massachusetts towns, in 1875, to induce the legislature to purchase the Boston & Albany Railroad and run it for the people's benefit. It is an interesting chapter in history, and very suggestive. Are the people of Weymouth and Natick still of the same opinion as to the desirability of a State railroad? If so, they will find a great many more people ready to back them up than there were in 1875.

"The New Nation expects to see the public management and ownership of the railroads brought about by the action of the national government rather than by state action, and of course, however the change might be initiated, it could only find logical completion in a strictly national system. Nevertheless, as tending in the right direction, all propositions or experiments in the way of state control or ownership of railroads lines are to be commended to public consideration.

"It will probably surprise Nationalists to know that sixteen years ago, long before they were heard of, the Massachusetts towns of Weymouth, Natick and several others united in petitions to the legislature of this State to purchase the Boston & Albany Railroad and run it as a state business for the benefit of the people. The late Nathaniel Blanchard, of Weymouth, advocated the bill before the legislature, and his argument has gained force since. We quote some extracts from it:

"The Boston & Worcester and Western Railroads, now consolidated into the Boston & Albany, were chartered more than forty years ago, and were authorized to take the lands and the homesteads of the people living upon the route, without their consent, for the public good.

"The State subscribed for one million dollars of stock in the Western Railroad, and loaned that corporation four million dollars at five per cent. interest; and the private shareholders, who furnished but two millions of the eight million dollars required to build said railroad, contracted to sell to the state at any time for the cost and seven per cent interest thereon.

"We ask you to purchase this railroad because in no other way can the people secure cheap transportation for many years.

"We ask you to purchase this railroad, and allow the people to prove by actual experiment that they possess the honesty and the ability required to run a railroad in their own interest. Should they, after a short trial, become discouraged, we feel confident the property can be sold at a profit of fully fifteen million dollars.

"We ask you to buy this railroad and save the people of this state from annually paying the present owners, in dividends and taxes, two million four hundred thousand dollars, when the state can procure the money required to pay for said railroad for less than one million one hundred thousand dollars per annum. We take pleasure in referring you to the Erie Canal, which, besides saving to the people of New York and New England for fifty years an average of ten cents per bushel upon the cost of their grain and flour, has, according to the official report of the comptroller, paid from its tolls all the cost, including interest, repairs and attendance, and has had surplus earnings of about forty million dollars.

"We know that some persons object to state ownership of railroads, and think the state should perform for the people only these things which individuals cannot perform; but the people are gradually learning that their national, state, county, city and town organizations can do many things to much better advantage than they can perform them individually. We mention public mails, public schools, public waterworks, and public highways and bridges. This railroad is only an improved highway, and, in our opinion, is as proper a subject of public ownership as any of the turnpikes and bridges which have, during the last thirty years, passed from private to public ownership."

"The figures and estimates of Mr. Blanchard are, of course, not good for today, 16 years having modified the situation, but the figures which would have to be substituted would, without doubt, be still stronger in favor of state ownership than these which he gives. The advantages to individuals and to business of all kinds from the cheapness of transportation which would result from a railroad run for use and not for profit, are as much greater now than 16 years ago, as the population and business are greater.

"The bill for the purchase of the Boston & Albany, provided for its management by a state board of trustees to be appointed by the governor and council, and not to belong to the same political party. It was provided that the rates for transportation should be the lowest possible, consistent with the payment of the road's expenses."

Serious Accident.

A three year old Italian child, son of Giatano Peccararro, residing on Grove street, while hanging on to a provision wagon Tuesday, fell under the wheel which passed over his face and head. The child was so seriously hurt that its recovery is doubtful. Dr. Chase is in attendance. No blame attaches to the driver.

Happy Hoosiers.

Wm. Timmons, postmaster of Idaville, Ind. writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: "Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50 cents a bottle at A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Railroad at Canajoharie, N. Y.

An Interesting Letter.

DENVER, COLO., May 16, 1891.

It is some time since my last letter was published in the Gazette, and perhaps something descriptive of the "Queen City of the Plains" may prove of interest to eastern readers.

To the tourist who comes here for the first time, and especially if he comes from the east, there are many surprises in store. I find that most people (and I was one of the number), had an idea that Denver was in or near the foot-hills of the Rockies, instead of being some sixty miles distant from the range right out in the prairies.

The city takes its name from one of the earliest pioneers who long years ago used to trap and hunt game in this vicinity, keeping a sharp look out meanwhile for the bands of murdering Redskins who swarmed all through the then territory of Colorado, disputing, together with the immense herds of Buffalo, the encroachments of the white man; but the white man triumphed and the dusty desert now blossoms as the rose.

Colorado was admitted to the Union as a State in 1876, and is known as the Centennial State. There was considerable rivalry and discussion between Central City (which is much nearer the mountains and gold and silver mines) and Denver, as to which place should become the capital of the new state, Denver finally receiving the honor.

Within the past decade the city has grown marvelously from a mining camp of a few cabins and frame dwellings to a large and prosperous city of one hundred and thirty thousand people, stretching out in every direction. Magnificent six, seven and eight story brick and stone business blocks, which would reflect credit upon Chicago, New York or Boston have been erected within the past two years.

The new capitol building of gray granite now in process of construction on Capitol Hill, the corner-stone of which was laid the fourth of last July, will be a thing of beauty, and I might almost add, a joy forever, as its solid foundations look as if they would outlast old Time itself. I might mention dozens of other massive blocks, also elegant residences of brick and stone, and still others being erected.

The business most represented is that of real estate, there being over five hundred "Dealers in Dirt," and those who came here years ago when land was cheap are millionaires today.

One cannot but admire the pluck, energy and general "get-up-and-get-ativeness" displayed, albeit there have been some serious mistakes made, such as allowing a city to reach such vast proportions, wealth, etc., minus paved streets and proper sewerage. The frightful dust storms are a result of the former, while the latter is responsible for much of the sickness which prevailed last winter—typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria and sore throats claiming numerous victims. The people have been in such haste to get rich that they have neglected sanitary precautions outrageously, and depended altogether too much upon the reputation of the climate and pure air. They now see the folly of it, and steps are being taken to pave the streets and to establish adequate sewerage.

I was much surprised to find how cold it gets here. We had a number of severe snow storms and very cold weather, the last storm nearly equaling the blizzard of 1888. The hot sun soon melts the snow, however, and then the streets become perfect seas of mud and rubber boots are necessary to ford the crossings. Then the small boy is happy, he can stand on the sidewalk and jeer and gibe at the unhappy teamsters, who dispense freely a choice assortment of profanity as their poor beasts struggle and flounder through the mud.

However, the new arrivals took heart of grace when it was announced on all sides that the winter of 1890-'91 was the most severe since 1878.

The climate, which to me seems to have been much overrated, does not suit every one. In winter very cold mornings and nights are the rule. While it is quite mild in the middle of the day, one takes cold very easily, although colds are not as severe as at the East.

Denver is a mile above sea level, and new comers find at first a difficulty in breathing in this dry, rarefied atmosphere which contains such a small percentage of oxygen. Two things, however, are unsurpassed, the bright, glorious sunshine which is almost perpetual, and the naturally pure, clear air.

The city is supplied with the finest street railway system in the United States, consisting of cable, electric and horse cars and the question of rapid transit appears to have been satisfactorily solved.

Society is somewhat mixed. Many who are wealthy today were penniless ten or twelve years ago when Denver was a pretty tough mining camp and every man carried a gun. Some made their "pile" in mining, some in real estate, and some in—well, perhaps the least said the better about some of the methods employed.

What a change has taken place. Now scores of churches abound all over the city and testify to the onward march of progress and civilization of this nineteenth century.

The curio shops are well patronized, especially by our eastern friends. There are articles to please all tastes and purses. Minerals of all kinds, Indian arrow-heads, beads, moccasins, blankets, idols, neckties made from the skins of rattlesnakes with the rattles on the tale, which are worn by the cowboys, etc., up to magnificent mounted buffalo heads. These, however, cost five hundred dollars each as the buffalo is now almost extinct. Less than one hundred remain and most of those belong to the government. What a pity that they were so recklessly slaughtered for their hides some ten years back on the plains.

He has been, he has gone, and we have seen him. Seen who? Why the President to be sure, the head of the greatest, grandest and best nation which the world has ever seen. Denver is nothing if not patriotic. The inhabitants turned out en masse to do him honor, business blocks and private residences were handsomely decorated, and amid streaming banners, waving flags, inspiring music, and cheers from thousands of throats he received a right royal welcome.

The day was perfect, not a cloud to be seen. The recent rains had laid the prairie dust, and the clear, pure air, the young, tender green of the trees in their earliest spring costume, with the purple blue of the distant Rockies for a back-ground, made an ideal picture.

One of the features of the day was the organ recital in honor of Mrs. Harrison and the ladies of the party at Trinity Methodist church, a beautiful structure justly the pride of the city. The organ is not excelled on this continent. The church was decorated with the stars and stripes, seats in the gallery being reserved for the distinguished guests. Upon their appearance the vast audience arose and greeted them with waving of handkerchiefs. Mrs. Harrison gracefully bowed and smiled her acknowledgments.

After the exercises at the church were concluded, the guests were driven to the new and elegant Hotel Metropole where an elaborate lunch was served. At 6 o'clock the special train bore them away to Omaha, and thus ended a day that will long be remembered by the citizens of the "Queen City of the Plains."

It is seldom that Denver or any other city can boast of having two superlative attractions at one and the same time. Attraction number one, the Presidential party, the other attraction(?) being that huge bundle of bone, muscle, bad whiskey and illiteracy which answers to the name of John L. Sullivan. "Boston's Pet!" indeed!!

We all admire a magnificent physique and physical strength when it is employed in a manly direction, but when one endowed with those qualities considers his highest aim to see how near he can come to maiming another for life, just barely escaping killing that other, he deserves the contempt of all intelligent and law-abiding people.

Mr. Sullivan is playing a week's engagement at the Broadway Theatre, and looks as if he would be about as graceful and as much at home on the stage posing as a gentleman as a rhinoceros would be capering about a flower-garden or a bric-a-brac shop.

ADELAIDE B. FABEL.

Rev. Daniel Evans Installed.

Tuesday was a red letter day to the Congregational Church at East Weymouth, it being the day for the ordination and installation of Rev. Daniel Evans as pastor of that church.

The members of the council called for the purpose of conducting the services, were cheered as they entered the church by a beautiful floral display, which was the result of a large amount of work by the committee having the matter in charge.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. W. H. Bolster of South Weymouth, and Rev. W. DeWitt Hyde, D.D. of Bowdoin College, Me., was elected moderator, and Rev. A. H. Wheeler of Hingham, scribe.

Seventeen out of twenty-five of the delegates which had been called, being present, the organization was completed and proceeded to the business in question. First of which was the reading of a paper by the pastor elect, which set forth the faith and belief on which he was to stand or fall before the council.

At two years of age, the candidate was one of a family of three children who were left with a widowed mother to fight life's battle. At seven years of age, poverty drove him to work at the breakers in the coal mines of Pennsylvania. At sixteen years, he was an active teacher in the Sunday-school, and felt a call to enter the ministry.

It is hardly the province of this report to enter into the creed and belief as set forth in the balance of the paper. It had enough of thought and suggestion in it to bring out many questions from the delegates present, in answering which the candidate in his ready and logical answers showed an amount of mind rarely found in one so young.

The work of the council being completed at a little after 6 o'clock, they with invited guests and friends to the number of about seventy-five, were invited to the room below, where a most excellent supper had been prepared, which all enjoyed. In fact too much cannot be said of the beautifully arranged tables and the choice viands with which they were loaded.

The ordaining and installing services were conducted in the evening, and were witnessed by a full house. The opening number of the exercises was an organ prelude by R. F. Raymond, organist of the church; the singing was in charge of T. H. Emerson, the new chorister, the first selection being an anthem, "Lord God Almighty, Heavenly Father," which was followed by reading of the minutes of the council and invocation by Rev. D. W. Waldron of Boston; Rev. A. A. Kidder of the M. E. Church followed with Scripture, which in turn was followed by a selection from the choir "I waited for the Lord;" Rev. W. DeWitt Hyde, D.D., delivered the sermon, taking as his text, Matt. x. 40. "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth Him that sent me." The sermon will long be remembered by those who listened to it as one full of grand thoughts and lofty ideals. A very impressive ordaining and installing prayer was made by the Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy; the charge to the pastor was by Prof. Geo. Harris of Andover, and contained much sound advice and useful suggestion; Rev. W. D. Leland of North Weymouth welcomed the new pastor to his new association, and extended to him the right hand of fellowship; charge to the people was by the Rev. W. H. Bolster of South Weymouth, and seemed to cover all a people ought to be and do; the choir next gave a very fine selection which was followed by the closing prayer by Rev. A. H. Wheelock of Hingham, and the very interesting and impressive service closed with the doxology and benediction by the pastor.

Grand Army at the "Old Ship."

There was a grand celebration in honor of the dead soldiers of the nation, in the Old Church at Hingham, last Sunday evening. The celebration was under the auspices of the Edwin Humphrey Post of the G. A. R. of Hingham, and the orator for the occasion was Rev. John L. Lindsay, D. D., rector of St. Pauls Church, Boston.

The Old Church, which is sometimes spoken of as the "Old Ship," was crowded, both on the floor and in the galleries, and every available point of standing room was also occupied. Seats were reserved in the centre for the Grand Army, which were soon filled by members of that order in uniform, from Hingham and East Weymouth.

The service was opened by a male chorus which sang some excellent and appropriate music during the evening. After prayer by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Day, and reading of the Scripture by Rev. William Hyde, of Weymouth, Hon. John D. Long, in most fitting remarks, introduced the speaker, Rev. Dr. Lindsay, who spoke in the most thrilling way of the "Characteristics of the American Soldier."

Dr. Lindsay, when a youth in his native state, Virginia, had enlisted in the Confederate Army at the breaking out of the war, and served all through it under Gen. Robert E. Lee. His heart was therefore in the theme which he had chosen, and for nearly an hour he kept the vast audience most intensely interested as he dealt with the courage, fortitude, generosity and self-sacrifice of the soldiers on both sides in the great struggle. The audience was filled with enthusiasm as he spoke, and he drew tears from many eyes as he described some affecting scenes, in illustration of his subject, which had come under his own observation in the very front of the battle or after the contest was over.

It was the general opinion of those present, that the address was one of the grandest and most affecting they had ever listened to, and the aisles were completely blocked for some time after the close, with Grand Army men, and ladies and gentlemen, who were crowding up to the platform to shake hands and exchange a few words with the distinguished speaker.

Obituary.

Mrs. James H. Vining a respected member of East Weymouth society, died on Friday, May 22.

Mrs. Vining was a daughter of Nathaniel and Harriet Porter Richards. She passed away after a long and painful illness, in the sixty-fifth year of her age. She leaves a husband, with whom she had spent forty seven years of happy married life, and two children, a son and daughter.

For twenty seven years she had been a member of the Congregational church and always took a deep interest in its welfare.

Funeral services were held at her late residence, Sunday afternoon, Rev. Daniel Evans, officiating. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Hayden quartette, W. H. Pratt substituting for M. P. Garey.

The remains were interred in the family lot at the East Weymouth Cemetery.

Old Colony R. R. Notes.

The Old Colony is introducing, as an improvement, the automatic whistle to take the place of the bell cord and gong. The road is also introducing new rules and regulations governing the uniforms of the officials, specifying the place where the suits shall be bought, the grade of the goods and the price paid. If the men can obtain the same elsewhere for a less sum, the difference will be allowed them by the Company. The desire is to have all uniforms exactly alike.

Good Authority.

"The local paper," says Whitelaw Reid, "is the best paper in the world. All the city papers cannot supply the place of the home paper. Everybody reads it, and this is why the local paper is the best in the world, and the best advertising medium for its circulation, extant."

Beyond Town Limits.

—The Honest Dollar is the name of a new paper that is announced to appear simultaneously in Boston, Chicago and Atlanta. It is devoted to opposition to the free coinage of silver.

—Rockland is to have a new and handsome block, to cost $65,000. It will cover about 117x86 feet on the ground, be three stories high, built of brick with granite trimmings. It will contain four large stores and the Savings Bank and National Bank on the first floor; on the second floor a row of offices and the opera room to seat 1,000 people; on the third floor the banquet hall, lodge rooms, etc. It will be built by the Rockland Savings Bank.

—The Newton Journal says it is a fact that strong efforts are being made in certain localities to abolish the old custom of reading notices from the pulpit. This would be a salutary innovation for Newton pastors to make. The custom was established long before the days of printing and of newspapers, and bears the same relation in church matters as did the town crier to public affairs. "The pulpit notice nuisance" is what it is called by the Christian Union. The change would be a most agreeable one and all who try it would be loth indeed to have a return to the old and much abused custom which weekly transforms the pulpits of so many churches into free advertising bureaus and places a disagreeable responsibility upon a clergyman which has no business to rest there.

—Hingham's fire department has been furnished with a Bangor extension ladder and the firemen are glad.

—Postmaster Hollywood of Brockton is the recipient of the following letter, which is self-explanatory:

HALE, OREGON, April 26, 1891.

Postmaster, Sir—If you will be so kind to send me some names of your women i would like to corrispond with good & respectful women that would like a good hom in the West. I have a Farm, horses, cattle, fruit and henes, hous well ferneshed. I live on the country road leding to Tidewater and a grate many stop with me for meals and sta all night. I need a good hous wife, that plain talk.

I want a lady bout 35 or 40 years old, weigh 150, helthy, a women of good carrector. I don't like Oregon women; tha are not raised to worke. Now friend if you will pick me out a good one that is of good disposition and have her send to me her photograf and help me to gain her i will mak you a nice preasant i want a woman that had not been mared. Rite soon.

Respectful yours, ——.

—A beautiful 15-mile drive is now open along the South Shore. Jerusalem road extension in Cohasset, the building of which has been a bone of contention for several years, is now a thing of reality and apparently "a joy forever." The road is practically completed, and affords one of the longest and most beautiful shore drives to be found in the country. The opening of this new section of roadway gives an unbroken shore road from Windmill point, near Hotel Pemberton in Hull, to North Scituate beach, a distance of fully 15 miles; and during this entire distance there is not a single stretch of road of over 100 feet in length from which the waters of old Massachusetts Bay cannot be plainly seen.

—The endowment orders, so-called, have run upon a rock. No city in the country was so thoroughly worked as Philadelphia, and when the crash came no less than fifteen of these wildcat schemes went to pieces. If the promoters of these high-sounding orders could have been run through the judicial sieve the work would have been complete.

—The Endicott pear tree at Peabody which is two hundred and sixty-three years old, while quite dilapidated is in good blossom this year and promises one more crop.

—Twenty miles of wire are to be added to Cohassett's Electric lighting system.

—A horse railroad will soon be in operation from the boat landing at Nantasket to a point on the Black Rock House, via Atlantic hill and Stony Beach.

—Gilman B. DuBois of Boston, and J. White Belcher of Randolph, have given bonds for $400,000 as executors of the will of the late Royal Turner.

—Franklin people say that whether they are in Geo. Fred Williams' district or not, they are going to have all the blessings there are to be had, including high taxes.

—Gen. Corse gave a lecture to the G.A.R. of Canton last week, on the battle of Altoona.

—The Granite Railway Company of Quincy are completing a solid flight of stone steps for the public library at Jamestown, N. Y. The steps are being cut from a block of which in the rough weighed twenty tons.

—Wollaston has a vigilance committee which proposes to stop rowdyism and vandalism, such as the stoning of store and church windows, which is quite prevalent in that ward of Quincy.

—Matilda Lorendo, a domestic employed in a family at Quincy owns an experience purchased by lighting a fire with kerosene. She will not be as handsome as before but she will know more.

Where, Oh, Where?

From what we consider good authority, we are led to believe that a cocking main was held in Hingham last Sunday lasting nearly all day. A large party gathered from Weymouth, Quincy, Braintree and other towns. Eight battles were fought and large amounts of money were staked on some of them. Where were the officers?

Memorial Day.

Tomorrow is set apart as a holiday in honor of the nation's soldier dead. To the Grand Army of the Republic it is a consecrated day, a day of hallowed memories and sacred thoughts. The constantly lessening remainder of that gallant host who fought for the preservation of our country, will gather by the graves of their dead comrades and lovingly place there tributes of flowers. To them and to other friends of the loved ones, who lie beneath the sod, it is a day of sadness and of mournful memories.

To the general public, on the contrary, Memorial Day is looked forward to with the joyful anticipations attending the first holiday of the outing season. Yachtsmen have their first great regatta, bicyclists take their first club trip, tennis players win or lose their first tournaments, and base ball clubs, gun clubs, and private individuals in general hail this day as the grand opening of the sporting season.

Thus Memorial Day is a vivid illustration of life itself; sorrow and joy side by side.

A Pertinent Question.

Have you paid your subscription to the Gazette? This is a matter in which you can greatly oblige the publishers by being prompt. We have been very lenient thus far and have not yet enforced our rule of charging $2.50 instead of $2.00 for subscriptions not paid within 30 days of date of expiration. We wished to give everyone all possible opportunity to become informed in regard to this rule, that they could not plead want of knowledge as excuse for delay. We shall however enforce it strictly and shall expect delinquent subscribers to pay the $2.50. The terms, "$2.00 in advance" mean "in advance," and nothing else, and "in advance" means, according to our rule, in 30 days from date of the expiration of subscription. We propose to notify every subscriber when his subscription is due, and then, hereafter, if not paid within the thirty days, the price will be $2.50 for that year.

This rule will, from this time, be strictly adhered to without favoritism or exception.

The expense and trouble of collecting overdue subscriptions requires this extra charge. Many papers stop sending at the expiration of the time paid for unless previously renewed. This method, we regard as rather severe and do not wish to adopt it unless compelled to, but we cannot carry subscriptions on our books for an indefinite time unpaid. We hope the above plan will make the inducement to pay in advance so strong, that we shall have to collect only in rare cases.

We will allow thirty days from June 1st for all overdue subscriptions to be paid, and during this time will accept $2.00. After that time the rule will be strictly enforced.

What They Shall Wear?

There are but a few weeks now to graduation day and the question that is probably agitating the otherwise intellectually inclined minds of the graduating classes of our High schools is,—What are you, or we, going to wear?

This question does not concern the hundreds of people who will sit for two hours or more while the graduating exercises are going on, but to the young ladies who will be on the platforms waiting for the rolls of parchment that certify to a successful completion of the "High School course," it is all-important.

What are you going to wear? If not too late and the final arrangements are not already made, the goods bought and the dressmakers engaged, let us suggest to the classes about to graduate that they summon the courage to break over the custom of making this occasion a dress parade, and establish a precedent for a new and sensible order of things by going on record as the classes which, while up to their predecessors in scholarship, were far ahead of all of them in recognizing the fact that it should not be made beyond the means of any poor girl to take a High School course because of the expense of graduating.

There are times and places when it is, perhaps, a duty to dress as prettily and becomingly as the state of the purse will afford, but in preparing for the crowning event of a long public school course, it should be borne in mind that many a poor man has all along denied himself and family that his daughter might receive a good education, and it is an unkindness and an injustice to unnecessarily increase this burden by an expensive graduating outfit.

Business Change.

William E. Cunningham of Boston has purchased Warner P. Dailey's interest in the Weymouth and East Braintree newspaper and periodical business. Mr. Cunningham is a young man of exceptional ability and comes to the position highly recommended.

Murdered.

The body of Julius Baer was found by freighters five miles west of here Tuesday morning, in a terribly mangled condition. His head and face were smashed, so as to be hardly recognized, and numerous wounds were found on his body. Mr. Baer was agent for the great blood medicine, Sulphur Bitters. Robbery was undoubtedly the motive, as he was well known to have a large sum of money on his person. As we go to press there is no clew to the perpetrators.—Colorado Press.

Twenty-fifth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage with a reception, entertainment and collation at Temple of Honor hall, East Weymouth, Thursday evening. The guests were escorted into the reception room by the ushers George H. Bearce Willard J. Dunbar, Frank R. Lovell, Charles H. Bearce. After the reception of the guests the following programme was carried out: Prayer, Rev. A. A. Kidder; duet, Misses Ada and Sadie White; original poem composed and read by Mrs. S. Louise Barton of Boston, as follows:

Poem dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond on their twenty-fifth wedding day, by Mrs. S. Louise Barton.

Twenty and five quick fleeting years have passed away
Since side by side upon that happy day,
You gave your hands where hearts had long been given,
And by your mutual trust made earth like heaven.

The days were not all sunshine, not all filled with joy;
You found Life's purest gold mixed with alloy,
Sorrow and care oftimes became your guest,
But cheered by Love your home was ever blest.

The happy years rolled by, but to your arms
No children came to bring an added charm
Into your lives and give you added cares,
Patiently borne for love of treasures rare.

So as the weeks and months passed one by one,
You looked about and helped "Christ's little ones;"
Giving your time, your talents and your love
To lead the children toward the "home above."

To teach them temperance, that they may abstain
From that which causes sorrow, sin and pain;
Pledge their young lives to never touch or taste,
Or others give that can intoxicate.

Nor has your labor all been spent in vain,
For many bless your deeds; and yet again
In the glad future shall arise to bless
Their guide in paths of peace and righteousness.

We give you loving greeting, many friends are here
With loyal hearts to whom you are most dear;
Whose earnest prayers shall ever more ascend,
That you may prospered be till life shall end.

Accordeon solo, Prof. James H. Morris; vocal duet, Misses Fannie and Ella Sutton; piano solo, Miss May Poole; reading Miss Nella R. Hayden; piano solo, Arthur M. Raymond; song, Dr. Joseph Chase, Jr.; harmonica solo, Arthur M. Welch; banjo duet, Mr. and Mrs. John Miller; reading, Mrs. S. Louise Barton; march, Miss Ada Burrell.

At the close of the entertainment the guests proceeded to the spacious banquet hall where a collation of ices, fruits, cake, coffee, etc., was served under the direction of Caterer Alvah Raymond by the following: Mrs. W. W. Hayden, Mrs. Caroline Lovell, Mrs. Mary Reamey, Mrs. Hiram Porter, Mrs. N. W. Gardner, W. M. Reamey Frank Holmes, Charles Cram, Frank Burrell. The rest of the evening was spent in a social manner. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond received a large number of handsome and valuable presents, the most notable of which were an elegant banquet lamp and table from the Womans' Christian Temperance Union; a plush chair from near friends and neighbors, and a French clock from Hingham Reform Club.

Weymouth Gun Club.

The Gun Club held another very successful shoot at their range last Saturday afternoon. A large number of riflemen were present and some fine shooting was done. In the clay pigeon contest on percentage of birds shot C. F. White was first, A. H. White 2d, Worthen 3d, Nash 4th, Patridge 5, Farrar 6th, Whitmarsh 7th, Holt 8th, J. B. White 9th. The score:

10 Birds—C. F. White 1st, Patridge, Nash 2d, Farrar 3d, Whitmarsh 4th, J. B. White 5th.

Shurtleff--Lovell.

There was a very brilliant wedding at the residence of Col. B. S. Lovell, Wednesday evening. The occasion being the marriage of Miss Lillian F. Lovell, niece of the host to Mr. Frank Shurtleff. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Daniel Evans, Miss L. Charlotte Lovell acting as bridesmaid, and Bertram N. Rice best man. Henry L. Lovell and Harry L. Lovell, uncle and brother respectively of the bride, acted as ushers. The wedding supper was by Caterer Cook of Boston, and was enjoyed by about forty of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The floral displays were very fine, and Lohengrin's wedding march and other music was rendered by Robert F. Raymond.

Shooting Affair.

A shooting affray took place on Liberty street, East Braintree, last evening. When Thomas Dalton, a hard working citizen, went home to supper he found a gang of hoodlums in the house. They have been hanging around his place for some days sleeping in the woods at night. He remonstrated and asked them to leave, when one of the gang hit him in the head with a sugar bowl. They then kicked and beat him. On freeing himself, he got his gun and fired after them hitting one of the gang, John Ryan, alias "Barber" in the foot. Dalton gave himself up to officer Robert Loring.

An Industry Which Keeps Two Forces at Work All the Time.

Passengers on the Ghost train which whizzes through Worcester in the small hours of the morning have noticed of late a factory which never seems to close, and from whose windows the bright light streams all night long. It is the factory of the John P. Lovell Arms Company, and it is running literally 24 hours a day, with two complete relays of men from the foreman down. This activity is due to the extraordinary popularity of the new $85 Lovell diamond safety bicycle, a machine which will figure largely in all the Memorial Day meets.

Orcutt Family Reunion.

The descendants of Moses Orcutt one of the early pioneers of the town, will hold their annual reunion at the Park, South Weymouth, Saturday, July 18. A committee of fourteen one from each branch of the family has been appointed as a committee of arrangements. Dinner will be served at 12 o,clock. James M. Orcutt of South Weymouth is treasurer of the committee.

Went Cheap.

The Ferry Point property after some bidding, was sold yesterday to Dr. J. F. Welch of Quincy for $1,950.

GAZETTE CHATTER.

"In the Hereafter, Angels."

Some old student, grim and hoary.
(I can see him in my mind)
Wondrous wise in Biblic story.
Claims another truth to find.

This old plodder means no libel,
But he time and time again,
Finds the angels of the Bible
Always spoken of as men.

* * * * * * *

Heaven would suit my nature illy
If, sage, what you say is true.
I prefer to be with Milly
Than with angels such as you.

THE CHATTERER.

G. A. R. Services at South Weymouth.

The memorial service was held this year in the Second church, South Weymouth, which had been handsomely decorated with flags and flowers. The order of the services was as follows:—

Voluntary, "America"; invocation; "Star Spangled Banner," solo by Miss Etta Joy, and choir in chorus; reading of poem; singing, "The Flag they loved so well"; duet by Mrs. Joseph Dyer and Miss Mary Dyer, with choir in chorus; scripture selections; song by choir, "O comrades, silent now"; prayer; singing, "Stand up for Jesus"; sermon; prayer; singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers"; benediction.

The address to the G. A. R. and S. of V's. by the pastor, Rev. Henry Clay Alvord, was an eloquent one and received the hearty commendation of the comrades of post 58 and camp 36.

A summary of the sermon, which was unwritten, follows:

Isa. lv, 4.—"Behold, I have given him for a leader and commander to the people."

We meet, Veterans of the Grand Army, Sons of Veterans, friends all, for these memorial services in a time of profound national peace. The reality of war has given place to the memory of war. God grant that civil war may henceforth be for us only a memory.

That war had a result. It brought victory, and all that victory meant. The classic warriors represented the image of victory as without wings, to express their belief that she would not fly to their enemies. We humbly hope that wingless victory will abide with us. For this result, let us be thankful. We would, this hour, abate jot nor tittle of gratitude, first of all, to Him who gave us victory; and then, to those, by whose valor and suffering, the victory came.

But it was won at fearful cost. We do not now keenly feel the financial price we paid, but that higher cost in separations, in sacrifices, in hardships, in starvations, in deaths, we have not forgotten. With loving remembrance, then, of those who fell, as we deck their graves with flowers and with grateful appreciation of all who served and dared we keep our memorial time.

And what use of flowers so noble? Beyond the adornment of the marriage hour, or the decoration for a president's holiday journey. And what so appropriate time of the year for such memorial as this, when we are just turning from the flowers of May to the blossoms of June?

But I look as well into the faces of young men. The veterans are growing gray, their ranks are thinning, the sons are to take their places. But the veterans were young when they went forth—in average age but 22 years. Our country owes much to the patriotism of young men. Nathan Hale, on whose birthplace in the distance, my eyes often looked in boyhood, gave much to her country by his death at 21, and Connecticut has honored his memory by a bronze statue in her capitol, on which is inscribed his words, "I only regret I have but one life to lose for my country."

Let past heroism lead you to be loyal and true to national welfare. You bear an honored name. Let it be an abiding inspiration. "I love to believe," said Garfield, "that no heroic sacrifice is ever lost; that the characters of men are moulded and inspired by what their fathers have done; that treasured up in American souls are all the unconscious influences of the great deeds of the Anglo Saxon race from Agincourt to Bunker Hill. It was such an influence that led a young Greek 2000 years ago, when musing on the battle of Marathon to exclaim, "The trophies of Miltiades will not let me sleep!" When allured to listless indifference to national perils, may you exclaim. "The trophies of our sires will not let us sleep."

Yes, war had a result: the sacrifice was not in vain. Great issues were at stake, but both sides were not equally right. No one may justly ask us to forgot that one side was right, and the other was wrong, and the right triumphed. And as such conflict between right and wrong, it was not an isolated experience, but a section of life. Let me then reverse what I said, and remind you that the memory of war is leading us this hour to the ever-continuing reality of war. Phillips Brooks, in addressing children one Memorial Day, said, "The war that your fathers and brothers were engaged in was an eternal war, it was a war for what was right. And as long as there is a right and a wrong in the world that war will be going on. . . . There is no child anywhere who will not find somewhere in his life a right thing and a wrong thing, fighting together, and it is his place to go into that war and fight forever."

Life, then, is warfare, and it has its issues, its adversaries, its contests, its weapons, its heroes and its cowards, its defeats and its victories.

Of a single element I desire to speak as suggested by my text, "Leadership in Life's Welfare." "Behold, I have given him for a leader and commander to the people." It is the voice of God, to whom we do well to listen, declaring to men his unspeakable gift of a leader.

The need of leadership. You know it as we do not. The fidelity and endeavor of the private is often under-rated, while the glory of the success is attached to the leader. Still you recognize at the full the need of efficient leadership. What means the dead Sherman's funeral honors? The relation of his leadership to our triumph. So life needs a leader.

A leader's worth is not always recognized at first. Many a general came to his ultimate appreciation by his men only after long association, and then they would follow him anywhere. The brilliant Saul of Tarsus pursued the followers of Christ to prison and to death, but when he came to know this royal leader, he was ready to "count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge" of Christ, and cheerfully meet death himself.

Prepared by suffering. The strong leaders of war had been prepared by the previous discipline of the Mexican war, and the earlier battles. So "the Captain of their Salvation" was made "perfect through sufferings." By the way of the cross was the way of light.

He directs the battle—Sherman plans out beforehand the whole campaign through Georgia and the Carolinas. Farragut, lashed to the mast, directs the fiery contest, "Higher, a little higher, the elevation of your guns!" So God's leader directs the warfare as a whole and in its minutest parts.

He knows the needs of his soldiers. Edward, the Black Prince, a boy in his teens at Cressy, five centuries ago was set by his father, the king, to execute an important movement. Sore pressed, he sent for aid, but his father, desiring the son's honor, replied, "I am not so inexperienced a commander as not to know, when succor is needed, or so careless a father as not to send it." So He knoweth our need.

Appreciation. Gen. Thomas at the crisis of Chickamauga after a display of heroic courage by his men, grasped the hand of a soldier and thanked him for his devotion. The cup of cold water shall not lose Christ's appreciation ennobles the soldier. Garfield tells how that soldier stood silent a moment and then exclaimed, "George H. Thomas has taken this hand in his. I'll knock down any mean man who off rs to take it hereafter." Association with this royal leader, and his appreciation ennobles life and consecrates it.

Thorough knowledge. Thomas knew so well "the condition of his army and its equipment that when the hour of trial came, he knew how great a pressure it could stand, and how hard a blow it could strike." We are not led in ignorance but in wisdom.

Steadfastness. Thomas earned the title, "Rock of Chickamauga," "against which the wild waves of battle dashed in vain. It will forever stand written in the annals of his country that there he saved from destruction the army of the Cumberland." So Christ the Rock of Ages stands steadfast. He leads to a worthy conflict. That loved and lamented soldier of Massachusetts, Gen. Devens, riding into Richmond at its capture and meeting the crowds of colored people rejoicing in their freedom, turned to an officer, and with eyes filled with tears and voice stifled with emotion, said, "This is a great sight for us to behold—the deliverance of a race!" Think of the redemption of man from earth's bondage to heaven's freedom which God's leadership secures.

And, all the way, he sees the relation of present struggle and trial to the ultimate triumph. War is not play; but hardship, sacrifice and loss.

But by that path and that alone comes the blessing desired. Among the battleflags, torn and tattered, presiding over which in her capitol, Connecticut's great war governor, fitly named with our own Andrew, sits in heroic bronze, is one—that of the 16th—of suggestive memory. In the last moments before capture at Plymouth, Col. Burnham, as a last resort, ordered his men to tear it in shreds. That flag, thus dissevered in love, went in fragments to Andersonville and other southern prisons; and, after the war, when the veterans came from all over the state on the great Battle Flag Day to remove the old flags to the new Capitol, the fragments were reunited and on a gorgeous silk banner floated in glory over the heads of those veterans.

The warfare of life means some stern experience and even bereavements, but all in love in order to the glory thereby made possible to which he leads.

So then, the great quality in Christ's leadership is that he leads to victory. The brilliant uniform, the handsome face, the commanding figure is of little account if the general leads not to victory. So Washington, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, led to victory, and for that we honor them. This royal leader leads to victory. "And I saw heaven opened and beheld a white horse, and he that sat upon was called Faithful and True and on his head were many crowns, and he hath a name written—King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. And the armies which were in heaven, followed him on white horses, clothed in fine linen white and clean."

Such a leader is Christ. God grant that every one of us may be "a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

Improvement Association Supper.

Next Tuesday evening, the Weymouth Improvement Association will hold its first annual supper and entertainment, in Lincoln Hall, at 7.30 o'clock. Harvey Blunt, the popular caterer of Boston will furnish the supper. A good entertainment will be given. Yachting Notes.

Come, darling, come, for the morning is fair,
And sweet is the breath of the soft summer air.
The boat at the wharf is awaiting us, dear,
A fresh breeze is blowing, there's nothing to fear.
The white caps are chasing each other to-day
Like sheep in the emerald meadows at play.
Come, let us sail o'er the billowy sea,
Come, darling, come, and be seasick with me.
—Cape Cod Item.

—The Monatiquot Yacht club held a meeting last Saturday evening, and adopted a programme for Opening Day, to occur June 12. It will embrace a sail or race, refreshments, dancing, etc. It was voted that all Club Members and ladies be admitted free, but that male non-members be charged $1.00 each.

—A series of Cup or Trophy races are assured in addition to the regular regattas. Commodore Cavanagh, and Captains Sheppard and Linton have agreed to supply the trophies for the several classes. An interesting season is certain. The Club proposes to make the summer so full of life that many new members will join and the few that have resigned will regret having done so.

—A series of Hops is to be given every two weeks during June, July and August. These hops are to be free to members and their ladies, while all outsiders will be charged 75 cents admission. A membership in the Club will be worth something this year, and all who wish to enjoy these good times are invited to send in their names and a $5 bill.

—The great effort of the Club, will, however be reserved for Ladies' day, and this occasion will be made as enjoyable as money and work can make it.

—The Club has voted new locks on its door and gate and all members in good standing can procure a key at a small charge to cover the cost, probably 15 cents.

—Gate-keeper Murphy was voted an honorary member on the condition that he would "have an eye" to the premises and keep boys and others from doing damage.

—The Posy is in the water, and made her first trial trip Sunday last. She is a beauty with her gilded figure head and bright-finish deck. Commodore Hunt may well be proud of his favorite "posy."

Base Ball.

Last Saturday the Institutes were defeated by the Beacons of Hingham. The weight of the visiting club made them too strong for our boys. The score:

INSTITUTE BASE BALL GOSSIP.

Humphrey Healey has been secured by the Institutes to play right field. Healey is a fine fielder, fair batter and a hard-working player.

Jerry Gearin and Jack McCarty will alternate in the pitcher's box for the present.

Capt. Corridan will play his old position at third base on Saturday next. The boys are glad that Gene is coming back as the team needs a head in the field.

The club will appear in new belts and caps on Saturday next.

George Bagley has been released.

Fully 400 people witnessed the game Saturday last.

Will Coleran is doing some fine fielding.

Only neatly uniformed and gentlemanly clubs will be given dates by the management.

Come and hear Sullivan coach.

Many ladies were present on Saturday last. The club hopes to see more in the future.

Watch Gearin laying down the law to the visiting clubs. Jerry is quiet but deep.

As a backer-up Caneen is as near perfect as can be found.

Two games Saturday. Come and encourage the boys by your presence.

The Marions.

The Marion base ball club, under the management of C. H. Deslauries, will make its first appearance on Decoration Day on the Lake street grounds, East Weymouth. This club has been organized about four months and its members have worked hard to present a good appearance during the season. They have been thoroughly equipped by a well-known sporting establishment of Boston, and will appear in gray uniforms with black trimmings.

The Lake street grounds have been secured for the season. Two good games are promised for Saturday. At 9 a. m. they will play the Resolute Reserves (colored) of Boston, and at 3 p. m. the King Phillips of Rockland.

Following is the make-up of the club: Mitchell, c.; Lynch, p.; Sheehan, s. s.; Donahoe, 1b.; Crean, 2b.; P. Murphy, 3b.; Tobin, l. f.; J. Murphy, c. f.; F. Cullen, r. f.

Grand G. A. R. Souvenir Edition of The Boston Daily Globe.

An important notice is made to-day by The Boston Daily Globe, which will issue a grand G. A. R. souvenir edition on Saturday, May 29. It will include a history of more than 200 heroes for whom the posts of the G. A. R. in Massachusetts were named, showing the battles in which they engaged and recalling events, memories and reminiscences which will thrill all old soldiers and sailors' families. It will also interest and instruct all who have been born since the war. It will be a souvenir you will want to keep, and also one to mail to you relatives and friends. Order it in advance of your newsdealer.

Library Committee.

At the Library Committee meeting yesterday our outline plan of a brick building with free stone trimmings was submitted, said buildings to practically cover the lot.

The plan embraces a basement with stores, the first story for the library and a second story with hall. A detailed plan of this building with estimates of cost will be submitted at the next meetting.

Sudden Deaths.

Heart disease is by far the most frequent cause of sudden death, which in three out of four cases is unsuspected. The symptoms are not generally understood. These are: a habit of lying on the right side, short breath, pain or distress in side, back, or shoulder, irregular pulse, asthma, weak and hungry spells, wind in stomach, swelling of ankles or dropsy, oppression, dry cough, and smothering. Dr. Miles' illustrative book on Heart Disease, free at A. M. Bachelder & Co.'s, who sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, and his Restorative Nervine, which cures nervousness, headache, sleeplessness, effects of drinking, etc. It contains no opiates.

Resolutions.

At the regular meeting of the Aux. W. B. M. at Miss M. T. Blanchard's, North Weymouth, Wednesday afternoon, the following resolutions were passed and directed to be placed upon the records of the society:

WHEREAS, God in His Providence has taken from us our pastor's wife, Mrs. Palmer, whom we tenderly loved,

Resolved, That we thank Him for sparing to us a few years this beautiful life spent in His service; that we thank Him for the example of daily piety she furnished us, for her sweetness and brightness, for her gentleness and courage and love. That we thank Him for what she was to us in our meetings for foreign missions, that we have so precious memories of her zeal for His work, that we remember her cheerful loving prayers and ever-ready interest. That we cherish the memory of her spoken and her printed words. That we will remember her children in our prayers, and also the work of God to which her heart was given; that the sweet memories of her life and labors and the dear and holy spot where her body lies in our midst shall serve to quicken and deepen our affection for each other, our love to God, and our devotion to the work of saving the souls He sent His Son to redeem.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the Members of the Active Base Ball Club.

Gentlemen:—We wish to thank you all for the beautiful granite monument which you have placed at Willie's grave. We shall ever prize it and hold it sacred, not for its intrinsic value, but from the source from which it came, and the spirit in which it was given. We also take this time to thank all who directly or indirectly sent flowers at the day of Willie's funeral, but owing to the continued sickness in our family at that time, we neglected to do. With the best wishes for yourselves and the organization to which you belong.

We remain most respectfully yours.
WILLIAM H. REED, JULIA L. REED.

—Miss Maude and Master Oliver Tinkham will enjoy their summer drives behind an Indian trick pony recently presented to them.

—A cooking exhibition with the use of Rex wheat will be given at the store of J. G. Worster & Co. June 1, 2 and 3. The public are invited to be present and try some of the preparations from it.

—Mrs. George T. Rand and Mrs. I. P. Morrison, are to open a summer boarding house at Centre Hill, Nantasket Beach.

—John White celebrated his eighteenth birthday, Wednesday. He was presented with an elegant safety bicycle by Mr. Wendall Phillips.

—Frank Hobart of Sanford, Me. was in town on a visit to his grandfather, Mr. Henry Williams this week.

Lovell's Corner Happenings.

—Charles Hawes is a member of the American Black Leghorn Club, a recently organized poultry organization. He sold to a resident of Marshfield, eighteen eggs of this breed of fowl, from which sixteen chickens have just been hatched.

—Mr. Hawes takes exception to "N. M's" article on "new comers," and wishes to say that on his father's side his great-grand father was born in Weymouth, and on his mother's side he can trace his ancestry back to that much over-loaded vessel, judging from what it is said to have brought, which arrived on these shores in 1620.

—Mrs. E. E. Phillips and little daughter Nina have been visiting relatives at Somerville.

—The choir of the Porter M. E. church gave an entertainment at Holbrook, Wednesday evening. They were assisted by the Misses Fannie and Gertrude Taylor and Mrs. Edgar R. Downs.

—Herbert Atkins of Jacksonville, Ill., has been the guest of Mrs. N. T. Tirrill the past week.

—T. G. Poole will open, Monday a. m., a new grocery store on Washington street.

—Frank Poole and Eugene Hutchinson have returned from a fishing trip at Hebron, Me. They report quantities of fish and a jolly good time.

—Misses Maggie and Mary Sheehy are visiting friends at Lynn.

—Under the direction of Miss Fannie Hawes very pretty and interesting Memorial exercises, consisting of songs and recitations by the pupils, and addresses by Rev. E. E. Phillips and Chas. Hawes, were given at Holbrook school this afternoon. The pupils of this little school of primary and intermediate grades are said to do the best musical work of any primary or intermediate grades in the town.

—Rev. E. E. Phillips, our new pastor, was absent last week to attend the graduation exercises of his class at Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J. His class was the largest ever graduated from this institution and the exercises were declared to be the best ever given. We have now two graduates of this school in our town, Rev. A. A. Kidder of East Weymouth and Mr. Phillips of our own church. That "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country" is evident from the fact that we have two prophets from the land of mosquitoes, having passed by, in our choice, the famous school in Boston. But that these prophets will be successful depends largely upon those to whom they prophesy.

Braintree.

—The afternoon Whist club met and passed one of their enjoyable occasions with Miss Marion Arnold, on Monday afternoon. Miss Helen Arnold captured the first prize and Miss Mary Lane the booby.

—Wm. H. Harrison left for New York on Tuesday, for a short visit.

—T. H. Wardwell arrived home from Cleveland, Tuesday.

—The young ladies of the Thayer Academy have presented two handsome foul flags to the Academy base ball club. The flags are very elaborate affairs of orange and black silk, these being the club colors. With these symbols of enthusiasm from the girls the club will make every effort for success.

—Mrs. Dean Southworth left for Washington, D. C., Sunday evening.

—The house on Hollis avenue, owned by N. E. Hollis and formerly occupied by Geo. E. Perkins, has been painted a very pretty combination of colors. The house is also modern and attractively built.

—Saturday night an alarm of fire was given for a blaze, probably of incendiary origin, in the gravel pit near the Quincy reservoir where some thousands of old sleepers and a few flat cars are stored. The fire started in a pile of 10,000 sleepers and burned about 1500, being brought into subjection by the Braintree fire department. Old sleepers are worth about five cents apiece.

—At the grounds of the Junior Tennis club Saturday afternoon, Miss Bessie Pray and Harry Patten beat Miss Bessie Morrison and Henry Thayer, 3 to 1 in four sets of doubles.

—Frank Woodworth intends spending Saturday and Sunday with friends in Sudbury.

—The friends of the Thayer Academy base ball club feel greatly elated over their victory over the team from the Harvard Medical school, Wednesday afternoon on the common. A score of 26 to 3, in favor of the Academys was the result of a very scientifically played game on their part and another item in their brilliant season.

—A one-armed street hawker attracted quite an audience in the square at South Braintree, Wednesday evening. Having for a stand an empty carriage, after interesting the crowd by cleverly turned yarns and stories, he offered a line of silk and linen handkerchiefs for sale. At one time to awaken the interest which seemed somewhat to abate, he caught the crowd by breaking pieces of granite stones by striking them with his fist, protected only from the rough granite by a handkerchief. The show concluded as the stock was exhausted.

—Amos Woodworth is having his house painted by Joshua Penniman.

—Rev. H. S. Huntington of Milton will occupy the First Parish pulpit, Sunday, in exchange with Rev. A. A. Ellsworth.

—The handsome turnout owned by Miss Sara Shaw met with an accident Wednesday. From some cause the horse missed his footing and fell breaking the shafts in two places. Miss Shaw although somewhat agitated, courageously sprang from the carriage and held the horse until assistance arrived.

—As the result of a disorderly altercation, Thomas Dalton of Long lane (better known as Liberty street), shot John Ryan in the leg at the house of the former Thursday afternoon at 6,30 p. m. Immediately after the shooting, which is not expected to be serious, Dalton gave himself up to the authorities.

—Willie Simonds is sick with pneumonia.

—About 350 of "Braintree's 400" attended the grand vocal concert given by the Academy chorus, assisted by Miss Ella Stevens, soprano; Miss Kate Olivia Mayo, contralto; John D. Beal, tenor, Fred Congdon, basso; Edwin Gardiner, conductor, and Messrs. J. Herman Loud and Walter J. Kugler accompanists in the large hall at Thayer Academy Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The musical was in every way a great success, the audience being delighted and appreciating each choice selection of the elaborate programme. If each experiment materializes in such grand proportions as this one, the Academy Chorus have not long to wait to realize their object —a new piano for the chapel.

—Arthur Shaw, Esq., and family moved on Thursday to Mear's beach for the summer.

—James Holbrook, who has been very low, is reported as being a little better.

—Thomas Hollinshead has the lot staked out for his new house on Monatiquot Heights.

—The street department are doing very creditable work on Hollis avenue in making repairs of the hill of Monatiquot Heights. Perhaps it is not anticipating too much to chronicle that the grass plot at the junction of Hollis avenue and Ash street was improved and made a very attractive spot.

—Millard Drinkwater is happy in being the owner of a very handsome colt. Although not yet a week old $1,000 has been refused for the colt. Horsemen in this vicinity will watch the movements of the young animal with great interest.

—Mr. Herbert F. Kneeland is suffering from gastric fever, but was reported as more comfortable Thursday.

Rev. E. O. Dyer and Rev. Mr. Norton of Quincy exchanged pulpits last Sunday. Mr. Norton delivered an able discourse upon the text "Knowledge puffeth up and Love buildeth up."

—In connection with the advice that the Thayer Academy's would play the Boston Latin school nine today, was the fact that odds of 5 to 1 were offered on Thayer. It is sad that the modern youth cannot enjoy healthy sport without degrading it by gambling.

North Weymouth Gleanings.

—The postponed lecture by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will be given to-night at the Old North church. As her doctor has forbidden future lecturing, this will be the last opportunity to hear Mrs. Livermore.

—The new ball field on Sea street was the scene of the first game of ball of the season, between the North Weymouths and a picked nine. The Old Spain boys were defeated, the score being 26 and 21. Callahan, a pitcher who was on trial, did not make a very brilliant showing. A game is expected to be played Memorial Day.

—F. L. Spear has purchased the large double mansion on Pearl street, formerly the property of the late Dr. N. Q. Tirrell.

—Tuesday evening, the Pilgrim Fathers held their regular meeting, beside their regular business. Mrs. F. J. Barnes was initiated, and two applicants were made for membership.

—A great deal of the debris of the Fore River dredging is dumped near Sandy Banks.

—Good many local sports attended a cock-fight near South Weymouth, Sunday.

—Pipe has been laid about the Universalist Church to facilitate the watering of its grounds.

—The electric cars of the Manet Beach branch of Quincy and Boston Street Railway, have begun their regular trips to and from Hough's Neck.

—George Ruggles is with us again, his convalesence being complete.

—H. W. Walker, formerly with J. R. Orcutt, grocer, is now with Curtis & Pratt of Quincy.

—N. P. Keene recently procured a young porker from his son Miles, of Hingham. The pig came all the way in a bag. He was placed in a pen and left to make the best of his new home. In the morning, he was missing. Search was made everywhere, yet was fruitless. In a day or two word came from Hingham that the recreant pig was back in the litter it belonged to. Who says the pig is a stupid animal?

—To-night the Century Club holds its last spring debate. It takes place at the hall, and during the evening refreshments will be served.

—Avery Ward left New York on the Allen Line Steamer Nebraska, Thursday, his destination being Windsor, England, as stated in last week's Gazette.

—Our cemetery is our pride. We ask visitor's attention to-morrow to the improvements made, and to its general good condition.

—To-morrow is the day of all days for the surviving few of the bloody strife between north and south. Each and every one should turn out and inspect our failing veterans, and do everything possible to cheer them, as they march to pay their yearly tribute to those who were their comrades in battle.

—E. Frank Beals will leave on Monday for his Milwaukee home, and will take along with him, for a short visit, E. S. Beals and wife and Alexis Torrey and wife.

South Weymouth Pickings.

—The postponed lecture by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will be given to-night at the Old North church. As her doctor has forbidden future lecturing, this will be the last opportunity to hear Mrs. Livermore.

—An owner is wanted by officer Bailey for a jug of whiskey found in the woods in the rear of G. C. Torrey's land on Central street, Monday afternoon.

—The Directors of the Weymouth A. & I. Society have given instructions to the officers to break up the congregation which assembles from Sunday to Sunday on their grounds. Last Sunday afternoon, officers Allen and Caldwell made a descent upon a dozen or more persons whom they suspected of being engaged in some unlawful game. The officers did not secure evidence sufficient to convict, but took the names of the parties and warned them to desist from assembling on the grounds.

—Thomas J. Nash, of Nash's Corner has on his estate a pear tree which is known to be 175 years old and probably is over 200 years old.

—The Improvement Association was organized ten years ago last Wednesday, May 27.

—The idea has been proposed, and it seems a reasonable one, that permits might be granted to responsible persons to ride bicycles on sidewalks. Such licenses to be revocable for violation of the conditions on which they were granted.

—Arrangements have been made whereby Miss E. S. Tobey, the ex-president of the W. C. T. U., will give a Bible reading in the village June 17 (afternoon and evening) on "The Higher Christian Life." Miss Tobey is a great favorite, and we bespeak for her a large audience.

—Last Friday night at C. H. Tinkham's store twelve bicyclists organized the Norfolk Bicycle Club with J. Howard Field captain; J. H. Allen, lieutenant, and Walter L. Bates, secretary and treasurer. The first run of the new club will be to Auburn dale tomorrow. They meet in Columbian square at 7.45 a. m.

—The directors of the Weymouth A. and I. Society voted to put up around their grounds about 400 feet of fence which had fallen down. They have had four different meetings to do the work. The largest attendance was eight. They have finished the fence, having built much of it new. President Poole had charge of the job.

—Rev. Elmer Hewitt, who is 86 years of age, recently officiated at the funeral of Charles Meserve of North Abington who was 83 years old. Mr. Meserve was a prominent member of the Universalist denomination and an intimate friend of Rev. Mr. Hewitt.

—The committee of arrangements have secured Fogg's Opera House for Tuesday evening, June 9, for the annual supper of the Improvement Association. On account of the large membership, tickets—two to each member—will be for sale to members only. The usual programme of music and post-prandial speeches will be presented. Distinguished guests from abroad are expected. Strawberries and cream, rolls and coffee, ice cream and cake and fruit will constitute the bill of fare. Those who owe the treasurer more than two dollars will not be considered members. Any one who may wish to join may do so by handing his name and one dollar to the committee of arrangements, Edgar R. Downs, Howard H. Joy, Walter L. Bates.

UNION CHURCH (South Weymouth). Morning service at 10.30, preaching by Rev. Mr. Livingston of North Abington; evening at 7.30, lecture by Rev. J. L. Smallwood, the celebrated colored orator of Virginia, subject "The American Negro." Collection for Industrial Collegiate Institute, at Franklin, Virginia.

—The sale of Louis A. Cook's house lots is to be held Saturday, June 27, at 4.30 p. m., if not stormy, otherwise on the next pleasant Saturday. Among the recent estimates is noticed Henry B. Reed, $72.99; J. L. Newton, $123.45; Mrs. F. W. Loud, $182; Jason Farrington, $250; J. Austin Deane, $430; Hon. Elijah Morse, $275.

—The choir of the Porter M. E. Church, Lovell's Corner, F. Dexter Pratt, leader, assisted by Mr. Joseph Taylor, the Misses Taylor and Mrs. E. R. Downs, gave an entertainment at the Methodist Church, Holbrook, Wednesday evening. The programme consisted of songs, duets, quartettes, choruses, readings, and the comic opera, "O. P. R. A.; or, the Trials of a Manager." The church was well filled and the entertainment yielded a handsome profit to the Ladies' Society, under whose auspices it was given.

—At the Second Church, Wednesday evening, the Golden Rule Club gave a patriotic entertainment of war-songs, tableaux, etc. The members of the club were assisted by Miss Ella M. Bissell, contralto, Miss Annie Louise Tirrell, elocutionist, and an efficient orchestra.

—By special invitation, Hon. Elijah A. Morse delivered his lecture "Life in Washington" in Fogg's Opera House, Tuesday evening before an audience which completely filled the hall. The address was replete with historical and biographical information and personal reminiscences. The speaker described some of his colleagues in the House of Representatives, their sharp verbal combats on the floor and the witty stories of the cloak rooms. He was listened to with the closest attention by the large audience even to the smallest of the embryo congressmen who occupied front seats in the gallery. John A. Fogg, Esq., presided, and entertained Mr. Morse during his stay in town. Of the musical entertainment it is sufficient to say that it was by the American band; and Mrs. Fannie Sprague Foster, soprano, and Miss Annie Deane, contralto, with Miss Jennie L. Hocking, as accompanist. This is a sufficient guarantee of its excellence.

—Chicken-pox has been quite prevalent among the school-children, and has attacked some of a larger growth.

—By a somewhat singular coincidence, every person who has held the office of president or secretary of the Improvement Association since its organization ten years ago has had a piazza added to his house this spring.

—Horse-back riding has grown in favor since C. A. Hunt imported that Tennessee saddle-horse. Several others have followed his example. The next thing will be an organization to encourage this mode of exercise which the governor of the state and the mayor of Boston practise.

East Weymouth Briefs.

—The postponed lecture by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will be given to-night at the Old North church. As her doctor has forbidden future lecturing, this will be the last opportunity to hear Mrs. Livermore.

—Mechanics Temple of Honor, No. 25, will work the first degree this Friday evening. The Temple will meet every Friday during the year excepting the first Friday in the month.

—Walter Dizer and family are out for the summer.

—The Cantata of the Months and Seasons will be repeated in the vestry of the M. E. church to-night, under the management of Miss M. Abbie Rogers.

—There will be two games of base ball on the Lake street grounds Saturday. At 9 a. m. the Marions will play the Colored Resolutes, of South Boston, and at 3.00 p. m. the King Phillips of Rockland.

—An alarm was rung in last Friday evening for a brush fire near the residence of T. H. Emerson on East street. The fire was under control when the department arrived.

—Mrs. Thomas B. Holbrook, of Waterman, Ill., is visiting friends in this place.

—John Carroll has had placed upon his lot in the Catholic Cemetery, a handsome Memorial stone. This was designed and executed by John Kelley, of the Weymouth Monumental Works, and being designed for the lot it is in excellent proportion. This is the first one of its kind in this cemetery and therefore presents an imposing appearance.

—A gang of hoodlums, passing through Grant street, Tuesday night, assailed the residence of W. T. Sloan with a volley of stones.

—Oliver B. Griffin, a popular brakeman on the South Shore branch of the O.C.R.R., is enjoying a two week's vacation at his old home in Lanesville, Mass.

—The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. James Matherson next Tuesday afternoon.

—James L. Bates Camp, 36, S. of V., held a practice drill in Reynolds hall, Tuesday evening.

—Mrs. John N. Jackson of Boston is visiting the family of W. M. Marden.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Cunningham, who have been visiting W. M. Marden, will move to Weymouth Landing and go to housekeeping in a few weeks.

—The Loyal Legion will meet Monday afternoon.

—The Reform club gave a pleasing entertainment in Temperance hall, Wednesday evening before a large audience. The temperance drama "Fruits of the Wine Cup" was presented with the following cast, assisted by Arthur Welsh, harmonica soloist:—Mr. Hamilton, Chas. Cram; Mr. Charles Bailey, N. W. Sweeting; Mr. Charles Bailey, Jr., H. B. Prouty; Andrews, W. A. Deere; Speculation, F. L. Loring; Jeremiah, A. E. Lucas; Miss Kate Hamilton, Ada White; Mary, Clara Gardner, Sarah, Sadie White; Flora, Marion Lovell.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Raymond have gone to Cottage City for a week.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Barton of Boston have been the guests of Henry B. Raymond the past week.

—Mrs. Daniel Lamson is visiting the family of her son Ernest, at Abington.

—The East Weymouth Cemetery never presented a more attractive appearance than it does at the present time. It displays the careful attention given it by S. S. Marden.

—Mrs. Cutter of New Gloucester is visiting her son, E. G. Cutter.

—The family of Stephen A. R. Pratt has gone to the summer cottage at Kenberma, Point Allerton, for four weeks.

—Confectioner, Thomas A. Boyle has added to the attractiveness of his establishment by the external application of a coat of paint.

—Grant street has been put in first class condition this week and presents a much neater appearance than before. If the loose cobble stones had been picked up on the sidewalk the job would have been finished in a most satisfactory manner.

—Mrs. Henry Young of Wellesley has been visiting friends in this place the past week.

—James L. Bates Camp, 36, S. of V., attended Memorial services at South Weymouth, Sunday.

—The Reform Club held a most interesting meeting Sunday evening, Pres. Porter presiding. Stirring addresses were made by that pioneer temperance worker and evangelist, Mrs. S. Louise Barton, Rev. Mr. Phillips of Lovells Corner, Alex. Andrews and others. Miss Ada White presided at the organ.

—Rev. Daniel W. Waldron of Boston was the guest of John P. Lovell, Tuesday.

—Mrs. Charles H. Pratt of Grant street has been quite sick with La Grippe.

—Ernest Lamson, formerly of this place, but who now resides at Abington, has been sadly afflicted by the loss of his wife, a most estimable woman, who died last week of lockjaw, resulting from an attack of La Grippe. She leaves several small children.

—Job Young has been granted a pension of $12 per month.

—The cantata of the "Months and Seasons," will be repeated by Miss M. Abbie Rogers, in the vestry of the M. E. Church, to-night.

—"Many hands make light work," was illustrated when a number of enthusiastic workers, on Wednesday, took hold of the park in Jackson square, and transformed it into "a thing of beauty" which may be "a joy forever."

—N. D. Canterbury and John A. Raymond are off for a short trip to New York and Philadelphia.

—Wessagusset Association of Good Fellows initiated four members Wednesday night and indulged in a strawberry festival.

—Philander Thompson and wife of Middleboro are visiting John A. Raymond.

North Weymouth Heights Items.

—The engagement of Miss Annie M. Thompson, daughter of Samuel Thompson, to Mr. Elliot L. Lambert of New York city is announced.

—The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting with Mrs. Stephen Bicknell next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

—Friday night some of our public spirited citizens cleaned out our fountain which for some time has been so clogged up with leaves, etc., that the overflow could not run through its regular outlet but over the sides.

—Walter Thompson celebrated his 21st birthday Tuesday, and among other presents was an elegant gold watch from his brother L. S. Thompson.

—The reason that our local fire company did not get the first stream on the fire on Essex street was owing to the lack of hose, there being but five hundred feet, and it would require at least three or four hundred feet more to reach the blaze. With the present amount a few of the houses in the village cannot be reached, and if a fire should break out in one of them we would have to wait for some other company to get here and lend us some.

—Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's lecture which was postponed on account of sickness, will be at the Old North church tonight. Subject, "A Dream of Tomorrow." Mrs. Livermore's doctor forbids future lecturing and this will be the last time to hear her.

—Augustus Ellis of Boston is preparing to occupy his summer residence on King Oak hill.

—The Ladies Missionary Society met with Miss Margie Blanchard Wednesday afternoon.

WESTERN WOMEN LEAD.

THEIR STATUS IS HIGH AT THE CAPITAL CITY.

Margaret Manton Gives Some Interesting Gossip About the Harrisons, Mrs. Hearst, Mrs. Stanford, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Fuller and Others.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—The women who are leading Washington society this winter are not witty Vassar graduates nor learned sisters from Wellesley; nor do they come from the classic slopes of MRS. M'KEE.

Beacon Hill. Even New York women, who are supposed to know all about social matters, and who claim social leadership as an inherent right wherever they go, are to a certain extent in the background. The woman who stands well to the fore, and who holds the place with a grace and ease that astonishes the old time leaders, is one who comes from beyond the Mississippi. The general impression seems to be that this state of affairs has been brought about by the advent of western women in the White House. This may have had some influence. But the careful observer of the situation will conclude that it is a clear case of the survival of the fittest.

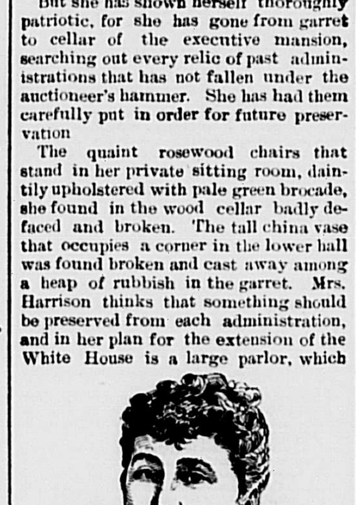

The women from the west who are foremost in capital circles this winter are not only handsome and intelligent, but they are educated and cultured. They know how to dress and how to entertain. And there is an open handed, broad gauge hospitality which the western woman introduces at her entertainments that is altogether charming.

MRS. DAVIS.

Mrs. Harrison, although she was born in Ohio and lived a great many years in Indiana, is hardly a typical western woman. There is a certain constraint in her manner that in a stranger's eyes savors of stiffness which is not at all western.

But she has shown herself thoroughly patriotic, for she has gone from garret to cellar of the executive mansion, searching out every relic of past administrations that has not fallen under the auctioneer's hammer. She has had them carefully put in order for future preservation.

The quaint rosewood chairs that stand in her private sitting room, daintily upholstered with pale green brocade, she found in the wood cellar badly defaced and broken. The tall china vase that occupies a corner in the lower hall was found broken and cast away among a heap of rubbish in the garret. Mrs. Harrison thinks that something should be preserved from each administration, and in her plan for the extension of the White House is a large parlor, which she proposes shall be called the historical room, in which these relics shall be kept.

Mrs. McKee, who was born in Indiana, is fond of gayety. Although the mother of two babies she is barely twenty-two years old. She is well remembered in Indianapolis as a leader of jollities. She is in good spirits perennially. Occasionally they overflow. They did one day on Pennsylvania avenue, when she heard a hand organ playing a lively waltz. She checked almost immediately the involuntary dance step, saying as she did so, "It's no use. I can't keep my feet still when I hear a waltz."

Mrs. Russell Harrison is not yet 20. She is a Nebraska girl, the daughter of ex-Senator Saunders, from that state. During her father's residence in Washington she was a school girl, and therefore this is really her first season. Young Mrs. Harrison is a very pretty woman. She is a blonde of the Dresden china type—all pink and white. She is fond of wearing silvery, gauze-like materials, which give her the appearance of a fairy.

Mrs. Senator Davis, of St. Paul, Minn., is said to be the handsomest woman in Washington. Mrs. Davis is of the Juno type. She is five feet and seven inches in height and magnificently formed. Her eyes are gray and very large. Her lips and cheeks are vivid scarlet, and she has shining red-brown hair. Mrs. Davis designs all of her own costumes. She appeared at one of her recent receptions in a classic Grecian drapery of white silk brocade, with a gold fillet about her head and glittering gold snakes wound about her arms. Her appearance is not more charming than her manner. She is always pleasant and always cordial, and there is something sympathetic about her.

Mrs. Senator Hearst, of California, is celebrated for being the most elaborate entertainer at the capital. This season her house is closed on account of her husband's serious illness. But usually her home is filled with guests, and she maintains what more nearly approaches a salon than any other woman in this country. She has during the past few seasons presented a number of beautiful girls from the Pacific coast to Washington society, all of whom have been welcomed as valuable acquisitions. Mrs. Hearst is yet in the prime of life, a handsome woman, whose smile is always ready and whose welcome to her magnificently appointed house is always kindly.

Another type of the California woman is Mrs. Leland Stanford. Her manner is very quiet, but her hospitality is as genuine as that of Mrs. Hearst. Mrs. Stanford is a woman who is very much interested in her less fortunate sisters. Many a struggling journalist or artist who has gone to Washington for the purpose of making a reputation and a living owes her success to the kindness and friendship of Mrs. Stanford. She is not a woman who follows closely the caprices of fashion. I have seen her at receptions more than once wearing a gown that was in mode some years ago. But she is always handsomely dressed and has magnificent jewels. It gives her more pleasure, however, to render assistance to a woman who is struggling for a livelihood than to consider the cut of her gown.

Among the ladies of the cabinet there are three who come from the west, though none of them was born there. Mrs. Miller, the wife of the attorney general, whose home for some years has been in Indiana, is a native of Kentucky. Mrs. Noble, whose present home is St. Louis, was born in the far south. And Mrs. Rusk, wife of the agricultural secretary from Wisconsin, was born in the state of New York. So that these ladies, although their husbands are representatives of the west, can hardly be called western women.

The wife of Chief Justice Fuller, of the supreme court, claims Chicago as her birthplace. She was married there twenty-five years ago, and Chicago has always been her home until her husband was appointed to his present position. Mrs. Fuller may be properly called a remarkable woman. She is certainly an interesting one. She is a woman of affairs—domestic affairs. Socially she is clever and bright, and she is vastly popular. But her home, her husband and her family are foremost in her mind perpetually. While they are in a satisfactory condition she enjoys discharging her social obligations, but in the case of illness in her home, no matter how slight, social considerations are relegated to the background, and she becomes the careful nurse and sympathetic comforter. She does all of her own marketing. Her carriage is well known at the old Central market. She gives a reason for this. She says her children—they are grown children—require wholesome food, and that while it might be possible for another to procure it, there can be no question of doubt about it if she procures it herself. Further, she is a counsellor often sought by her husband, and not on minor questions. The chief justice gives to her judgment on grave matters the highest consideration.

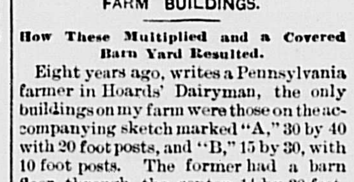

Besides these there are the wife of the recently appointed Judge Brown from Detroit; Mrs. Senator Mitchell, from Oregon, and Mrs. Senator Carey, of Washington.

MARGARET MANTON.

FARM BUILDINGS.

How These Multiplied and a Covered Barn Yard Resulted.

Eight years ago, writes a Pennsylvania farmer in Hoards' Dairyman, the only buildings on my farm were those on the accompanying sketch marked "A," 30 by 40 with 20 foot posts, and "B," 15 by 30, with 10 foot posts. The former had a barn floor through the center 14 by 30 feet, and was elevated on a stone wall on three sides, high enough for stables underneath. The latter was separated from the former by the entrance gate to the barn yard, which was simply an inclosure surrounded by a board fence seven feet high, and sloped away to the south, and was admirably arranged so that all the liquids could run away nicely, leaving the yard always dry. The same autumn I added the building "C," 20 by 30 feet, to have room for vehicles, tools, and some fodder and hay. One-half of this has since been made into a silo as indicated on the sketch.

The following spring I saw so many dollars going down the slope in the golden liquid that I determined to make a basin of the clay soil of which the yard was formed. This I did by making it about thirty inches deeper in middle than at edges and a regular dish shape. At the same time I found a necessity for more stable room, and a little later erected the shed "D," 16 feet by 64 feet, divided into six box stalls, with one entry on the south side.

As more room was needed in a year or two, the buildings "E," 24 feet by 32 feet for pig pens, and "F," 16 feet by 20 feet, with posts 24 feet, for tools underneath and fodder above, were erected.

This, it will be observed, nearly surrounded my barn yard with buildings, except on the east and a small section on the south and west, and although all roofs were spouted to carry away the water, we began to experience the serious difficulty of too much water. The yard held all the water that fell in it and the full length of high top rubber boots was necessary to enable us to get about. As a temporary relief we had to cut a channel out one side of our dish and let the golden liquid flow away again. It began to dawn upon me that a covered barn yard would be a good thing, and as the farm was becoming more productive and more room necessary—barn floor space being especially deficient—the following plan was resorted to: The space marked "G," 42 feet by 50 feet, was covered by a barn, with posts 20 feet. This barn was set on sixteen posts of round white oak about fourteen inches in diameter, mounted on stone pedestals and high enough so that the threshing floor came level with the old barn floor and in line with it. This increased our threshing floor to 72 feet in length and covered a large area of the yard. This seems to meet the required want. It furnishes a cool place in summer and a warm place in cooler weather, and protects the manure from bleaching rains and bleaching suns.

Steel pens are destroyed by the acid in the ink. If an old nail or old steel pen is put in the ink the acid therein will exhaust itself on them, and pens in daily use will remain in good condition much longer.

GLOAMING.

The setting sun has dropt below the sandy reach;
The laggard rooks come home, belated, from the beach;
Here in the garden beds the flowers close their eyes,
And twilight's soft wan mist across the woodland lies.

Oh, is not this most sweet of any time or hour,
After the garish day, and ere the night clouds lower?
'Tis as though Nature's self should pause upon her way,
Gray clad and pilgrim like, to meditate and pray.

TWO NANCY LEES.

In the month of July, 1857, I ran away from a British ship which entered the port of Madras. I was a boy of 14, a runaway to sea, and captain and mates had done their very best to take the romance out of me. They had succeeded so well that I slipped ashore determined to die of starvation before I would return to a life on the deep. No effort was put forth to capture me, and two weeks later, when I sat in the shade of a wall one day hungry and penniless and ready to give up, an English woman halted before me and began to question me. She was a small, slim woman about forty years of age, quick of speech and movement, and I got the idea at once that she was a sea captain's wife. I was not far out, as she proved to be a sea captain's widow, and was in command of a brig trading with the east coast of Ceylon. She happened to be in want of another hand, and after being told what I could do she made a proposition that I accepted.

I found the brig to be called the Orient. She was small, but almost new, and a rapid sailer. The crew consisted of an English mate, two Norwegians, a French boy who had run from his ship, and myself. Mrs. Sweet, the captain, stood her watch, and this gave the mate himself, a man and a boy in his watch, while she had a man and a boy only, though the cook had to turn out in her watch if required. The latter was a full blooded negro, big and powerful, and sailor enough to steer or go aloft, Mrs. Sweet, as all agreed, being able to navigate the brig anywhere, and being thoroughly posted in every detail of the ship's work.

I saw on the brig's deck, almost as soon as I set foot aboard, a nine pounder mounted on a carriage, and later on I ascertained that she carried a supply of small arms, but I gave the matter little thought and asked no questions. We got away next day after I joined, and we had a fine run down the coast to Cape Karikal, from which point we laid our course to the southeast. We had crossed the gulf of Mancar, which separates the island of Ceylon from the southern end of Hindoostan, when the wind fell to a calm one evening at 8 o'clock, and all night long we rolled about without making the least progress. Next morning there was a heavy mist on the water until after sunrise, and it gradually burned away without bringing the breeze we hoped for.

When the horizon was clear we saw a bark rigged craft of three times our size lying about three miles north of us. She had come down on the last of the wind, probably bound through the straits, and the currents had set to the eastward during the night. Those were suspicious days, but the bark looked to be an honest Englishman, and we gave her no attention until about midafternoon. Then the French boy, who was aloft, reported that she had lowered two boats. The glass was sent up to him, and he soon made out that the boats were being manned by armed men, and dark skinned fellows at that. This looked as if the bark had fallen into piratical hands, for no trader could have any honest purpose in arming his boats.

They took their time about it, and finally headed in our direction. Had there been any wind they would doubtless have tried to lay us aboard. As soon as it was seen that the boats were headed for us Mrs. Sweet called us all aft and announced that the stranger was a pirate who meant our capture and destruction. She was a little paler than usual, but spoke in a low and even voice, and did not seem to be a bit frightened. She said it was a case where we must fight for our lives. They would cut our throats if we surrendered, and could do no more if we fought to the last. She seemed to accept it as a matter of course that we would fight, and she was the first to lend a hand to clear away the gun. The two boys of us brought up the muskets and loaded them, distributed the pikes along the rail, and then passed up shot and cartridge for the big gun. Everything had been made ready for just such an emergency. There were thirty solid nine pound shot and twenty-two loaded shell in the magazine, as well as about thirty cartridges containing the proper quantity of powder. As I afterward learned, all had been purchased at the government arsenal in Madras.

We were as ready as we could be before the boats were pulled a mile from the bark. The mate loaded the gun with a shell, and placed two others and several stands of grape near at hand. Our brig lay broadside to the north, headed to the east. The boats must therefore pull bow on to us until close at hand, even if the plan was to separate and board from different points. This gave us a big advantage, as we could all lay along the port rail. The gun was wheeled over, the decks cleared of every obstruction, and then we were ready. Mrs. Sweet had a doubled barreled English fowling piece loaded with buckshot. She was nearest the stern. The rest of us had government muskets. I was pretty nervous, knowing what was at stake, and she noticed this, and kindly chided me, saying that I must take good aim, keep cool, and that we should surely beat them off. She called the French boy over and told him the same, but there was no need of speaking to the others. They were as cool as if it were an every day matter, and I heard the mate say to the cook that he was afraid the fellows would back out.

The boats came on to within half a mile of us and then stopped. Some sort of a signal had been run up on the bark—probably a notification that we were ready for a stout resistance. They could have seen us preparing by aid of the glass. There was a consultation of about five minutes, and then came a cheer as the boats moved forward. Mrs. Sweet looked over at the mate, and he nodded his head, sighted his gun, and after a long moment applied the port fire. There might have been some luck about it though he was an old gunner, but his shell struck the eastern most boat plumb on the bows, exploded with a loud report, and she was wiped out so completely that we could not even see the fragments. I believe that every man in that boat was killed. This ought to have discouraged the other, but it did not. She was pulled for us as fast as possible, and the stand of grape fired at her went too high.

After that discharge we began to blaze away with the muskets, and I hit one of the rowers and almost stopped the boat for a moment. While the mate and negro worked to load the big gun the other five of us banged away, and we hit somebody at almost every shot. The boat came on, however, the wounded cursing and the unharmed cheering, and was within 150 feet of our side when the nine pounder roared again. She had fired a shell plump into the boat. It had acted as a solid shot and gone through her, killing and wounding and smashing, and when the smoke blew away only three men were swimming away on the surface. These we ordered aboard and made secure at once. The bark dropped another boat, but after coming half way it returned. About noon she got a riffle of wind which did not reach us, and made off to the west to be seen no more.

When we came to question the prisoners, who were lusty looking cut throats, we found that they belonged to the Maldive islands, around in the Indian ocean. They made no bones about admitting that they meant to capture us, and were surly and defiant over their repulse. They would not give us the name of the bark, and even after she was out of sight they boasted that she would return soon to release them. At sundown we got the breeze and stood away on our course. That night, during the mate's watch, the pirates disappeared. All knew where they went, but no one asked any questions. The two boats contained fully two dozen of them, and their loss must have sadly crippled the bark and changed her plans.

About three years later than the date given at the opening of this sketch, I shipped aboard of a British ship called the Swallow to make a voyage from Bombay up the Persian gulf and back. She was an old craft and a poor sailer, and her crew of twelve men was made up of four or five nationalities. I remember there were two Kanakas or Sandwich islanders, one Lascar, a negro or two, and the others were American, English and Dutch. We had scarcely left Bombay when the captain was taken sick with fever. His name was Aldrich, and his wife, who was a woman of thirty, always sailed with him. She now took command in a general way, and this to the satisfaction of both mates, though both were thorough sailors. I heard one of them say that she could take an observation or work a dead reckoning, and I saw from the orders she gave that she knew all about a ship.

We had good weather and made good progress until after we were above Muscat, in the Bay of Ormuz. Then one forenoon we got a squall which did not last fifteen minutes, but which brought down our fore and main-to' gallant masts and carried away a sail or two. There was only a light breeze after the squall had passed, and we were lying to and hard at work, when an Arabian dhow of about two hundred tons burden came stealing down the coast. We were within four miles of the rocky and mountainous shore, but she was two miles inside of us. She was no sooner made out than the first mate became very anxious, and Mrs. Aldrich was sent for to come on deck. She took a good look at the stranger through the glass and queried of the mate:

"Can we depend on the crew to fight?"

"I hope so, ma'am," he replied.

"Have them come aft."

All moved aft, and I can remember through all the long years just how she looked and every word she said. She had a worried, anxious look, and no wonder, and there was a trembling in her voice as she said:

"Men, you know that your captain is very sick. Yonder comes a pirate, if there ever was one. If he captures us those who live through the fight will go into the interior as slaves or worse. If we are all agreed to fight we can beat him off. What do you say?"

"We'll fight to the last!" shouted one, and the cry was taken up by all.

"Thank God!" she fervently exclaimed. "Give him a brave fight and no one can be blamed if we are defeated. Sooner than fall into his hands I will blow the old ship skyhigh and all of us with her."

We had no cannon, but we had fifteen muskets, a lot of cavalry sabers, and the captain had not dodged about those waters with his eyes shut. He had two or three years before purchased a dozen hand grenades or stink pots, such as are used by the Chinese. These were brought up with the rest and found to be fused and in good condition. They weighed about two pounds apiece and each was inclosed in a net, so that it could be tossed quite a distance. We loaded our muskets, took our stations and were as ready as we could be. The captain's wife alternated between the deck and the cabin. He was out of his head, which was the better for him, as she had his revolver for use.

The dhow sneaked along until nearly opposite us. All work had been suspended aloft, and she must have known by this that we were ready for her; but she came on just the same. And no wonder. One of the men went aloft with the glass, and he made out two guns on her deck and a perfect swarm of men. She was doing a bold thing—run us aboard in broad daylight. She would not use her guns, fearing that they would be heard and bring us assistance; but if that mob ever gained our decks we were gone. We lay with our head to the northwest, so she would pass our port quarter first. Here two of the strongest men were placed with the grenades, and two of us with muskets were between them. The others were placed to fire over the stern.

Down came the dhow, foot by foot, with never a cheer from the crowd of cutthroats on her decks. There was a menace in their silence, but it had no effect upon us. We were determined to fight, and to fight to the last. I got the first shot, and knocked over a man on her forecastle, and then all began to blaze away. She did not fire in return, but forged up on our quarters, and I could see fifty Arabs, each one with a crease, crowding against the rail to be ready to board.

"Now, heave!" yelled one of the sailors with the bombs, and both lighted the fuses and heaved away.

Before we could tell what damage had been done the dhow was alongside. She threw her grapnel, but did not catch, and she rubbed her whole length and went ahead. As we saw her failure we blazed away again with the muskets, and every ball found a man. She sailed like a witch, and before she could be checked was a cable's length ahead. She had just put her helm over when there was an explosion, followed by a great sheet of flame, and we saw that she was hard hit. Confusion reigned from stem to stern in a moment, and we added to it by peppering away at fair range. All ablaze within five minutes she fell off, headed for shore, and was run on a reef about a mile away.

We saw some save themselves by boats and rafts, being swept into the shore by the tide, but it was afterward learned that upward of forty-five men were killed or drowned, and that the loss of the dhow broke up a bad gang of pirates. Mrs. Aldrich was on deck through it all, emptying the revolver into the crowd as the dhow passed us, and when all was over she went down to her husband with face only a little whiter and mouth more firmly set. She did not betray her womanly weakness until she came to thank us. Then she broke down and cried like a—well, just like a woman.—Reminiscences of an Old Mariner in Hartford Courant.

Some Uses for Borax.

Sprinkle places infested by ants with borax and you will soon be rid of them.

Blankets and furs put away well sprinkled with borax and done up air tight will never be troubled with moths.

A little borax put in the water before washing red or red bordered tablecloths or napkins will prevent their fading.

Ringworms will yield to borax treatment. Apply a strong solution three times a day; also dust on the fine dry powder very often.—Exchange.

Woman's Worst Enemy.

The worst physical enemy woman has ever had has been the narrowness of life which gave her so little to think of that she had endless time for worry. She gains in physical force with every step she takes toward intellectuality and spirituality. Nor does she harden her heart toward humanity and despise the home. The whole question of the home, instead of being ignored, is being treated with scientific care and unsparing devotion.—The Chautauquan.

People in the country who are annoyed by flies should remember that clusters of clover, if hung in a room and left to dry and shed their perfume through the air, will drive away more flies than sticky saucers of molasses and other fly traps and fly papers can ever collect.

A Pleasing Sense

Of health and strength renewed and of ease and comfort follows the use of Syrup of Figs, as it acts in harmony with nature to effectually cleanse the system when costive or bilious. For sale in 50c. and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists.

Good and Reliable.

A good and reliable family medicine is Sulphur Bitters. Every spring for six years I have been troubled with boils. Since I began using Sulphur Bitters, I have not had a single one. You can rely on Sulphur Bitters every time.—Editor Weekly News.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists.

La Grippe Again.

During the epidemic of la grippe last season, Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, proved to be the best remedy. Reports from the many who used it confirm this statement. They were not only quickly relieved, but the disease left no bad after results. We ask you to give this remedy a trial and we guarantee that you will be satisfied with results, or the purchase price will be refunded. It has no equal in la grippe, or any throat, chest, or lung trouble. Trial bottles free at the drug stores of A. M. Batchelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, E. Weymouth. Large bottles, 50c. and $1.00.

Startling Facts.

The American people are rapidly becoming a race of nervous wrecks, and the following suggests the best remedy: Alphonso Hempfling, of Butler, Pa., swears that when his son was speechless from St. Vitus' dance Dr. Miles' great Restorative Nervine cured him. Mrs. J. R. Miller, of Valpariso, and J. D. Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., each gained 20 pounds of flesh from taking it. Mrs. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., was cured of 40 to 50 convulsions a day, and much headache, dizziness, backache and nervous prostration by one bottle. Trial bottles, and fine book of marvelous cures, free at A. M. Bachelder & Co.'s, who recommends and guarantees this unequaled remedy.

FARM AND GARDEN.

OBSERVATIONS WORTHY OF CONSIDERATION IN RURAL AFFAIRS.

A Poultry House That Consists of a Two Story Upright and Two Wings Built by an Enthusiastic Poultryman of New York State.

The accompanying cut represents a southeastern view of the main building of Mr. Willis Clark's poultry yards, Wyandotte, N. Y. This building furnishes the winter quarters, which consist of a two story upright and two wings—total length, 80 feet; upright, 16 by 20 feet; wings, each 12 by 32 feet; on stone foundation, boarded with rough boards first, then covered with tarred paper, and again with inch pine siding (matched), the whole being tastily painted, and costing about $600. The building stands on a tableland facing square south.

The building is divided into ten pens, each 8 by 9½ feet, separated by wire netting attached to baseboards 2 feet high. The feed is kept in the front portion of the upright, and is fed on the floor of the alley (2½ by 80 feet), water being also set in the alley, thus preventing its overturn or waste of food by trampling. The fowls feed through spaces between ⅝-inch iron rods, set 3 inches apart, about 18 inches high, above which wire netting completes the division between the pens and alley to the roof.

POULTRY HOUSE WITH WINGS.

Mr. Clark claims no originality in the construction of the nests or other furniture, except that to circumvent "egg eaters" he sometimes closes his nests and compels the culprits to lay in nail kegs, at about one-third of the distance from the bottom of which he builds the nests. This has proven effectual when all other means have failed. All furniture is portable, and can be carried through the door leading to the alley, taken out doors and cleansed by scalding, whitewashing or painting with crude petroleum, which he obtains from oil wells only six miles away at a nominal price. The second story of upright is used as a storeroom for coops, feed, road dust, etc., through the winter, and for hatching purposes in the spring, for which he always trusts to "mother hen," with all her faults, his room, 16 by 20, easily accommodating fifty sitters. The foregoing cut and description are reproduced for our readers from The American Poultry Yard.

Applying Commercial Fertilizers.

A correspondent of The New York World writes: My plan in the garden, especially with all small crops like lettuce, onions and this class, is to prepare the soil in good tilth ready for the seed and then scatter the fertilizer broadcast as evenly as is possible. Then even the surface with a good steel rake; work the fertilizer well into the soil. With all this class of plants the fertilizer needs to be near the surface in order to benefit them. With cabbage, tomatoes and all the class of larger vegetable plants make the place for the plants, using a dibble or garden trowel. Put in the fertilizer and stir it in well with the soil and then set in the plants. With sweet corn, potatoes and this class of plants prepare the soil and mark out the furrows ready for the seed. Drop the fertilizer where the seed is to be planted, stir into the soil, then plant and cover the seed. Generally this will be found better, especially with potatoes, than to wait until the plants come up and then apply commercial fertilizers.

A Few Sheep Wrinkles.

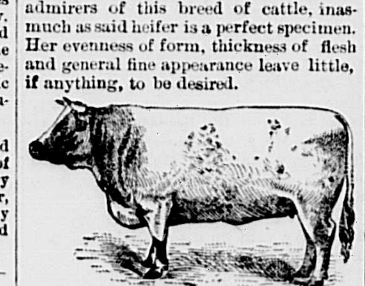

Northwest Stockman discourses as follows: Old, broken mouthed ewes are dear at any price. If they cannot be sold to the butcher feed them to the crows in the fall—they will get them anyhow before "the voice of the turtle is heard in the land."

All sheep are subject to both internal and external parasites. Feed them occasionally a little hardwood ashes or finely pulverized tobacco, which will free them from worms and improve their general health. Dip them thoroughly in some approved sheep dip, and there is nothing better than a preparation of tobacco.

Do not overstock; better keep too few rather than too many. If a flock of 100 sheep could be made as profitable as a flock of ten, shepherds would be clothed in purple and fine linen. Mix a little sulphur with their salt; it enriches the blood and disagrees with ticks and other parasites.

Champion Short Horn Heifer.

The portrait here presented of the short horn heifer belonging to Queen Victoria can hardly fail to interest the admirers of this breed of cattle, inasmuch as said heifer is a perfect specimen. Her evenness of form, thickness of flesh and general fine appearance leave little, if anything, to be desired.

THE QUEEN'S CHAMPION HEIFER.

Princess Josephine II, the heifer under consideration, is a roan, aged about two and three-quarter years. She took the championships of both the Birmingham and Smithfield shows.

James M. Thorburn says that the best means of improving meadows, pastures and lawns is to sow a sufficient variety of grass seeds, and suggests that a trial be made of the leading kinds in connection with timothy.
